"EGGERTINE."

It is the best, purest, and greatest bone and muscle forming food ever known, as the analytical reports of most eminent authorities prove. This during the past twenty years has been proved by thousands. It is a genuine egg food, made with fresh-laid English eggs, with whites of course, included (and NOT foreign preserved yolk of egg), with other valuable properties combined. A grand and genuine food for rearing young birds. Tins, post free, 1s. 3d.; large size, 2s. 6d. There is a saving in the larger size.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send posteard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It coutains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four week's trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us, and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of posteard.

SINGING CONTESTS.

KENTISH TOWN.

There was a good muster at the Prince of Wales, Wellesley-road, Kentish Town, N.W., on July 7th, when four pairs of Linnets went up for the handicap, and in the evening some fine singing was heard with Chaffinches, as will be seen by the winners and runners up. Score, viz., Old Boot, 5 score 6, and Reed 5—1. On July 14th we have a Goldfinch match between Mr. Baker and Pony Westmore. Birds on the nail 1.15 p.m. sharp. On July 13th, second heat Chaffinch handicap, birds (first pair) on the nail 8.30. Free Linnet handicap to follow. Room under the management of Old Joe Giddings.

BLACKBURN.

A contest was held by the Blackburn F.C. at the Cross Guns Inn, Guide, on July 6th, when 17 birds competed for three prizes. 1, Shellfield, 9-51; 2, Hunt, 8-42; 3, Holden, 7-39. The final club contest of the season will take place at the club's headquarters, the Good Samaritan Inn, Grimshaw Park, on Saturday next, when 21 prizes will be competed for, including a gold medal given by that great lover of song, Mr. D. Bentley, of Great Harwood, for the man that has made most time in the season's club singing.—Robt. Airey.

DARLINGTON C. AND B.B.F.A.

Open Linnet singing contest at the George Hotel, on Saturday, July 20th. First prize, copper kettle; on Saturday, July th. First prize, copper kettle; second prize, silver medal. First bird to be hung at 2.30 p.m. Entrance, 6d. each bird.—R. S. Black, Hon. Sec.—Advt.

LEEDS.

Usual weekly contest at the oldest bird house in Leeds, "King's Head," Shannon-street, on July 6th, when fourteen of the best sang for three good prizes, given by the landlord, Mr. J. Booth. Some good singing was heard, before a good house. 1st, Crowther; 2nd, T. Johnson; 3rd, shared by Galley and J. Nicholls. Judges, Messrs. Cooper and Towers. On July 7th, sixteen of the best birds sang. 1st, T. Summers; 2, Nicholls; 3, W. Naylor. Judges, Messrs. Cooper and Pearson.—T. Summers, Hon. Sec.

The members of the Prince Albert Linnet Association met on July 7th to compete for three good prizes, given by Mr. J. R. Saynor. There was a good attendance of visitors to hear the birds sing; twelve previous winning birds competed. Judges, T. Hineson and H. Greenwood; timekeeper, B. Jackson. 1st, Smith; 2nd, Clarke; 3rd, Chippendale.—E. Wood, Hon. Sec.

Unsual contest at the Skinners' Arms, Buslingthorpe, in which 11 of the best birds sung for three prizes, given by the landlord, Mr. A. Fishwick. Some fairly good singing was heard, and everyone was satisfied with the result. Mr. J. Neat took 1st, Mr. Whitfield 2nd, and Mr. Brook 3rd. Judges, F. Raper and J. Grainger.—F. Raper, Sec.

MARYPORT.

The Senhouse Arms Hotel Linnet Club had a good turn up for its first meeting. We sang for three prizes. 1, 3, Pickeron; 2, Clague.—J. Smith, Sec.

SHEFFIELD.

Linnet Singing Contest on July 7th, at Bird-in-Hand, Broughton Lane, Attercliffe. Thirty-one birds sang for three prizes, two minutes hanging. Soldier Jack, 69; Robinson, 63; Watson, 46. Judges, Messrs. Bollington and Headford. Club meeting at night; new members made a total of 30.—F. Watson.

A Linnet Singing Contest took place at the Don Inn, Carbrook, on July 7th, when some good singing was heard for the three prizes offered. 1, 3, Foulstone; 2, Robinson; judges, Messrs. W. and J. Blackadder.

EDINBURGH NORWICH & M.B.S.

Meeting at 142 High Street, when a lecture was delivered by Mr. E. G. Wright on the Scotch Fancy and general management of Canaries, to about 30 members and friends who accorded Mr. Wright a hearty vote of thanks for his highly instructive lecture. W. Dunlop, Sec.

ADMIRAL DUNCAN O.S. (NOTTS.)

This society held its Show of Young Canarics, also British birds, any age, on July 6th. There was not a large number of entries, owing to the disastrous breeding season. During the afternoon and evening there was a good attendance of visitors. Amongst them were Mr. W. T. Pepper, of Hull, and friends, Mr. Garton, secretary for Hyson Green O.S., and others too numerous to mention. Mr. Robt. Rhodes judged, and gave the best of satisfaction. Mr. Wm. Healey carried out the secretarial duties in a courteous and able manner. Birds deserving of special comment were Mr. G. Hill's clear buff and buff ticked, two very typical Norwich birds. Unfortunately there was no competition in the Norwich classes for Mr. G. Hill's six exhibits. Mr. J. Goode stood first in yellow dark Crests with a green bird, rather open centre, too old to do proper justice. Mr. J. Bowers second, a rather poor quality of Crest, should prove better with a moult. Mr. J. Goode won in buff dark Crests, a good radiated Crest still full of quill. Mr. J. Bowers followed closely with another nice specimen, not quite the length of front as first bird. Mr. A. Onion, jun., was first in buff light Crests with a nice silky Crest. Mr. J. Bower's second has a better crest than first, and would have won, but, unfortunately, has had its tail plucked out. Mr. J. Goode won in yellow Crestbreds with a nice heavily variegated bird. Mr. A. Onion, sen., being second with a dark capped bird not quite so good in quality. Mr. J. Goode comes to the front again with a grand green buff Crestbred, every inch a Crestbred, Norwich type, small bill, broad round entrance, with density and length of head feather, best bird of the show. Second, Mr. A. Onion, sen., with another specimen, heavily variegated, runs close to winner, but sinks in the neck. In the British section Mr. T. Harrison exhibited two grand Linnets, rich in colour, and nicely pencilled, a nice Bramblefinch, teeming with colour and quality, also a Goldfinch. Their condition reflected great credit on the owner.

FANCIERS AT CRICKET.

Windhill C.B.S. v. Wibsey C.B.S.

This match was played at Wibsey on July 6th. Windhill took first knock, and scored as follows:—Baker 2, Leeming 4, F. Drake 0, H. Bailey 6, H. Hudson 8, E. Broadley 19, H. H. Towers 2, S. Hillas, 2, J. Cook 5, R. Garnett 7, Drake, junr., 1, Alderson 0, Verity 7 not out, M. Broadley 1, extras 5, total, 69 runs. Wibsey: E. W. Johnson 0, H. Norton 0, S. Wilkinson 0, W. Sykes 0, H. Taylor 2, W. Chapman 0, C. Bastow 0, O. Waddington 2, G. Ackroyd 0, A. Hunter 1, D. Thornton 23 not out, W. Woodrow 0, S. Wilkinson, junr., 0, J. Crowther 2, extras 2; total, 32 runs. H. Taylor took 6 wickets, W. Sykes 5, and E. W. Johnson 3, for Wibsey; and E. Broadley and Baker took 6 and 7 respectively for Windhill. The style of the various batsmen and the manner in which they were out created a great deal of chaff and laughter. Messrs. Hammond and Simonett acted as umpires, and did their work in a very business-like manner. After the match the players and friends sat down to a splendid knife-and-fork tea at the "Horse and Groom" Inn, and the manner in which the plates were cleared stands as good evidence of the form in which a cricket match puts the appetites of Yorkshire fanciers. After tea a programme was got together, and songs were rendered by Messrs. H. H. Towers, W. Chapman, F. Drake, H. Bairstow, C. W. Johnson, R. Sutcliffe and W. Rimmington. Mr. E. Broadley caused much amusement by the manner in which he recited and explained how the "Shut-up Bed Walked Back Home." During the evening Mr. Fred. Hammond was called upon to say a few words, during which he thanked both societies for the entertainment provided, and spoke of the good condition of the Yorkshire Union at the present time, having 1,000 members on its books. Mr. E. W. Johnson responded to the vote of thanks on behalf of the Wibsey Society, and Mr. R. Garnett on behalf of the Windhill Society, and it was the general wish of all present to see further entertainments of the kind got up between the various societies, so that all the members of the Union should get a chance to know each other. A very enjoyable time was brought to a close by a vote of thanks to the host and hostess for the very capable manner in which they had catered for the "inner man."

ROCHDALE ORNITHOLOGICAL CLUB.

One of the finest shows of young Canaries in Lancashire was held in the Club Rooms, on July 6th, when 66 grand birds of every variety were shown. There were 25 Lancashires staged, all of them good birds. The Judge, Mr. R. Apsley, had hard work to separate them. Mr. S. Entwistle won the special for best Lanes. shown by a novice, F. Turner the special for most points in show, also the challenge cup for team of four birds. LANCS., CL. BUFF COPPY: 1, J. Butterworth; 2, S. Entwistle; 3, R. Ratcliffe. YELL. PLAINHEAD: 1, 3, B. HANLEY AND DIS. C.B.S.

Second annual Nest Feather Show of this progressive young society held July 6th, at Headquarters, the Albion Hotel, Hanley. We must congratulate the members on the grand quality of the exhibits. Given a good moult, several of the winners will be heard of again when the autumn show comes round. Norwich were a good lot, notably the winning yellows. The principal winners were Messrs. Clunn, Bickerton, Wild, Underwood, Peake, Williamson, and Scott. Yorkshires were the best lot, collectively, we remember seeing at any show in the Potteries, and were mostly shown by novices, which speaks well for them upholding the position vacated, we are sorry to say, by Mr. Bate and Mr. Ede. The principal winners in this section were Messrs. Pygott, Newman, Robinson, and Peake. The special for best bird was won by Mr. Bickerton, with a tick. yell. Norwich, after a close race with Mr. Robinson's tick. yell. Yorks., which won the special for best Yorks. Mr. S. Wootton was the judge, and gave every satisfaction. NOR. CL. YELL.: 1, Clonn; 2, Bickerton; 3, Wild. BUFF: 1, Clunn; 2, Peake; 3, Bickerton. MKD. YELL.: 1, Bickerton; 2, Underwood; 3, Williamson. BUFF: 1, Wild; 2, Underwood; 3, Scott. YORKS. CL. REDRUTH.

This show was held in the Recreation Ground, on July 3rd and 4th, in rather unpleasant weather, cold and heavy showers falling at intervals; but the exhibits were well looked after by a committee of true fanciers—Messrs. Rickard, Collins, and Ferrill, with Messrs. Climas and Opie as secretaries. The Norwich section was not over large, but the quality was there. The A.O.V. class was a good one, the winner being a good Cinnamon, in rare fettle and colour. The pairs bred 1907 were a grand lot, and took the Judge a little time to place. The winners were found in a neat pair of Scotch, closely pressed by a typical pair of Norwich, which will be heard of again. The Hybrid classes were excellent, Mr. F. Collins sending a fine team, and captured all the prizes, including the silver medal for best bird in the show, with a lovely six-pointed Goldfinch Mule, shown in grand style. The Goldies were a most level lot, and were not easily divided, the winner being conspicuous for its wing bars and buttons. In the Softbills, Mrs. Thompson's Cornish Chough came in for a good deal of scrutiny. The winner in the Hardbills was a good coloured, very steady Yellow Bunting. Nearly 200 exhibits faced the Judge, Mr. Dan. Browning, of Exeter, and gave him a full morning's work. His awards were well received, and he complimented the society on their splendid show. This was the secretaries' first experience of show management, and great credit is due to them for the most able manner in which everything was carried out. The special for most points was won by F. Collins, with 71 points. NOR. YELL. (6): 1, spl, Lawry, good head properties, nice clubby well carried wings and tail, good colour; 2, Davies, hardly the substance of winner, good colour and carriage; 3, Rickard, very fine feather and colour, little longer; res., Coad, good colour, well-carried wings, might be a trifle stouter; vhc, White, good size, type and quality, but tail broken, which told against him. BUFF (6): 1, spl, White, good type, rare quality of feather, lovely head and neck; 2, Trevena, well furnished body, correct type of head, good wings and tail; 3, hc, Ferrell, correctly built on the soundest of Norwich lines; res., Mrs. Sherman, typical one, of nice quality and type; vhc, Sherman, rather long, good colour and quality. YELL. TKD.: 1, spl, Trevena, ticked neck, full of quality, nice bird, real good shape; 2, Lawry, ticked wing and eye, full of colour and quality, very shapely; 3, Glanville, marked wing, fair type, nice colour, tail broken; res., Sherman, marked wing, good colour and type; vhc, White. BUFF TKD. CUMBERLAND YORKSHIRE C.C.

The second Monthly Show was held in the Foresters' Hall, Whitehaven, on July 3rd. There was a fairly good entry in the four classes provided. Competition was very keen, many youngsters of exceptional merit being staged. The leaders were excellent specimens, especially the clear buff of Mr. Stewart and Mr. Irwin's yellow. From what I could see of the stamp of birds staged there ought to be some grand Yorkshires and some keen competition in this district this coming show season. Mr. J. Ferguson made the awards. YELL.: 1, Irwin; 2, 3, Stewart; vhc, hc, Brown. BUFF: 1, 2, 3, Stewart; vhc, Irwin; hc, Brown; c, Lewthwaite. TKD. YELL.: 1, 3, c, Stewart; 2, Irwin; vhc, hc, Lewthwaite. BUFF: 1, 2, hc, Stewart; 3, Brown; vhc, Irwin; c, Moore.

YORK C.B.S.

First Feather Show held July 8th, at All Saints' Church Rooms. Messrs. A. Richardson, T. Chittenden, H. White judged. NOR.: 1, 2, hc, Boyle; 3, vhc, Alderson. YORKS.: 1, 2, Alderson; 3, Warriner. BRIT.: Grand class; 1, Boyle; 2, 3, Hunter; vhc, Goodall; hc, c, Shorney.

CITY OF WAKEFIELD O.S.

First Feather Show held June 25th. The entry was a very poor one, only 15 birds being staged. These were all put together in one class. Two of our members, Messrs. Jones and Bardon, well and ably judged the birds, and their decisions gave every satisfaction. Our worthy Chairman showed his mettle by getting into the prize list. 1, Burgon; 2, Scott; 3, S. Sheard; vhc, Midgeley; hc, Parker; c, Oldroyd.

LOWESTOFT C.B.A.

This society held a very successful First Feather Show at the Fox and Hounds on July 6th, which was well attended by members and friends. In spite of the bad breeding season most of the fanciers have had, over eighty birds were staged, and as this society was quite recently formed they are to be congratulated on their first attempt in the exhibiting world. Not only were the Norwich classes well filled with entries, but the quality, type, and condition of the birds left nothing to be desired; in fact, they were a hot lot. The well-known and popular judge, Mr. Jacob Mackley, pleased everybody with his awards, and after judging gave the members a few useful hints on flighting and colour feeding first feather birds, which was greatly appreciated. Mr. Mackley said it gave him great pleasure in seeing such a good lot of birds, and which, with a good moult, will be heard of again. On looking through the winners it was encouraging to see the novices had given the champions a warm time of it, and very little separated them. Mr. Lowe secured the special prize for best bird in show with a good Crest. The clear yellow and buff, also the ticked buff classes were well filled with good specimens, and competition was very keen. The show was very satisfactorily carried out by the secretary and committee, who spared no trouble in seeing all the exhibits well cared for. NOR. YELL. BRISTOL C.B.S.

The First Nest Feather Show was held July 3rd. Entries came up very well, and the quality throughout was grand. Norwich and Yorkshires were a fine lot, the birds being in grand condition. They were staged very nicely, and a few really charming youngsters were on view, that, given a chance, should be heard of again. The hon. secretary, Mr. Munro, carried out his duties in a very able and business-like manner, being most ably assisted by several other well-known local officials. Judges, Mr. W. H. Manley and Mr. C. P. Telling. NOR. YELL.: 1, Follwell, capital quality, good deep chest, rare feather and carriage; 2, Tristam, we made little between; 3, Taylor, equally as good in every respect, only just a wee bit small. BUFF: 1, 3, Munro, an easy win, neat head, hack, and tail, bonny bird with good carriage, third very similar, a trifle smaller; 2, Follwell, nice quality, neat shape, feather, and carriage; hc, Taylor. TKD., ETC., YELL.: 1, Follwell, very good cap marked, typical youngster, well shown; 2, Taylor, we liked very much, bonny shape and carriage, looking a bit thick, had cold. BUFF: 1, Tristam, ticked, regular model for shape, grand quality, nicely staged; 2, Munro, very little between, best condition bird leading; 3, Taylor, variegated, bonny shape and feather, nice carriage, hardly as big. YORKS. YELL.: 1, Andrews and Biss, long thin drawn, plenty of leg, neat style, three birds in this class, grand type and quality, left out as colour fed. BUFF: 1, Barry, good shape, feather, and style, stands like a guardsman; 2, Bull, long close feather, capital shape and style; 3, Andrews and Biss, long narrow back, capital feather and carriage; vhc, Burgess; hc, Parsons. TKD., ETC., YELL.: 1, Bull, nice cinnamon marked, long, fine drawn bird, A1 position and character; 2, Parsons, cinnamon ticked, full of style and quality; 3, Andrews and Biss, prettily marked bird, exquisite quality. BUFF: 1, 2, 3, Bull, a really smart team of cinnamon ticks, grand length, well up on leg, splendid feather and style; vhc, Andrews and Biss. MULE: 1, Andrews and Biss. NOVICE NOR.: 1, vhc, Wilton, nice shape, feather, and carriage; 2, 3, Fowler, variegated, bonny shape, feather, and carriage. YORKS.: 1, 3, Horler, not big, but full of style and quality, well up on leg; 2, Newman, good length and quality, nice wing and tail carriage; vhc, Barry.

TWICKENHAM.

The usual summer fixture of the Richmond and Twickenham Fanciers' Society was held in the grounds attached to Radnor House, Twickenham, on July 3rd, but was quite spoilt by cold rain, which threw a dumper over the proceedings. The exhibits were nicely staged and well looked after by Mr. Loveless, the secretary, and his committee. Although not over numerous, the exhibits were of splendid quality. Mr. Wheeler's young 'Yorkshire, which secured the special for best in the show, should make up into a very smart specimen. Mr. C. A. House judged.

NOR. (7): 1, 2, 3, res., vhc, Wheeler, a remarkably fine team, first shapely, nice quality buff, in splendid feather, second rare shaped yellow of lovely colour, beaten in feather; hc, Couch. YORKS. (6): 1, 2, 3, res., vhc, hc, Wheeler, splendid team, the leaders excelling in style and fineness. BRED 1907 (6): 1, 2, 3, res., vhc, hc, Wheeler, another very useful little lot, capital shape, good colour, and rare quality of feather. YORKS. (9): 1, 3, vhc, hc, spl best bird in show, Wheeler, first very slim, finely moulded buff, splashed on chest, third very shapely clear, not so neat on chest; 2, res., hc, Adams, a very sweet yellow, fine head, nice hack and wiugs, hardly so tight in feather as winner. BRIT. A.V. (6): 1, res., vhc, Couch, very nicely marked, rich coloured, close feathered Linnet; 2, Miss Hodgkin, nice spangled Bramblefinch of good colour; 3, Mrs. Hodgson, a well marked Yellow Bunting. FOR. (6): 1, res., hc, Miss Little, the well-known pair of Swainston's Lorikeets, in capital colour and plumage, although they have nested this season; 2, Mrs. Hodgson, very prettily marked, nice coloured pair of Cordon Bleus; 3, Hunt, very handsome King Parrakeet, gorgeous colour, and nice feather; vhc, Mrs. Hodgkin.

DONCASTER.

This Show, held in connection with Doncaster Agricultural Show, was not very well supported, and had it not been for the splendid team exhibited by Mr. Axe, the entry would have been poor indeed. In most classes the quality was above the average for the time of year, and bad the entry only been a trifle larger, the show would have been a real good one. At intervals during the day the ground was visited by severe thunderstorms, and this fact undoubtedly militated largely against the attendance, which, under the circumstances, was good. Messrs. Axe and Barratt had charge of the arrangements, and the birds and flowers being in a tent by themselves formed an interesting feature of the show. Mr. C. A. House judged. NOR. (5): 1, 2, 3, Axe, first yellow, splendid type, colour, and quality, in fine form, second head and neck marked buff, larger, not the quality, third good shapely buff, bit rough. YORKS. (5): 1, Murrell, very neat yellow, nice shape and good style; 2, Spencer, head and cheek ticked yellow, fine racy bird, not so level in front; 3, Bayley, big bold bird of nice pattern and style, wing ticked yellow. BRED 1907 (13): 1, res., Axe, eye ticked yellow Norwich, lovely colour and quality, and very shapely; 2, Harrison, pied buff Scot, capital shape and length of side, handles well; 3, Clark, firm, stylisb yellow Yorkshire, good head and back; vhc, hc, Murrell. BRIT. GOLDFINCH, ETC. (6): 1, Taylor, very rich coloured Goldfinch, sharp cut blaze, nice back and bars, in good fettle; 2, vhc, Axe, charming little Linnet, beautifully marked, nice colour; 3, Bescoby, good bodied Goldie, grand breast, not so bright in blaze; res., Popple; hc, Taylor. A.O.V. HARDBILL: 1, 2, 3, Axe, Hawfinch, Yellow Bunting, and Siskin, a nice team which deserved more competition; res., Crundwell. SOFTBILL (2): 1, Axe, beautifully marked Thrush, grand colour and shape, in rare fettle; 2, 3, Milne, second very sweet Meadow Pipit, close and compact in feather, and grandly marked, third rich-coloured, well-marked Redstart, had soiled his plumage or would have won; res., Bescoby, very smart yellow Wagtail, but not steady enough; vbc (2), hc, Bishop; c, Gavin; a remarkably good class. LOCAL A.V. CAGE BIRD (9): 1, Duckitt, very high quality yellow Norwich, full of colour and as tight as wax; 2, c, Mullins, long, well-shaped buff Yorkshire, stands well; 3, Hall, very nicely marked, good coloured Linnet; res., Bescoby; vhc, Harrison; hc, Crundell. SELL., 15/- (8): 1, Bescoby, very smart Redwing; 2, 3, Axe, two useful looking Norwich; res., Spencer; vhc, Murrell; c, Popple.

BATTERSEA.

The Battersea and District C.B.A. promoted an Open and Members' Young Bird Show on July 3rd inst. It was held in the club room at headquarters, the "Duchess of Devonshire," Clapham Junction, a nicely-lighted, comfortable place, yet hardly big enough for an event of this nature. It was very well patronised indeed by Metropolitan and neighbouring fanciers, there being quite a crowd present during the evening. The birds were staged to the best possible advantage, and well attended, and everything possible for the success of the show was done by Mr. F. Easterling, who proved his undoubted worth in the secretarial position, which was not by any means a light post. He had a good committee at the back of him in Messrs. T. Wade (chairman), J. Goymer (vice-chairman), B. A. Allen (treasurer), and Messrs. Maddison, F. C. Allen, Gooch, Baker, Honeysett, Luff, Goodridge, Goodey, Mabey, Potter, and Taw, all of them thorough fanciers. Unfortunately the executive were not favoured with the large entry their enterprise deserved. Still, the quality of the stock on view was of a high order, and well worth looking over, while one or two classes (notably the Yorkshire) mustered strongly. The Norwich Plainheads were a fine lot for quality, and were distinguished by the rather startling performance of a novice. This gentleman, Mr. S. Edwards, captured first, third and vhc awards in the open class, besides two firsts, a second, and vhc in the members Norwich, and first and third in Goldfinches. This was the first time he had ever shown a bird! He won the open Norwich special, Mr. Broome and Mr. Easterling the Yorkshire, Mr. Nancekivell the Crest, and Mr. V. Wynn the A.O.V. Other good Norwich in the open classes were shown by Dr. Sidgwick and Mr. E. C. Jordan, while some really splendid youngsters were put down by Messrs. Broome, H. Davis, Peck, Hall, and Easterling (Yorks.), Nancekivell, Hole, and Mrs. Campling (Crests and Crestbreds), Wynn (Cinns.), Honeysett (Borders), and Kempster (Lancs.). In the members' classes competition was unusually keen, and the birds therein were of excellent quality. The special for the best Norwich went to Dr. Sidgwick's winner, which was thought just about the best Norwich Plainhead in the show, a most typical youngster, just caught at its best. Mr. Whiteman (another novice, and his first time of exhibiting) took the special for the best Yorks., a grand yellow, which should do him good after a moult. The Mules and British were very good, and attracted considerable attention from the visitors. Mr. J. Robson judged.

OPEN CLASSES: NOR. CL., ETC. (14): 1, spl, 3, vhc, Edwards, leader ticked head, fine stamp of bird, good stout body, neat full head and neck, nicely carried wings and tail, very promising, latter also two good ones; 2, Dr. Sidgwick, clear, typical and neat all over, bold, well-rounded head, full chest, clean under, should moult a good one; 4, hc, Jordan, another splendid youngster, not in quite the same form as leaders, but well made and cut; c, Silk; abs., Cooper Bros. YORKS. CL., ETC. (17): 1, spl, vhc, Broome, long, racy bird, neat as possible, well drawn out, full of style, wins in a good class; 2, hc, H. Davis, very close up, but not so steady as winner, beauty for length and quality, neat, boxy feather, good wings and tail; 3, Easterling, sweet yellow, looks like a hen, and a good one, too, full of quality and style; 4, Peck, nice, lengthy buff, also looks like a hen, splendid feather properties; c, Hall. A.O.V. YORKS. (9): 1, spl, 3, Easterling, two stylish exhibits, have length, position and quality, just breaking into moult; 2, Hall, another good one, nice length, stands on good legs, neat wings and tail; vhc, Humphrey; hc, c, Davis; abs., Burton. CREST OR C.B. (10): 1, spl, vhc, Nancekivell; 2, Hole; 3, c, Mrs. Campling; hc, Slade. This class had some good exhibits in it, showing promise of making up into very decent specimens. A.O.V. (8): 1, spl, vhc, Wynn, leader wins easily, clinking buff cinn., fine substance and shape, rare good head, very sound colour all over; 2, hc, c, Honeysett, trio of natty little Borders, very nice type, excellent quality; 3, Kempster, very fair Lancs. MEMBERS' CLASSES: YORKS. (8): 1, vhc, hc, Easterling, buff tick leading, trio of typical specimens, winner lengthiest and neatest; 2, 3, Peverall, variegateds, two good stylish birds, length and quality A1; c, Best. NOR. (3): 1, spl, 2, Sidgwick, winner a real clinker. YORKS. CL., ETC. (18): 1, spl, Whiteman, rattling good yellow, staged very creditably for a novice, well deserves its position; 2, 3, Allen, two good, smart, typical Yorkies, not the finish of leader; vhc, Wall; hc, Daines; c, Found. A.O.V. YORKS. (7): 1, vhc, Slade, neat, shapely, cinn. mkd; 2, Allen, buff, mkd. head and saddle, good one, pressed leader very hard; 3, hc, Holloway, cinn. mkd., nice length and quality; c, Whiteman. NOR. CL., ETC. (8): 1, 2, Edwards, two splendid birds, good both in substance, shape, and feather; 3, hc, Luff, also well above the average for shape and quality; vhc, Daines; c, Palmer. A.O.V. NOR. (13): 1, vhc, Edwards, yet another promising youngster; 2, 3, Baker and Gooch, two smart birds, good size and shape, neat head, well carried flights and tail, close up; hc, Daines; c, Palmer. GOLDFINCH (7): 1, spl, 3, Edwards, leader has a grand blaze; 2, Slade, very close up; vhc, Palmer; hc, Goymer; c, Easterling. BULLFINCH (1): 1, Easterling, good Siberian. LINNET (3): 1, Honeysett, easy win, nice bird for shape and colour; 2, Easterling; 3, Palmer. REDPOLL, ETC. (2): 1, Easterling. A.O.V. (2): 1, 2, Easterling, nice Bramble and Greenfinch. MULE (4): 1, 2, Best, the well-known dark Goldies, in fine trim.

BRIGHTON F. AND F.A.

The members of this society held their young stock show of cage birds, etc., on July 4th at the Unicorn Hotel. It was well represented by members and visitors, including several from the Shoreham Fanciers' Society. Mr. M. Crust (Reigate) officiated as judge, and no fault could be found in his awards. Among the cage birds the arrangements were courteously carried out by Mr. F. Perrin, Hon. Sec., and his assistants. All monthly show meetings are free to visitors. NOR.: 1, 3, Frost, first a stout bodied buff, awarded special for the best feathered bird in show; 2, Mrs. Eyles, rough in feather. YORKS.: 1, Gibb, a superior yellow, this exhibitor's bird, No. 6, unnoticed, was a grand shaped bird, and its slim tail ought to have made it one of the winners; 2, Dandridge, quite a baby; 3, Frost, cinn. ticked. A.O.V.: 1, Gravett, even marked Crest; 2, Gibb, excellent yellow Border; 3, Cooper, Crested green. MULES: 1, Roast, very light and well marked Gold. and Canary; 2, Gibb, dark Greenfinch and Canary.

DENHOLME & THORNTON C.B.S.

This society held their Nest Feather Show on July 6th. Owing to the poor season this show suffered, none of the marked classes being patronised. Mr. Ogden Hey, of Hey Bros., placed the cards, and gave great satisfaction. Some good birds were staged in the clear and ticked classes, which were well supported. YORKS. YELL.: 1, 4, Inghin; 2, Clayton; 3, Dobson. BUFF: 1, Clayton; 2, Tomsett; 3, 4, Drake.

WALLASEY AND DIS. C.B.S.

This Society held its Nest Feather Show in St. Mary's School, Liscard, on July 6th, under usual show regulations. The entry was a good one; just under 100 birds staged, and many of these very promising youngsters of much merit. A splendid list of valuable special prizes were on offer for competition, which undoubtedly attracted the good quantity and quality of birds on view. A challenge cup, champion bowl, gold medals, handsome cash, and other specials made up an excellent list, and must have greatly pleased the winners. Competition was keen in most classes, and the real good quality and type seen was most pleasing to set eyes upon. Several well-known breeders put down first-class teams, and did well. Mr. Mullinson, the hon. secretary, had all in apple-pie order, and left nothing to chance. His services should long be retained by our Wallasey friends. Mr. Chas. Houlton made the awards, and spoke highly of some of the leading birds. YORKS. YELL.: 1, Coffey, very nice, finely-drawn bird, neat head, sides, back, wings, and tail, good stand and leather; 2, Hollord, good stand and feather, beaten in general shape and breast. BUFF: 3, vhc, Coffey, first fine big stylish bird, grand feather, stand, and condition, just big enough, third rather flatter head and looser on breast, with tail feather growing; 2, Hollord, very like a hen, very neat, clean, and compact all over. TKD. YELL.: 1, Stewart, a var., dark cap, grand shape and quality, bit small, but very smart; 2, 3, Coffey, very neat head, good body, tick neck, rare style, runs very close up, third bit soft condition, all else good, tick neck; vhc, Hodgkins, bit frilly on breast. BUFF: 1, vhc, hc, Coffey, eye ticked, of very good size, grand shape and stand, in A1 form and feather; 2, Stewart, var., on the small side, grand quality and position, like a good hen; 3, Hollord, trifle soft in condition, marked tail nice feather and good shape when tightened up. CINN. TKD. YELL.: 1, Carswell, heavily var., grand style and shape, lovely colour, quality, and condition, nice size; 2, Coffey, eyes and wing marked, lovely colour and quality, like a hen, on the small side, very neat. YORKS. YELL., GREEN: 1, Carlisle, long drawn, fine size, deep colour all through, rare quality and tight condition, good dark markings, beak, and legs, takes special for best Canary in show; 2, Hughes, very finely drawn out, A1 colour, shade smaller than first, nice deep beak and legs, neat leather; 3, Stewart, grand colour and shape, bit soft condition, which told against it; vhc, hc, c, Carswell. BUFF, GREEN: 1, Carswell, a slashing big youngster, good body colour and back markings, dark beak and legs, just long enough in feather, nice carriage and condition; 2, Hughes, very neat, smaller, excellent for quality and colour good; 3, vhc, c, Carswell, fine shape, good sound colour, well up in markings, beak and legs; hc, Holford. FOUL YELL., WING OR TAIL: 1, Holford, foul tail, splendid feather and condition, sound colour and markings, rare shape and nice size; 2, Carswell, foul tail, bit looser in breast feather, nice tone of colour and good in shape; 3, Hodgkins, foul left wing, well up in colour and shape; vhc, Carlisle; hc, Stewart. BUFFS: 1, 2, Hughes, very fine bird, A1 body shape, good colour, second grand colour, beaten in feather; 3, Stewart, pale in colour and smaller bird, grand shape and quality of feather. FOUL YELL.: 1, Carlisle, foul left side of breast, very good all round bird; 2, Holford, foul breast, smaller than first, very nice colour and shape; 3, Carswell, on the small side, but fine colour. FOUL BUFF: 1, Stewart, A1 type, colour, and quality, good size and condition; 2, 3, Carswell, nice even colour and condition, fair size, third pale in colour, heavy var. NOR. YELL. OR BUFF: 1, 3, Woodman, good pair of buffs, fine chubby shape, nice feather; 2, Hodgkins, very strong colour, a yell. in shape and colour all over, said to be bred off a pair of green heavily-variegated buffs. GREEN NOR. BUFF: 1, Hadwin, very cobby shape, nice delicate colour, and good condition and size; 2, Stewart, longer in body and tail, strong deep colour and leather. BORDER BUFF: 1, Hadwin, dark cap bird, as tight as wax, A1 shape and lovely quality of feather; 2, vhc, hc, Woodman, a clear, grand shape and feather, rather unsteady, which upset it somewhat; 3, Stewart, a clear with lovely feather, but spread itself too much to gain higher honours. HEAVY MKD.: 1, 3, Hadwin, yell. var., A1 shape and condition, third even mark, grand little bird, could have won if it had not lost some feather behind eyes; 2, Stewart, buff var., very nice type, quality and condition; vhc, hc, Woodman. A.O.V. BORDER: A good class of nine birds, all the six cards going to Metcalfe, with a very strong team of young Borders, which no doubt will be heard of again if they live and have luck to moult well. A.O.V. CAN.: 1, Hadwin, foul tail Cinn., Nor. type, A1 shape, colour, quality and condition; 2, Carlisle, Cinn., Yorks. type, big, good shape, grand feather and condition; 3, Carswell, same breed, smaller, A1 type; vhc, Holford. YORKS., NOVICE: 1, 2, 3, c, Carlisle, first buff Yorks. Green, fair size, grand colour and type, and a credit to a novice, second wing marked yell. Yorks., A1 feather and condition, third yell. foul Green, bit coarser in feather than others; vhc, hc, Hodd. SELLING, 12s. 6d.: 1, 2, Coffey; 3, Stewart; vhc, Holford; hc, Hadwin; c, Carswell. BRIT. BULLFINCH: 1, Coffey; 2, Stewart. GREENFINCH: 1, Coffey; 2, Stewart. LINNET: 1, Coffey; 2, Stewart. A.O.V. HARDBILL: 1, Coffey; 2, Stewart. This section had some gems in for this time of year.

WELLINGBOROUGH & DIS. C.B.S.

This Society held their Young Stock Show on July 6th. There were about 100 birds staged, and some promising youngsters among them. The old birds looked well after their breeding season, which has been very moderate through the changeable weather. There were several last season's winners brought to light, and they looked as though they will be heard of again. Mr. F. Hunt, of Kettering, was judge, and gave every satisfaction with his awards. NOR. YELL., BRED 1907: 1, Belcher; 2, res., W. H. Howe; 3, Martin; vhc, Garner; hc, Smith; c, Charlesworth. BUFF: 1, Smith; 2, W. H. Howe; 3, res., Belcher; vhc, Morbey; hc, Martin; c, Charlesworth. HEMSWORTH C.B.S.

The Hemsworth C.B.S. held their show at the Victoria Hotel on July 3rd. A large number of fanciers visited the show, which was a success. The Yorkshires were the feature of the event, there being some excellent quality in both classes, and it was a difficult matter for the Judge, Mr. J. P. Carter, to make his selections. YORKS., YELL.: 1, 2, Davis, clinking pair of clears, which, with a good moult, will be heard of again; 3, Whitehall, with a cheek and wing marked bird, a real good reachy one, lacks in feather. BUFF: 1, Whitehall, a grand young clear that will take some stopping, as he is in good hands; 2, Akred, not far behind winner, seemed to be slightly in moult; 3, Taylor, very typical, but a bit on small side, otherwise a good one. GOLD. OR BULLFINCH: 1, 2, 3, Millington, first Goldfinch, real good one, rich colour, good blaze and moonings, will take some stopping, second Bullfinch, a real topper, third another good Goldie. A.O.V. HARDBILL: 1, Millington, Greenfinch, in extra good plumage, but rather on small side; 2, Whitehall, Siskin, a real nice bird, looked well.

GUISELEY C.B.S.

Guiseley, etc., C.B.S. held its Show at the Temperance Hall, Yeadon, on June 20th. A good collection of exhibits faced the Judge, Mr. R. Garnett, of Windhill, whose awards gave entire satisfaction. Mr. A. Frankland won special for most points in show. Mr. W. Hearpark second most points, Mr. C. Thornton third most points, Mrs. W. Gilroy special for novice most points; Mr. A. Wheatley also won novice special. YORKS. YELL: 1, Rudd; 2, Thompson; 3, Bearpark; vhc, Muschamp; hc, Frankland; c, Wheatley. ATTERCLIFFE.

Nest Feather Show held July 6th, in the Vestry Hall. The entry was not large, about 100 birds being staged; but the quality was very good. Messrs. Champion, Taylor, and Bagnall judged the exhibits, and gave general satisfaction. Mr. Walsh's Nightingale deserves special mention, and it got the special for the best bird in the show. Mr. Gregory, Mr. Greenfield, and Mr. Bettinson also put grand teams before the judges. YORKS. CL.: 1, 2, 3, 4, Greenfield; vhc, Perry; hc, Bettinson. BRAMLEY O.S.

The First Feather Show of this Society was held at Headquarters on July 6th. The entries were smaller than the previous year, but taking into consideration the bad season we have experienced, we did not do bad, having 70 birds staged. Messrs. Wilkinson, Dale, and Johnson are in the running for the society's medals, and Messrs. Whitley, Holdsworth, and Fletcher for the novice medals, and Mr. B. H. Wilson for British. Mr. A. Chew judged, and gave every satisfaction. YORKS. YELL.: 1, 2, Dale; 3, Wilkinson; vhc, Metcalfe; hc, Lambert; c, Wilson. TKD. YELL.: 1, 2, Tate; 3, Wilkinson; vhc, Craven. DEWSBURY AND DIS. C.B.S.

This Society held their First Feather Show at Royal Hotel, on July 6th, there being about 70 entries. The exhibits throughout were of excellent type and quality. Mr. W. Richmond, of Rodley, judged, and his awards gave every satisfaction. YORKS. YELL.: 1, spl, Charlesworth; 2, Stafford; 3, Raynes; vhc, Taylor; hc, Hooley; c, Hird. BUFF: 1, 3, Raynes; 2, Fawcett; vhc, Senior; hc, Yelland; c, Wright. TKD. YELL.: 1, Taylor; 2, Blackburn; 3, Charlesworth; vhc, Mitchell; hc, Hale; c, Dean. STOCKTON AND DIS. C.B.S.

The members of the Stockton and District C.B.S. held their First Feather Show on July 4th at the Leeds Hotel, entries numbering forty in five classes, which was very good considering the very poor breeding season the members have had. The exhibits were nicely staged, in a good light. Mr. Hill, of Thornaby, made the awards. NOR. (13): 1, Wake; 2, Lowes; 3, vhc, Whitworth; 4, Burton; hc, Pace; c, Freeman. YORKS. (10): 1, 3, vhc, Johnson; 2, hc, Hansom; 4, Freeman; c, Cookman. A.O.V. (8): 1, c, Yeates; 2, 4, hc, Hansom; 3, vhc, Johnson. BRIT. HARDBILL (8): 1, Marwood; 2, Cookman; 3, Wake; 4, hc, Burton; vhc, Pace; c, Lowes. SOFTBILL: 1, Marwood.

DULWICH AND PECKHAM C.B.S.

Young Bird Show held July 11th at headquarters, the "Herne," Peckham Rye, S.E. This go-ahead society broke all previous records so far as number of birds staged is concerned, and taking this fact in conjunction with the all round high quality of the exhibits, the venture must be classed as one of the very best and most successful held in the Metropolis to date. This is hardly to be wondered at, however, for the enthusiastic way in which the officials of the society set about their work is sufficient to ensure anything they undertake going off with a bang, so to speak. Mr. Woolhouse, the chairman, Mr. Goodwin, the treasurer, and Messrs. Rogers, Meredith, Tringham, Rees, Wall, and others worked like Trojans during the evening, while their excellent hon. secretary, Mr. W. Hodson, got through his task in a manner which enhanced, if that be possible, previous opinions as to his sterling worth. A catalogue with awards in the margin was actually on sale immediately the judge's slips were all in, credit for this feat (rare at a night show) belonging to Mr. Rogers. Mr. Brownlie brought a pleasant evening to a close by presenting the special prizes, of which the society had a goodly list, in a very happy manner. A rare crowd of bird-loving friends put in an appearance, the room, what with the birds and the fanciers, being almost too crowded to be comfortable. In the champion Norwich section, Mr. Woolhouse, the chairman, won with a clinking clear buff, of splendid body properties and A1 quality, this youngster also accounting for the silver-plated teapot (presented by Mr. Gladwin) for the best bird in the show. Dr. Sidgwick, with the winning marked buff, ran him a close race, this, too, being an exceptionally promising bird, typical all over. Messrs. Morris, Boydon, and Matthes also staged some nice specimens. In Yorkshires the principal honours fell to Messrs. Broome and Tringham, their representatives being lengthy, neat and typical. Messrs. Horton and Nancekivell showed us some good Crests and Crest-breds, one or two of them promising well for competition later on in the season. In Borders, that keen enthusiast, Mr. Brownlie, put down a clinking team, some of his cinnamons and cinnamon marks being especially pleasing. In the novice Norwich section Messrs. Welch, Richardson, Thomas, and Wilmot were to the front, Mr. Welch securing with his winning clear the silver-plated cruet (presented by Mr. Waterman) for best bird bred by a novice. This is an excellent specimen of the breed—indeed, the Plainheads were a good lot in both the classes. In the Yorkshires, Messrs. Waterman (although having three birds thrown out as "ticked"), Holloway, Putner, and Wall took the chief prizes with birds of considerable merit. Other winners in this section were Messrs. Johnson, Vernham, Kempster, and Cunningham (Crest and A.O.V.), while Dr. Sidgwick performed his usual feat of securing first in the selling class. Other special winners were Messrs. Tringham, Waterman (2), Bennett, Boydon, Matthes, Johnson, Morris, Thomas, and Dr. Sidgwick.

CRESWELL C.B.S.

The Nest Feather Show in connection with the above society was held at the Rose and Crown on July 6th, and a very merry company of fanciers were present. Although entries were not as numerous as they might have been, the competition was very hot in some of the classes. Mr. W. Roslyn, Mansfield, judged, and appeared to give every satisfaction. NOR. YELL.: 1, Leam and Stinson, bonny light variegated, of good type and level colour; 2, Doxey and Bownes, clear, just fails to winner in head and neck; 3, same firm, another of the right stamp. BUFF: 1, Till, bouncing clear, full of type and quality, and belonging to quite a young fancier; 2, Doxey and Bownes; 3, Wilson, a strong class. YELL. YORKS.: 1, Wilson; 2, 3, Simpson, a nice trio. BUFF: 1, 2, Simpson, remarkably fine drawn, one cheek mark, grand position, lovely quality, not a feather awry, second another good one; 3, Knowles, fails to others in position. CREST: 1, 2, Simpson. CRESTBRED: 1, Doxey and Bownes. LIGHT MULE: 1, Pitt. A.O.V.: 1, Pitt, a bonny young Lancashire, the first we have seen in this district. May there be more of them; 2, Leam and Stinson, a cinnamon, another beautiful variety not half appreciated by the Notts and Derbyshire fanciers. DARK MULE: 1, Knowles, well-built Linnet-Canary; 2, Pitt, Siskin-Canary; 3, Knowles, Linnet-Canary. BRIT. HARDBILL: 1, Pitt, a gem of a Siskin, in faultless trim, full of level, rich colour; 2, Doxey and Bownes, Goldfinch, good size, fails a little in tail at present; 3, Pitt, good coloured Bullie, very tight in feather, but a wee bit slim. SOFTBILL: 1, 2, Leam and Stinson, both Whitethroats. FOR.: 1, Pearson Bros., the locally well-known Zebra Finch, whose many honours do not appear to have weighed him down much, although getting into the sere and yellow leaf.

GLASGOW & WEST OF SCOTLAND N.M.B. & F.B.C.

First Feather Show held at 122, Ingram Street, Glasgow, July 6th, and proved one of the best ever held by the club, there being about 130 exhibits forward, an average of 10 in the 13 classes provided. The members regretted to learn of the indisposition of their worthy Secretary, Mr. R. A. Brown, and trust he will make a speedy recovery. In his absence, the secretarial duties were undertaken by Mr. J. Brown, ably assisted by Mr. Eastman, president, and the committee, and everything passed off satisfactorily, the show being pronounced a decided success. Mr. M. Craig officiated as judge, his placing of the awards, which are as follows, giving entire satisfaction:—NOR. YELL: 1, Thomson; 2, McLay; 3, Tannock; 4, Gowans. HASTINGS UNITED C.B.S.

First Feather Show held at the Royal Oak Hotel on July 3rd. It was the finest Young Bird Show ever held in the district, both in numbers and quality. The Norwich classes were well filled, and had some excellent birds amongst them. The Yorkshire section was not so well filled, the Yorkshiremen having had very bad luck with their breeding this year, several not having a young bird at all, and some, as yet, only in the nest. Mr. J. H. Bellamy won the special for the best bird in show with a very nice ticked yellow Norwich. There were about 80 birds staged.

LITTLEBOROUGH C.B.S.

First Feather Show on June 29th, at the Conservative Club, Peel-street. There was a fairly good entry (50) taking into consideration the poor results some of the members have met with in breeding. The Lancashire classes, as usual, stood out best, and some very nice youngsters were staged. Mr. H. F. Howarth showing a capital team, he secured the club's special for best bird in show with his yellow coppy, a beautiful exhibit, full of quality, and one which, no doubt, will be heard of again if fortunate enough to live through the trouble of moulting. The same gentleman also won special for second best bird in show with his ticked buff Plainhead. There was some keen competition in this class, and no doubt the judge would have his work cut out in dividing first, second, and third, all three birds showing very good Lancashire properties. Mr. Frank Fish also put down a grand team of Lancashires, taking his usual share of the honours set apart for these classes, but we all considered him a little unfortunate with his buff Coppy; this bird, no doubt, would have been the selection for the best bird in show, but for its hanging its head continually, and never standing erect. The bird has got an exceptionally good coppy, such as is rarely seen amongst young birds, and if only this bird can be put in showing order there is no doubt it will be a prize-taker in the future. Next to Lancashires in merit came the British, some very nice birds being staged, Mr. Rigg taking the two specials with a Bullfinch of excellent marking, and as steady as a rock. Mr. John R. Crossley ran a good second with a Bramblefinch full of quality, and staged in splendid condition, but not so steady as winner. Third was taken by Mr. J. Hollows with a grand Goldfinch with rare blaze and markings, but upon the small side. The club's special for most points in show was taken by Messrs. Smith and Sellars with a total of 77, Mr. H. F. Howarth taking second with 37. Mr. R. Barrass judged, and gave every satisfaction.

EXETER C.B.S.

The second Young Bird Show in connection with this young and flourishing society was held in the Oddfellows' Hall on July 2nd. The chairman and committee must be congratulated on the success of their endeavours to raise a greater interest among the small bird lovers in the city and district, not forgetting the hard-working and pains-taking hon. secretary (Mr. R. H. Folley), who has the interest of the society so much at heart. Awards:—NOR. YELL. (10): 1, Hutchings; 2, Denham; 3, Parker; 4, Moles. "THE STANDARD WORK."

HOUSE'S

CANARY MANUAL

Price ONE SHILLING. Post Free 1/2.

Superbly illustrated by the Champion Canary Artist Mr. H. NORMAN. EVERY BIRD DEPICTED IS A VERITABLE MODEL, and shows the breeder what to aim for. Some idea of the popularity of this Practical Manual may be gathered from the fact that under the title of "The British Canary," it has passed its Third Edition, entering upon a Fourth Edition of 5,000 copies under the new title of "HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL."

MR. HOUSE has thoroughly revised and brought this work up-to-date and incorporated a chapter on the "Roller or Singing Canary."

The Bath F.A. Young Stock Show has been fixed for October 10th.

Ayr Ornithological Society's Show will be held on November 23rd, writes Mr. James W. Thomson, the Secretary.

We are asked to state that Mr. W. Roslyn, of Avidere, Mansfield, is our official literary representative for Mansfield and district.

Mrs. E. Burn (South Shields) tells us she has been fairly successful this year, and intends entering for our Canary breeding competition.

Will Master H. Cook, late of Byam Street, Fulham, send his new address to the Editor? One shilling from Uncle Peter has been returned by the postal authorities.

In renewing their subscription to CAGE BIRDS, Messrs. Roberts and Co., taxidermists, Calcutta, say:—We are miserable without it, and feel ourselves shut out of the world.

Mr. S. Drake (Halifax) informs us that he intends effecting considerable improvement in his Canary rings for 1908. He hopes to make them as good as anything on the market.

S. Shew (West Kilburn) writes:—All birdy men vote for your paper in preference to others, and I am sure it will always be so all the time you cater for the novice so splendidly.

The Annual Members' Show, writes Mr. A. Watson, Hon. Sec. Civil Service F.A., is fixed for November 19th, at "Ye Old Bell," 11, Noble Street, E.C. Mr. J. Robson will judge cage birds.

I think fanciers are greatly indebted to Mr. J. Burge, Whittington Moor, Chesterfield, for his great perseverance, by which means H. Tindall was brought to justice.—W. HUGHES (Oswestry).

I knew nothing whatever about feeding or rearing Canaries till I came across your paper. That made me a fancier, and the information you give I find very helpful.—S. PARK (Motherwell).

You credit Mr. Morris with winning 2nd and special in Champion Buffs at North London C.B.A. Show, whereas my bird won that honour, writes Mr. J. Hodder. I wish your interesting paper every success.

I have a hen Canary that has laid nine eggs in one nest and has hatched six young, which are a fortnight old, writes Mr. H. Astle (Derby). I have only two pairs and have 16 young ones, which I think not bad for a first attempt.

Metropolitan bird lovers should not overlook the lecture on "Variation in Birds," to be given by Mr. F. Finn, F.Z.S., before the L. and P.O.S., on Thursday, July 18th, at 8 p.m., at the "Raglan," Aldersgate Street, E.C. Friends will be welcomed.

We hear there was a good muster of Leeds and Bradford fanciers on Saturday last to listen to Mr. J. W. Ramsden's lecture on the "Norwich Plainhead," given before the Leeds C.B.S. The point which caught on most seemed to be the question of breeding for colour and quality, much interest being evinced concerning this matter.

Please thank those who replied to my last week's advt. There are such a lot of them, it would take me a week to answer all. I may say, through the medium of your valuable paper, I could have sold all my birds many times over, having had applications from all over the country.—J. E. HOWARTH, Dewsbury.

The members of the Cardiff C.B.S. whom I have seen, writes Mr. T. H. Melhuish, report in some cases good results; in others—good breeders, too—very bad results. I have had more time myself this season, and put up eight pairs Yorks. and two pairs for Muling. Up to now I have 36 safe on the sticks and 13 in nests, doing well. One hen, five years old, has reared six. I am one of the fortunate ones, it seems.

To colour-feed Canaries to perfection use Ramsden's pure peppers, which are sold under a full guarantee of purity. There is no mystery about Ramsden's pure, tasteless pepper. It is just what it is called, and is absolutely the finest in both colour and quality possible to procure. It is the only pepper advertised with a full warranty under both the Merchandise and Food and Drug Adulteration Act. "Feeds" may be anything; there is no legal definition or standard of purity for an article called a "Feed"; but pure, tasteless pepper, sold as such, must be pure, and that's where Ramsden's peppers score, for they are not only pure, but stand alone for colour and excellence of quality.—ADVT.

Part II. of "C.B. Annual."

I have received the "Annual" (part 2), with thanks. It might well have been called "Cage Birds Directory." There is no doubt it will be very useful in this way, comprising, as it does, the names and addresses of almost every exhibitor of cage birds of any note. It will also be very useful to fanciers when they are purchasing stock. They can see at a glance whether the advertiser has done any winning with his birds, and in this way save the cost of part 2 many times over.—THOS. RONSON, 41, Shield Street, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

Crewe O.S. and Potteries C.B.A. hold their First Feather Show on July 27th.—J. C. HEATON, Hon. Sec.

A Compstall (Cheshire) correspondent remarks upon the abundance of Blackcaps in that neighbourhood. He has a nest in his garden, and there is another in the woods just beyond his borders.

Having received such a large number of letters re exchange Norwich hens for Linnet, I find it impossible to reply to all. It speaks volumes for your valuable advertisement columns. Thus writes Mr. Curtis, of Cheltenham.

I have been elected Secretary of the Denholme and Thornton C.B.S., and all correspondence dealing with the society must be addressed to me at 5, Perseverance Road, Mountain, Queensbury, Bradford.—F. W. TOMSETT.

The City of Bradford Ornithological Society have arranged a number of members' shows during the season, the judges at which will be Messrs. C. Stebbings, H. S. Naylor, J. Wilcock and A. Spencer. The entrance fee is to be 6d. each cage, and prizes are to be on the sliding scale. Admission to the shows will be charged, and it is hoped by this to keep the members' enthusiasm alive and at the same time materially improve the financial position of the society. The secretaries are Messrs. Stansfield and Rhodes, 1, Lonsdale Street, Bradford.

OBITUARY.

Mr. H. LAW, of Ashford.

Kentish fanciers will regret to hear of the sudden and untimely demise of the well-known fancier Mr. H. Law, of Ashford, at the early age of 53 years. He survived an operation for gall stones at the Ashford Hospital but three days, passing away on the evening of June 28th. Although his illness was a long and painful one, owing to his cheeriness of manner at all times only those most intimately acquainted with him knew the nature of his sufferings, which he so patiently bore. To the Ashford F. and F. Society, of which he was Vice-Chairman, his loss is irreparable, for where hard work or inconvenience to oneself was entailed, he was always the first to volunteer. His portly figure and cheery voice will be missed as doorkeeper at the Ashford Show, a post he had filled for many years. In like manner will his person be missed from the Rechabite and Good Templar Lodges, in which cause he was an ardent and broad-minded worker, and voluntary performing the duties of sick visitor year in and year out. A large number of mourners followed the bier, the F. and F. Society being represented by Messrs. L. G. Knowles (Chairman), Browne (Secretary), and the Rev. Greig; while all the local Rechabites and some Good Templars were in regalia. The wreaths were numerous, for as a citizen he was much esteemed. Our sympathy goes out to his widow in her sad bereavement.

G. S. MCCREATH.

At the meeting on July 3rd, Mr. J. Woodhouse (son of the last esteemed Hon. Sec.) was unanimously elected Hon. Sec. of the Portsmouth Fanciers' Association. That he is the right man in the right place everyone is agreed, as, having held the position of assistant sec. to his father for several years, he naturally has all the work of the society at his finger ends. Mr. J. Abraham, who has acted as Sec. pro tem., was also elected as Hon. Assist. Sec., and with these two at the head of affairs the Portsmouth Society should still continue to flourish.

The Committee of the Welsh C.B.C. are to be congratulated on the improved state of their finances. The club has finished the year with a balance of £1 0s. 8½d. in hand, whereas in past years a special appeal has had to be made to make both sides of the ledger balance. The outlook for next season is promising. There is a membership of 58, the largest in the club's existence. Mr. Leech, Vice-President, has given the club £3 3s. for specials, Mr. Sandiford has presented a £2 2s. cup, and Messrs. Hyde and Co. a teapot. Mr. Tedstone, 4, George Street, Brecon, is the Hon. Secretary, and he will be pleased to hear from any Welsh fancier wishful to become a member, or assist the club with specials.

Welsh C.B.C.

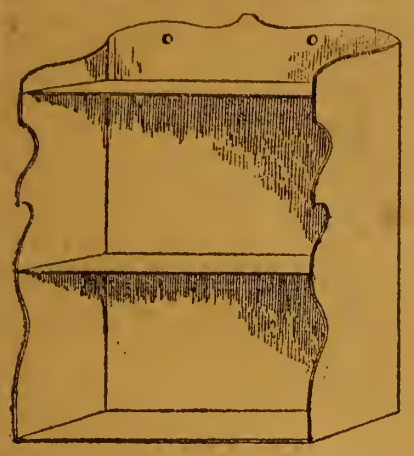
ILLUSTRATED IDEAS



Under this heading we shall illustrate weekly some idea useful to the bird keeper. Readers are invited to send us particulars of any novel and practical appliance of use in our hobby, either in cage, bird-room or aviary, with a rough sketch of same where possible. Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

No. 117.

A BRACKET CAGE-HOLDER.

Sent by H. Law, 13a Block, Quinnese Buildings, Lever Street, St. Luke's.

This is a sketch of a bracket I find very useful to hold cages. It is easily made of wood 9 in. by ⅜ in., and with a fret-saw can be made to look very neat. It can be painted, enamelled, or stained and varnished, and made to hold as many cages as the user requires. It prevents the seeds and husks going on the bird room floor, and keeps the birds from draughts during the moulting season. It can be made any size required, or to fit a corner in living room, etc. H. Law.

No. 118.

IMITATION "TREE" PERCH.

Sent by A. Smith, 10, Saxton Street, New Brompton, Kent.

I send you a rough drawing of a tree which I have had in my aviary for years, and think is good for Canaries or any birds to perch on. It acts like a real tree. It is made with springs (out of old air guns, or any old springs will do.) A piece of string about one and a half inches long, have both ends straightened out, so you can put one end into a perch about 9 in. long, and the other into the broom handle which forms the stem, or upright. It is a cheap article, only costing a few coppers. Birds will not get "corns" on their feet with a tree perch like this, because when they fly on one of the perches it gives with their weight, as an ordinary live tree would. It has a great advantage over the fixed perch. The things wanted for making this natural tree perch are as follows:—An ordinary broom handle for the upright. Drill small holes in it here and there for putting the ends of the small pieces of spring in. A weighty piece of wood, one foot square, for screwing broom handle on to form the base. Four pieces of wood, about one foot long, for supports. Nail them on to the square piece of wood and on the broom handle, to hold the broom handle steady. Several small pieces of old spring, with both ends straightened out about ½ inch, leaving about 1 inch of spring showing. A supply of ordinary perches with a hole drilled in one end, so the end of spring can be put in (the other end, of course, going in the broom handle). A. Smith.

THE YOUNG NATURALIST.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given for respectively the best and two second best cuttings or original bits about birds. Competitors must be children under sixteen years of age. All efforts must be briefly and clearly written, and ON ONE SIDE OF THE PAPER ONLY.

Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

Some of Uncle Peter's little nephews and nieces are very industrious in sending week by week pretty bits about birds that they have seen, or have read about in books. Many of the children, like the little Palfreymans, D. Bowers, and others, always send well-written pieces of real interest. Uncle Peter is always delighted to receive these contributions, and he would like to print them all, but, then, there would be no space for the others.

Thomas Shuttleworth, Owen Daly, and James Dytham write about the Canaries they hope to breed. When the young birds are actually hatched Uncle Peter hopes to hear more about them. J. P. Harvey and Eva Martin write about Tit Mice, but these children must please notice them a little more carefully, as the descriptions are not very accurate.

Ernest Oldham describes the Cuckoo, Frank New the Siskin, and Alfred New the Hedge Sparrow, but these particular pieces will not get inserted, because Uncle Peter had already received fuller bits about the same birds.

* * The Long-tailed Tit.

The Long-tailed Tit is a little bird with a very long tail—hence its name. I have heard of it being called the Bottle Tit, on account of the shape of its nest resembling a bottle. It is also called a Mumruffin. When out with my father once I saw five or six together, flying from tree to tree. They seemed to be eating buds or looking for little insects on the trees. They were very nimble, not stopping long in one place. The trees they were on were a kind of willow tree, and were growing beside a large pool of water. The nest of the Long-tailed Tit is oval shaped, with a little round hole in the side near the top. It is generally built in a briar or thorn bush. It is built with bits of fibre, wool and hair, interwoven, and all on the outside is the lichen off the bark of trees. It is lined with feathers, and the old mother bird lays as many as eight or nine eggs. It is, without a doubt, the prettiest nest of all British birds.—Sent by Harry Raby (age 10 years), 10, Chequers Grove, Bell Barn Road, Birmingham.

* The Siskins.

One day last winter, having risen from the breakfast table, I noticed two little birds, which I could not identify, climbing up and down some thugas, close to the window. They were extremely interesting as they ran up and down the branches with great rapidity. Then I noticed a cat crouched under a bush close by, but thinking them well out of her reach, and as I did not wish to frighten the birds, I left her alone. But as soon as I noticed her she made a huge leap into the air and caught one of the birds in her claws. I rushed out into the garden, but the cat had disappeared. On seaching about under the shrubs, however, I found the bird. I took it into the house, but it soon died of suffocation, caused by the bursting of a blood-vessel, as the blood flowed freely from its mouth. I took it to a naturalist in the town, and he said that it was a female Siskin, and rather rare. One had not been seen in Gloucestershire for five years.—Eric Barnard (age 14 years 3 months), Longmead, Tuffly, Gloucester.

* Birds in Winter.

You will be sorry to hear that the stormy weather last winter killed a lot of birds up here. They lay dead in large numbers, mostly Redwings. Father picked one for showing. It could not stand, but I gave it some mealworms, and it got all right again, and it is a good one now. The Redwing is like a Mavis, but it has red on its sides, and the spots are not so even; and it has a light-mark over the eyes. It comes from Norway, and spends the winter here. I feed mine on ground dog-biscuits, ants' eggs, meat meal and hard-boiled egg, and four mealworms each day. Father has a lot of birds—64 altogether (16 different kinds). My favourites are a grey Singing Finch and a white Hedge Sparrow, a long-tailed, glossy Starling, and the Redwing. I wonder why the Redwings do not fly to France, as teacher says the weather is warmer there? I help father all I can, and I am not afraid of the creepy-crawleys; but I don't like earwigs. —Bessie Steel (age 11 years), 23, Eskdaill Street, Dalkeith.

Mr. A. Ellis, of Newbiggin, Malton, has sent us a letter offering "to do a bit of exchange" with us. We are inclined to think this letter has been sent us in error, and was intended for some advertiser.

NOTICE TO SECRETARIES, BIRD DEALERS, BREEDERS, AND OTHERS.

PRINTED NOTEPAPER AT COST PRICE.

F. CARL, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet St., London.

Mr. Thos. Bennett's recent lecture on "Colour Feeding," before Bramley O.S., seemed to be much appreciated.

A First Feather Show will be held at Heywood on July 20th. Mr. R. D. McMurdo, 27, Market Place, can give further particulars.

A silver-plated cup for competition amongst the novice Crest breeders has been presented by Mr. A. Lazarus to the City and Suburban A.C.B.

The many friends of that well-known Metropolitan fancier, Mr. A. W. Curtis, will regret to hear that he is laid up by an attack of sciatica, and will join in wishing him a speedy recovery.

Mr. Battye's standard book on Yorkshire Canaries is now in the press. Breeders' cards are being accepted at 5s. each. Yorkshire breeders, send your instructions without delay.

Mr. T. Kinch, of High Street, Ramsey, Hunts., is in sore financial straits. Will friends who remember him in more prosperous days kindly communicate with him immediately, as his home is in danger of being lost to him?

The Original Crook C.B.S., writes Mr. Bowes, the Sec., have altered the date of their Annual Show to November 23rd, as they think that October 12th is much too early, on account of the bad breeding results up to the present.

In report of Bradford West C.B.A. Show, the 2nd, 3rd, vhc and hc, in the British class, should read Inman, not Mason. They were Goldfinch, Hawfinch, Yellow Bunting and Greenfinch, in the order named.—T. H. Inman.

We are requested to state that the Penzance and District Fanciers' Association have decided to hold their Annual Show on November 15th; also that the present Hon. Sec.'s name and address is J. Pearce Sampson, 4, Parade Street, Penzance.

At Shields C.B.S. First Feather Show, July 17th, at Gregg's Cafe, Laygate Lane, at 6 p.m., Mr. John Gillespie, of Gateshead, will judge. Will members please let me have their entries at least a day before Show? Entries may be left at Mr. Turner's Bird Shop, Laygate Lane.—W. Duke, Hon. Sec.

Mr. W. Rudd's enterprise in taking a whole page of Cage Birds at this season of the year, in order to uphold the supremacy of the Norwich Canary industry, has been much and favourably commented on. Fanciers as a class are indebted to Mr. Rudd for the liberal way he supports the Fancy Press, which, without advertisements, could not exist.

An interesting interview with Mr. Frank Spencer, of Keighley, by Mr. J. S. Clinch, of Liverpool, appeared in the "Bird World" for May. Mr. Clinch will be well known to bird lovers all over the country, as his duties take him from John o' Groat's to Land's End. Mr. Spencer practices the simple method—sound stock, healthy environment, and common-sense treatment.

Miss Price, of Clifton (Bristol), inquires whether it is compulsory for her, as an outside member of the Fancy, unattached to any society, to join the Cage Bird Union in order to exhibit at the shows? It is the peculiar part of the C.B.U. rules, as at present constituted, that fanciers who don't belong to the Union may exhibit anywhere; whilst members of affiliated societies, or associates themselves, have not the same liberty of action. But a great agitation is in progress on this point, and Miss Price will hear more about it shortly.

We have received from Chicago copies of "The Bird and Nature Magazine." This is an excellently-produced and well-illustrated periodical, containing many coloured plates, all reproduced by colour photography from the original birds, etc. Consequently, they are more accurate and scientific than the best drawings artists have been able to make. Some of the pictures are extremely beautiful, and we should be pleased to procure copies of the plates for any of our subscribers at threepence each, or copies of the magazine at 1s. 6d. each post free.

CLUB NOTICES.

No charge is made for notices of forthcoming meetings, but they can only be inserted once. Should secretaries desire to secure immediate insertion of their announcements exactly as written they can do so by prepayment at the rate of three words a penny.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence to pay postage expenses, &c., otherwise their letters will not receive attention.

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Post-cards are not admissible.

NOTE.—Readers are requested to carefully study past numbers and current issue before submitting questions. By doing so they may save trouble and unnecessary repetition.

CANARIES.

NORWICH PLAINHEADS.

Answered by J. H. PAYNE.

Loss of Head Feather.

A Constant Reader.—Give your Norwich, that you say are bare about the head and neck, 20 drops of the juice of a fresh lemon to 2 tablespoonfuls of water, and let them have this to drink for a fortnight. Procure some sulphur ointment and put some on the bare places with the tip of your finger. Do not put too much, or you will daub the feathers up, and this you want to avoid. Stop the rape seed and the millet, and give every day a little egg food, to which add a few drops of Parrish's Chemical Food, say 5 drops to each teaspoonful.

Growth on Feet.

A Novice.—I consider that what you think is a growth on each foot of your young bird is only a swelling. One can hardly think a bird ten weeks old would have a growth on each foot. I should recommend you to bathe it in tepid water twice a day. Then dry with a little cotton wool, and apply with the tip of your finger a little Lanoline.

Mal-formed Foot.

A.G.P.—Put 20 grains of boracic acid to two tablespoonfuls of warm water and bathe the bird's foot in this twice a day, afterwards drying with a piece of cotton wool. I take it from your letter that the hind claw has turned under the foot. If this is so, you will have to remedy it at once. Procure a piece of rubber tubing, such as is used on a baby's feeding bottle, and cut a piece about a quarter of an inch wide. Pass this over the bird's foot, and turn back the hind claw so that the rubber ring will hold it against the shank. Let this stop on for a fortnight, when the claw should then be all right.

Too Much Rape.

Nil Desperandum.—I have carefully gone through your letter, and the only conclusion I can come to is that you have been giving your young birds too freely of rape seed. Young Canaries cannot stand so much rape seed in its raw state, especially the black, or winter rape. A little best summer rape scalded and then well rinsed with cold water and allowed to dry, or partially so, when mixed with the usual egg food will not harm them. I should strongly advise you to discontinue using the raw rape with your youngsters in the future, and then I feel sure you will not have to complain of so many losses. When you commence giving your young birds water, boil it first, and continue giving it them in this state for a fortnight.

False Moult.

Showbird.—I strongly advise you not to attempt to colour feed your Norwich cock that you say started in a false moult six weeks ago, as you would only bring him out patchy in colour, and such a bird is no good on the show bench. I do not expect he will commence a fresh moult at the proper time. Should he run through and have a good moult, if you wish to exhibit him you will find some shows where they provide classes for natural colour exhibits.

YORKSHIRES.

Answered by H. W. BATTYE.

Hens Turning Lazy.

Avalon.—Sorry to hear of you losing so many young birds from three to seven days old. Your feeding seems to be really first-class, and cannot well be improved upon. You say that perhaps your hens have sweated them. But if they did so you would be able to see it, as the hens would be wet, or, at any rate, damp underneath, when they came off the nest, and the young ones would seem moist as well, and would not have that fluffy appearance they have when the hen is not sweating them. As you say the hens never seem to leave the nests, but sit on them, and the cock birds carry all the food to them, your hens have very probably become lazy. I should strongly recommend you to take the cocks away, and let the hens have the feeding to do by themselves. I may say this is my own way, and I am very well satisfied with it. I have very little doubt but that you will do better than you have done if you will follow this plan. You can hardly do any worse, so it is worth trying. Hope you will succeed in rearing those that are about due to hatch.

Where Does the Fault Lie?

No Name.—(1) It is not an easy matter to say where the fault lies in your rearing only one nest of young ones. You do not say anything as to how you feed, or what is your system of general management, though you do say you have been at considerably more trouble with your birds than formerly. Failure has been the case with many experienced breeders during the present season, and much of the non-success is undoubtedly due to the very unseasonable weather we have been having. We have had practically no suitable breeding weather up to date. The only consolation is that many others have done as bad (and some even worse) than you have. (2) Forced moulting of birds is not beneficial, as a rule, but if you place the bird in a cage by himself and cover him up with a light thin cloth, reaching three parts down the cage front, the bird will probably start moulting earlier than if not covered, especially if kept warm. If you intend colour feeding him, start at once by giving him, along with the others, say, half a teaspoonful of colour food to half a pint of egg food, gradually increasing the quantity till you get it to two teaspoonfuls to half a pint of egg food. Give to each bird half a teaspoonful of this mixture twice a day, in addition to their ordinary seed. Some remove the seed for a few hours daily until the birds have partaken freely of the colour food.

Contracting a Cold.

Philsboro.—From what you write I am of opinion that when you moved your bird from one cage to another in a different position in your room, you must have placed him in a draught, and probably the bird (owing to this being the case) contracted a cold, which caused him to make the noise you mention. Put him back in his old place, and give him fresh daily for one week in his drinking water 10 drops of the following mixture: Equal parts tincture of lobelia, paregoric, and good Scotch whisky. If not cured by that time, continue for another week, but only give half quantity, viz., 5 drops instead of 10. Don't attempt to breed with him this season.

The Non-filling of Eggs.

J. Green.—From what you write your feeding has been all that could be desired, and the reason you have had clear eggs has not, in my opinion, been through any fault of yours. As you say you have good reasons to think the cock bird did his part all right, I am inclined to think that you have got hold of a hen that is a non-breeder (what we call a barren hen), or else one that has been too hard bred with the previous season, or she may be an old, used-up hen, but as you do not say you know what age she is, I am hardly in a position to give an opinion in regard to this point. I have this season run two hens with one cock, and one has had five young ones in a nest, and the other only one fertile egg in both first and second nests, and yet she is a strong healthy hen, and has just reared five young ones, one of her own and four belonging to another hen. The cock is a second season bird, and has always filled his eggs except with this hen. Perhaps you have a similar case. Both my hens were young ones last year, and have never been out of my room.

CRESTS AND CRESTBREDS.

Answered by W. E. GREEVES.

Young Crestbred Unwell.

Herefordshire.—Your bird is suffering from a sickness that is common with young birds just after leaving their parents. Your treatment was correct; nothing can be better than bread and milk, which still continue to give. Be careful that it is perfectly sweet; it will be just as well if it has nothing else to eat until quite well. You may add to its water 6 to 8 drops of Parrish's Chemical Food daily, or better still, give 1 drop direct into its beak morning and night for aweek, after which you can then add it to the water until the bird gets well and strong. My own treatment is to use chlorodyne. I take a fine knitting needle, dip this in the chlorodyne, and give 1 drop direct into the beak, but I do not recommend its use to anyone, as it requires one thoroughly accustomed to handling birds to administer this in a proper and safe manner, it must not be dropped down the throat, but on the tongue. Some youngsters are a bother to get on to seed. Lightly crush a few seeds and mix with a few grains of the whole seed, stand this in a shallow pan on the bottom of the cage. It will, no doubt, take to seed in due course. I have generally found it so.

ROLLERS.

Answered by "SCHOOLMASTER."

A Big Hatch.

Only a Mug.—It is not an uncommon thing for a hen to hatch out six youngsters in one brood, but it is certainly uncommon for a hen to have nine eggs in a clutch. I suppose the other three eggs were unfertile? You have had very good luck up to the present, and I hope you will add these six young to the number. A first attempt, it should encourage you to go on. Many fanciers do not like a hen to have more than three young to attend to, as they fancy the three then get better treatment than if there were more present. But such are mostly fanciers who go in for exhibition birds, such as Norwich and Crests.

Loss of Young.

T. H. Brooks.—I fancy your breeding in an outdoor room has had something to do with the loss of your young. The weather has been so bad as to make it a poor year for such rooms. The feeding seems to be all right. You certainly are not "killing them with kindness," as you suggest, but simply feeding them on the lines adopted by the majority of fanciers. I suppose you see that the nests are free from red mite? If in any doubt, it would be as well to give a fresh nest when young are seven or eight days old. Shape the material with a hot hard-boiled egg. You can let the hens have a bath, or give them a light spray, when young are a week old. This freshens and stimulates them; in fact, a light spray can be given earlier. I should stick to egg and bread if I once started with it; the egg cake will do for the young when commencing to feed themselves. See that it is made light and crumbly—not a sticky, pasty mass. Don't mix anything with it, such as maw seed, etc., though some hens like a pinch of soft sugar amongst it. Try them with some seeding green food every day, such as chickweed. You must, of course, keep your room as free from damp as possible—also draughts—and this will not be easy such weather as we are having. You may have much better luck next round if it alters for the better. Half ounce of baking powder in your cake is far too much, and may have affected the young. Don't use it at all.

Moulting and Mating.

Thomas King.—(1) The fact of the colour only showing here and there up to the present shows that your birds have only just started on the moult. It is too early yet for them to be due to finish—many have not begun, as a matter of fact. A normal moult takes at least six weeks to get over, but two months is the safest time to allow. Circumstances, however, may cause a bird to exceed this period, and each bird has to be judged by itself, and not by time, as to when it has finished its moult. (2) The lump at top of the tail (above the vent) is the oil-gland, and this must on no account be touched unless inflamed, and causing a bird pain, which can easily be seen by it pecking at it and interfering with it. Then it should be pricked with a needle, and very gently squeezed, and afterwards anointed with a little fresh butter. (3) It will be much the better for you to buy a big stock Norwich cock to get up size, for the feather and coarseness coming with a Crestbred would want a lot of breeding out. You will save two or three seasons' work by doing this. It is not advisable to breed half-brother to half-sister in the ordinary way, but only when necessary for some special object.

How are Rollers Bred?

J.C.N.—Most certainly Roller Canaries are bred in captivity—just the same as Norwich and Yorkshires, etc., are here in England. There is no wild Canary in the Hartz Mountains. Roughly speaking, the Hartz Canaries mean those which have been bred for singing purposes, but not highly trained, while the Roller Canary is understood to be one which has been properly trained and (if a sufficient price be paid for it) fit to compete at singing contests. How the notion has got about that the German singing Canaries are caught wild in the Hartz Mountains I can't say, unless some silly paragraph to that effect has appeared in the daily press, and been "swallowed."

MISCELLANEOUS CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by "OLD JUDGE."

Birds Puffy.

A. Snow.—Young birds at the age you mention often sleep a great deal, and whilst they eat and drink well you need not trouble. It is quite usual for young birds to be very sleepy and mopy just before they commence to moult. Your feeding is all right, but don't give too much hemp.

Birds Plucked.

Colour.—The feathers will not moult again this year. If only a few have been plucked you could pull them again near the end of the moult, but if there are many it would be cruel to do so.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

Is it, or is it not?

J. McN.—The sample submitted to me is undoubtedly shepherd's purse; it is an excellent sample, too. Thus you will see that your suspicion that you had been supplied with the wrong article is not well founded. What it is you look upon in your neighbourhood as "shepherd's purse," I can't, of course, say. If you like to send me a specimen, however, I will try to name it for you. There are one or two heads of seeding grass among the shepherd's purse you send, but it is difficult to gather it in quantity without including same; still, grass seed is excellent stuff for birds. Have watched many birds feeding on it in their wild state, and even captive Goldies are very partial to some kinds.

A Parcel of Weeds.

J. W. Powley.—Canary fanciers are very conservative, as a rule, over the green food they offer their birds, and rarely get beyond chickweed, with sometimes groundsel and shepherd's purse. None of the weeds you send is generally gathered and given to birds, but the seeds therefrom no doubt figure more or less in "wild seed mixtures" (that is, the screenings from farmers' threshing machines). No. 1 is the Bladder Campion, common in corn fields and pastures. No. 2 I cannot identify for certain (it is not in fit condition), but it looks like one of the Brassicas. No. 3 is the Common Wild Navew, often confused with Charlock—the latter, however, has rough leaves. No. 4 is Common Sorrel. No. 5 looks like a piece of Good King Harry—commonly known as "fat hen," and excellent for British birds when ripe.

Moulting and Colour-feeding.

Outdoor aviary containing eight Greenfinches, four Bullfinches, two Goldies, two Chaffinches, one Siskin, and one Lesser Redpoll. Extra good birds. I am going to show. (1) Is it time to commence colour feeding at once? (2) How to make the feed? (3) Is it necessary to take away the ordinary seeds? (4) When and how shall I give sulphate of iron? (5) Do you advise stopping the hemp during the moulting time? (6) Would you give them maw seed? They will have as much green food as they can eat. I shall also give them blackberries (and privet berries later on). Can you advise anything else in the way of fruit (or otherwise) that would improve the colour?—NOVICE EXHIBITOR.

Novice Exhibitor.—You ask too many questions (three is the editorial limit), besides which, several are of such a nature as would take two columns to answer fully, and this, of course, I cannot do. I have other querists awaiting replies. You can't very well colour-feed in an outdoor aviary. The birds would not look at the colour-feed, probably. British birds need "getting on to it," as a rule. Read the extended replies appearing in our issues for June 1st (A. Wilson) and June 29th (J. Mackie), which touch on this point and give much of the information you ask. (1) If your birds show any signs of moulting it is certainly time. In any case, towards the middle of July is quite late enough to begin to break birds in to eating colour-feed. (2) If you use the egg-cake, as per receipe given "Saddler" this week, a good average full-strength colour-food will be one tablespoonful of sweet pepper to four tablespoonfuls of finely-crumbled cake (this is pretty strong, mind you). Of course, you will not commence with anything like this strength, but gradually work up to it. Add no oil, or anything else, to it. (3) You may have to give the colour-food amongst crushed seed (note previous replies above referred to). But you will doubtless find it necessary to withhold seed for periods, in order to get the birds on to the soft food. A good teaspoonful of linseed must be given every day; say after the first feed of colour-food. (4) I never give nor recommend sulphate of iron. Dissolve a small teaspoonful of citrate of iron in a good pint of water, and give this the birds to drink every third day. (5) A little hemp now and again can do no harm. As it is asserted to darken the plumage it should be useful with Linnets, Redpolls, Twites, etc. (6) A feed of maw seed once a week or so is useful. The green food is all right (especially seeding kinds) so long as it does not keep the birds off the colour-food. Any fruits they will eat with colour in them (straw, rasp, elder, mountain ash berries, black cherries, etc.) are useful; also ripe plantain, shepherd's purse, and the like, but when depending on colour-food it is, of course, difficult to offer these freely—the birds must eat up the artificial colour-food.

A Mating Trouble.

E.B.—You cannot go far wrong with the method you have adopted, though it would have been better to have destroyed the nest when you separated the couple, letting the hen Canary build another nest when again mated to the Linnet. Seeing that one egg out of the first batch contained a bird (though dead) there is certainly hope of the next clutch she produces being fertile. You have just about sufficient time left to take another nest from the pair. Remove the Linnet, by all means, as he seems to interfere with the eggs. But you can leave him in sight of the sitting hen if you like, as he might help to feed the young, if turned in when they are two days old. But put him back, should you do so, when you can watch him from a distance for an hour or two, and then, if he evidences any desire to act towards his offspring as he ought not to do, you can remove him at once. Many Linnets make excellent parents, and are very helpful to the hen. You want to give them a little hemp seed daily, in addition to canary and summer rape, with a pinch of maw and inga now and again. Go out, also, and gather some seeding chickweed and shepherd's purse, and small, tender dandelion leaves; they are excellent for muling couples.

A Curious Wing.

A.A.N.—I must confess my inability to answer you helpfully. I can't quite grasp what the trouble is. I have never heard of a bird with an abnormal wing such as you describe—i.e., "the left wing so large that it hangs down arch-way like, touching the perch, seeming very large when compared with the right." I agree with you that the wing cannot be broken, or the bird could not fly with the same apparent ease as the rest of your birds, and appear in first-class condition. Couldn't you get an experienced fancier near you to call and look at this "eye sore," as you term the young Linnet Mule? Often a broken wing will set so that it presents an appearance very like that which you describe. To leave the nest when sixteen days old is about the average time for Mules. If you caught up the Mule and examined it, you could tell for certain whether the wing was in reality larger than the other. If really an abnormality, then you can do nothing to alter matters.

Linnets not Singing.

Two cock Linnets, had since last November, in a box cage, 2 ft. long, partition down centre, kept in living room. They have sung, but not for the last two months or more. I feed mainly on canary seed, occasionally a little mixed seed and green food, but not much. One is fairly lively, but the other sits rather thick, with feathers puffed out. They will both open their mouths, and sometimes jump at you when you speak to them. How can I get song from them again, and what is the cause of their not singing?—HOPEFUL.

Hopeful.—If your birds are kept in a warm living room, that fact might not conduce to their good health. If they are plagued with red-mite, that also would not be good for them. But your feeding is the most likely thing to have got you into the trouble. It is very poor—Linnets want a better diet than just canary seed. I should give the one that sits "puffed out" two doses of dandelion juice (see a reply to an enquirer on a Goldfinch this week). Go to a good seedsman and get the following stock mixture made up:—Canary seed two pints, teazle and summer rape seeds one pint each, charlock and linseed half a pint each, maw seed a quarter pint. Give this daily, with a feed of some good maker's Finch mixture once a week. You must also (especially during the summer), get and give them some seeding green foods out of the lanes and fields, or off garden land. Send me a stamped addressed envelope and I will forward you a sample of shepherd's purse, a free supply of which would no doubt prove very beneficial to your two birds. Your birds are evidently tame, but you cannot expect any Linnets to thrive and sing for any length of time on such treatment as that you outline in your letter. Improve it right away, or you may soon have no Linnets left.

Taming a Blackbird.

A.A.M.—You made a mistake in buying your bird at the season of the year you did. Birds caught during the breeding season, or at the approach of it, are invariably exceedingly intractable and difficult to steady—many, indeed, will not live. Your bird will probably not get at all tame until after the moult is over; the moult, during its progress, generally quietens them down. The best advice I can give you is to hang Mr. Blackie's cage in a quiet corner of some unheated room wherein people are frequently moving about. Choose a well-lighted spot, if possible from which he cannot see the sky. Cover the cage half way down the front with some light material for a time, if it seems necessary. Feed and clean him out in a quiet way, and talk to him quietly (and get other people to do so) whenever you go near him. Also offer him such dainties as fat mealworms direct from the fingers. With patience and coaxing you should be able to overcome his natural fear of you, and once his confidence is gained the rest is easy. It is a matter of time, however.

Skylarks Breeding in an Aviary.

A pair of Skylarks have been in a small aviary in my back garden, two yards long, one yard high, and one yard from front to back, about six weeks, and the hen has built a nest and is now sitting on three eggs since Tuesday, July 2nd. I do not know whether they are fertile or not. I feed as follows, as a stock food:—Egg cake (as recommended for rearing young Canaries) grated and mixed with ants' eggs and dried flies; also about a dozen mealworms per day. Should I be fortunate enough to get young, how should I feed the old ones so that they can rear the young? Can they only feed with something of a lumpy nature, such as mealworms, or other kinds of insect or grub?—BRITHDIR.

Brithdir.—It is very interesting to learn of your success in inducing the pair of Skylarks to breed, especially so seeing the somewhat circumscribed area of the place in which you have the birds. I trust you will let myself and other readers know how the affair turns out in the end. I hope the eggs will prove fertile. Skylarks have previously been bred (and successfully) in aviaries. A case was recorded in CAGE BIRDS some six months or so ago. The then owner, I remember, went to considerable pains to collect his couple all the live insect food he could. I realise how difficult this is for anyone living in a town to do. Yet you certainly must try all you can to get live things suitable for offering to your pair. Don't hesitate to offer them any crawling things that seem at all likely subjects for the maws of the young ones—wood lice, earwigs, spiders, caterpillars, tiny garden worms, small grubs, etc., while mealworms should be offered as freely as you can afford. If you could get a regular supply of very small (young) cockroaches (black-beetles) you might find them a very useful and cheap food. Give the old birds a good insectivorous mixture, prepared with plenty of finely-minced green food (say young lettuce, chickweed, or clover grass). I don't think your egg cake recipe quite feeding enough. I would prefer some meat-meal, or dried and grated calves or bullock's liver mixed among it. You will find the old birds feed all right with such a menu, I feel confident (this will answer your last question).

Hawfinch in an Aviary.

W. Walsingham.—The Hawfinch is a well-behaved bird in an aviary, so far as my own experience goes, and I have never heard anyone else complain of him. He does not interfere with other birds, and other birds of interfering habits do not interfere with him—they keep one eye on his beak, and gracefully retire. If one hit on a vicious Hawfinch, however, I can imagine him doing some damage! This species, however, does not make at all a satisfactory inmate of an aviary—he is far too nervous and wild, and dashes about like a live thunderbolt if he chances to get scared or upset, frightening the other inmates of the place out of their wits. Any unprotected glass, unless pretty substantial, is in danger of breakage, too, if he get a fair tilt at it. A very tame Hawfinch—say a hand-reared bird—would be the best to turn out. I certainly don't think it impossible to breed from a Hawfinch. A friend of mine had a male this season which got amorous even towards your finger when you stuck same in its cage. He was in very "rank" condition, and deserved a trial as a Hybrid produeer.

Inmates of an Aviary.

Painter.—There are several pleasing Foreign Finches which can be kept with certain British birds in an aviary, and which combine to form a very nice collection. I shouldn't try to keep a Yellow-hammer with them personally. But with Linnets, and a Goldfinch, Bullfinch, Siskin, Redpoll, and Twite, you could hardly go wrong. Your aviary is quite large enough to allow of a few hens being put in, though it is true that attempts to breed usually land one in for a little trouble of one kind or another. You should use self-feeding seed-hoppers to put the principal seeds in (obtainable from most bird shops, or any advertisers of appliances in CAGE BIRDS) and put the "tit-hits" in earthenware "saucers"—say flower-pot saucers with hold rims. If the bath water is left in the place all day, the birds are sure to use it for drinking purposes. Water is generally best placed on the floor; it needs to be placed where it will not be easily fouled with droppings, husks, etc. Java Sparrows are reputed to be somewhat rough at times with weaker species, but I kept both Greys and Whites in my own aviary (a large outdoor one) among smaller birds, both British and Foreign, and never to my knowledge had ill result through it. Write our Mr. W. T. Page on this point.

Three Owners Wanted.

Interested.—I must congratulate you on the very clear descriptions of the nests and eggs you give, which enable me to identify them for you with certainty. No. 1, a domed nest, found at bottom of whin-bush, lined with feathers, and containing white eggs with pale brown speckles, mostly at the large end, belongs to the Willow Wren. Both Wood Warblers and Chiff Chaffs also build domed nests in similar situations; but the former does not line with feathers, and the latter's eggs are spotted with dark red. No. 2, built in a broom, near a railway bank, with dry grass, and lined with hair, a very lightly-made structure, containing five greenish eggs, marked with dark (almost black) spots, is that of the Greater White-throat. No. 3 built against a thorn hedge, with three bluish-white eggs, spotted with "almost red" marks at the large end, and the owner of which is a small, greyish, spotted bird, with a long, sharp bill, is the nest of the Spotted Flycatcher.

An Unsatisfactory Result.

Jumbo.—I do not know that there is any "cure" for your troublous affairs—you can only re-arrange matters in the hope of getting more satisfactory results in the future. Your hen may, of course, have been at fault (you can test this by running her for a nest with a cock Canary), but it is more likely to have been the Goldfinch. How old is she, by-the-bye?—not "worn out," I hope. Possibly, after having been with the Goldie, she would not "take to" the Linnet (some hens are funny in this way) and so be may not be to blame. All Goldfinches (and Linnets, too) cannot be depended on to fertilise eggs in captivity—this has been a bad year for them, though. Did you see the act of fertilisation take place at all? Many breeding birds lose a few feathers from the region of the head, but this does not affect results, providing they are otherwise healthy and in full song, as you describe yours as being. You do not say how you are feeding, but I presume on the lines I advise, and, if so, you cannot well do more. Should we get a spell of real hot summer weather shortly, it will send many captive Finches into rank breeding condition; but, of course, practically too late to be of use.

Insects Infesting Swifts.

Have sent some dead insects which I found on a Swift that fell down a bedroom chimney. There were about 50 of them on the bird, which seemed very weak. They ran all over the bird, and seemed to be able to go either backwards or sideways, just as easily as forward. What are they?—X.Y.Z.

X.Y.Z.—I inspected the horrible looking creatures you sent (as big as a pea) with interest. But I had often seen them before. I am afraid the tragedy you describe is a common one among Swifts and the Swallow tribe, for these birds have the misfortune to be preyed on by the particular insect you found on the poor victim which fell down your bedroom chimney. If you had had a copy of White's "Natural History of Selborne" on your bookshelf (and certainly no bird-lover ought to be without this old, but evergreen, work), you would have known what these "lice" were. The above species of birds are "often greatly molested with fleas." Our author tells us that the Hirundines alone seem to be annoyed with dipterous insects, so large in proportion to themselves as to be extremely irksome and injurious to them. They are hatched by the warmth of the bird's own body while incubation is proceeding, and crawl about under its feathers. A relative of this insect, is known to horsekeepers as the forest fly (or side fly, from its running sideways like a crab); it sucks the horse's blood, rendering it very restive and even half frantic. The kind which infests the Swallows, lives by sucking their blood, and when there are many on a bird they render it too weak to indulge in flying, and "quite stupid." Having seen the repulsive looking things, you will be quite able to appreciate this. It has ever been a mystery to me how such cruelty as is shown in the life history of this insect (and many others, too) could possibly come to pass under the rule of an "all-seeing and beneficent" Nature. Surely, if the insect he needed, it might come into existence without involving torture and death to other living creatures? Yet there are people who lift up their hands in horror at our own "cruelty" in merely caging a bird. Possibly these pests are what keep the Swallows from increasing amongst us; they are to be found in practically every nest.

Mainly about Moulting.

Could you oblige by informing me: (1) How to feed young Linnet-Canary and Siskin-Canary Mules; (2) how to colour feed same for exhibition; (3) if Linnets and Siskins are improved by colour feeding, and, if so, what colour pepper is best.—MOULT.

Moult.—(1) The feeding of young Mules was very fully gone into in the issue before the last (June 29th), reply to "Cuisine." What else is it you wish to know that does not appear therein? A good stock seed mixture when feeding themselves would be: Canary and teazle four parts each, summer rape two parts, hemp, linseed and charlock one part each, by measure. This would answer during the winter and the moult. Reduce the linseed to half a part, and stop the hemp during the hot summer weather, giving a little occasionally only. Green food (and other seeds as tit-bits) as previously recommended. (2) This question was also very fully answered in our issue of June 29th last. What other point do you want information on? I cannot possibly repeat the same things practically weekly. See reply to "J. Mackie"; note also other answers this week. (3) I think most Siskins are improved by colour feeding, but it wants to be very judiciously done, for I think an over-done, red-hot looking specimen is spoilt, and certainly not enhanced in beauty. You have to judge by the bird exactly how strong to give the feed, for a naturally rich Siskin needs less pepper than one which fails somewhat in natural colour. Many fanciers pepper feed their Linnets, I know, and some of the pale kind can do with it. But one has always to run the risk of possible loss of pencilling, which is rendered more obscure by the use of the pepper. A good sweet (tasteless) red pepper is the kind to use.

Gentles; and a Greenfinch.

Greenie.—Some fanciers, I have heard, hold that gentles have a scouring effect on birds if given to excess—but exactly what "excess" signifies I do not know. Personally, I have not noticed them have that effect, but I am always careful that I get them well scoured and clean, not the stinking, mightily offensive kind sometimes seen (or smelt). I don't know that you need be at all particular as to the quantity you give your Thrush daily; a dessert-spoonful won't hurt him, anyway. But let him have other live foods, in addition to the gentles. It is, of course, quite impossible for me to tell from a letter whether your Greenfinch is a likely breeder or not, and whether the next cluteh of eggs is likely to be fertilised. Do you see him paying the hen Canary any attention? Have you seen the act of fertilisation taking place? If the Greenie does not "fuss about" the hen, and feed her, I should say there is small chance of any eggs being fertile. Greenfinches are very "loving" birds once they get on good terms with a hen, and mean business. Your feeding is quite good enough, though you make no mention of green food. I presume you supply it, however.

My Recipe for Egg-Cake.

I should like to know (1) recipe for egg cake, (2) stock mixture for Goldfinch Mules on hard seed.—SADDLER.

Saddler.—(1) The best egg cake, in my opinion, for use with birds, either for colour feeding or giving to young birds just commencing to feed themselves, is one made as simply as possible, and without any admixture of baking powder, salt, butter, and the like. Here is my own recipe: Take five new-laid eggs and beat up yolks and whites separately, the latter into a stiff froth. Mix into the yolks, gradually, six ounces of castor sugar. Take half a pound of flour, and stir amongst it a heaped-up dessertspoonful of Plasmon powder (or any dried-milk powder). Then gradually mix in the eggs among the flour, thoroughly. The proper way is to pour over a little of the white, then of the yolk, gradually incorporating the whole quantity of both. If not sufficiently moist, sprinkle a little milk (or half milk, half water) over, and work it in. Bake in a shallow cake tin, covered with grease-proof paper, in a moderately quick oven, till just nicely browned. Time, about 20 minutes (it varies somewhat, of course, according to the oven). When this is "stale," crumble it up finely, and mix in the colour food in the quantity desired. Stored in tins, in a cool, dry place, it keeps a long time. If in a hurry to use the baked cake, it can be roughly broken up and dried in a slow oven, when it will readily crumble. I prefer to mix in the colour food while it is still slightly moist (i.e., not quite as dry as "sawdust," so to speak). I used to bake about every week or ten days, and mix sufficient colour food to last me till the next cake was prepared and ready for use. If you want two strengths of colour food (for birds at various stages of the moult) you have only to use two, or more tins. It is a very nourishing cake, and Mules, etc., will thrive splendidly on it, even if kept entirely without seed. (2) See another reply this week for stock seed mixture for Mules.

Wagtails and other Things.

G.O.S.—I should think the grey-looking Pied Wagtail is a hen, and the dense black one a cock. The latter is the better show bird, of course. Adult males are much purer in white and deeper in black than are the adult hens. Young Pied Wagtails resemble the adults in winter plumage—i.e., have the throat white, with a black patch on the fore-neck. As regards the show bench, Pied Wagtails stand but little chance in competition against Grey, Yellow and Blue-headed Wagtails. I don't wonder at your bird getting thin while you are giving Epsom salts, lemon juice, and chlorate of potash. What a horrible mixture!—and what on earth are you giving it for? It is better food the bird wants—plenty of ants' eggs in the stock food, with some dried silkworm pupæ as well (it is advertised in our columns). Also it must have a good feed of mealworms every day, in addition to all the other live food you can get. Hunt it out a few spiders. Get a bottle of tasteless cod-liver oil from a chemist, and well mix six or seven spots daily amongst its food, which should also have some finely-minced green food (say lettuce) mixed with it. Hardhead is another name for knapweed. A non-fed Chaffinch, if of good natural colour, can certainly win on the show bench. The head feathers of the bird will come all right again at the moult, I feel sure. If not, it will be useless for show purposes.

Nothing Wrong with Bullie.

C.C.N.—There is nothing whatever the matter with your Bullfinch. The plain fact is: he wants a sweetheart. You say that this last fortnight he has commenced to plaster lumps of chewed seeds and green food about his feet and perches, and then to proceed to eat it up again. This is not a sign of indigestion. If he had a mate, you would find that he would put all these dainty morsels of food into her little bill, and that, if she liked his looks, and were kind to him, all sorts of "billing and cooing" would follow, with the possibility of a nest and young ones. All male Finches regurgitate food in this manner, and feed their mates, when in "sweet-hearting" mood—such, in fact, is one of the best possible signs of a Finch being in breeding condition. I believe it is not unusual (judging by certain advertisements one sees about) for other male creatures to pop toffee and such-like dainties into the mouths of their fair ones, when in the said sweet-hearting mood. Don't give him too much stimulating seed, such as hemp, niger, maw, or sunflower, but let him have a liberal daily allowance of seeding wild foods.

Brieflets.

Gold of Pleasure (E.E.).—No, it is not gold of pleasure you send. The tiny yellow flowers (as with shepherd's purse) are carried at the head only.

More Weeds (G. Johnson).—The one with heart-shaped seed-pods is shepherd's purse. The other it not gold of pleasure (note reply to "E.E.") An easy way out of your difficulty will be to buy some gold of pleasure seed (get the genuine), and sow in the garden. It will soon grow, and then you can hardly fail to identify it when you meet it out in the fields.

What Bird? (M. Purdie).—I really cannot name the bird you describe. It might be a Redpoll or a Twite. The latter is a slim bird, and has a yellow beak. The former has a yellowish beak, tipped and streaked with black, and is a smaller, shorter, and more cobby-built bird. But neither is "dark yellow underside of body." This, if accurate, points to it being a Mule (Canary blood in it). Or it might be an escaped Foreign bird—as, by-the-by, may have been the bird I was questioned about the week before last by "A. L. Marchant." I should say it is a cock, as it shows sings of singing.

Are Skylarks "Game" Birds? (J. Sellers).—Skylarks are "game" birds so far as "scrapping" goes (in the breeding season). But they certainly are not Game birds—that is, classified as such by ornithologists. Skylarks are members of the great order Passeres (which includes practically all the birds of interest as possible cage pets), whereas the Game birds belong to the order Gallinæ—very far removed.

Goldfinch Ailing (No Name).—For two days mix half a teaspoonful of dandelion juice (from a chemist) in every two tablespoonfuls of the bird's drinking water, giving fresh each day. Afterwards give three more doses, but on alternate days, giving plain water in between. Give hemp every day; also a small teaspoonful of maw seed.

Bullfinch Ailing (C.J.B.).—I do not think your bird has asthma. More likely he is over fat, owing to the warm room and the stimulating food he has had. Warmed rooms are bad for Finches, and especially so in spring and summer. Treat your bird exactly as advised "No Name" this week on a Goldfinch. If no improvement at the end of ten or twelve days, write me again. Stop the egg food and the hemp seed; give seeding shepherd's purse and chickweed.

Shepherd's Purse (Miss Johnson).—No sample reached me with your letter, so I am afraid you must have forgotten to enclose it. It is not usual to allow Canaries to have four broods in a season (that is, to rear four broods), as most fanciers think this one too many, and probably rightly so, for the great strain must lower the vitality of the birds, and render them more liable to go wrong under the strain of the moult.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S.

Blue-fronted Amazon.

My bird is a good talker, and has been in my possession two years; but it is always biting its wings and screaming. There is no sap on the ends of the quills, and it appears to be getting thin. It is fed on "Parrot mixture" and ripe fruit. What is the remedy?—THOMAS PICKEN.

Thomas Picken.—Feed the bird on a mixture of canary, oats, wheat, Indian corn, dari, hemp, and sunflower seeds. Also give ripe fruit, plain biscuit, nuts, greenfood (lettuce, green peas, etc., as in season), cuttlefish, and water ad lib. Also supply it with a little boiled maize (this only keeps fresh one day) twice a week, and so long as the bowels do not become watery loose, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia over the boiled maize. For the next month well colour its drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food, only supplying clear water once a week. Keep it occupied as much as possible—cotton reels and a piece of wood to chew up, and if there are any wounds on the wings, lightly anoint such with Spermacetti ointment. Examine its plumage, and if there are any insects, spray with Quassia solution. If the habit has been going on for any lengthy period, it will take much time and patience to break the bird of same.

Insectivorous Songsters.

I have at present in cages various British Softbills from Thrush to Nightingale. What Foreign songsters can I keep with them (males only), and can they be left out all winter? Will they take any harm from eating the same food?—S. SHORE.

S. Shore.—As regards food, I should advise you to take a little of each of the foods you have been giving in several hoppers, and then note which the birds most favour when they are turned in altogether. You will have to note their several dispositions, and cage up such as will not settle down, but continuously threaten the lives of their fellow captives. A good mixture for Foreign Softbills is to use either Game, Partridge, or chicken meal, or ground puppy biscuit as a base, adding equal parts of best ants' eggs, dried flies, dried pupæ (fine ground), and crumbled sponge cake. For use scald a portion of the first named, and then knead in equal parts of the other ingredients, when it should be crumbly moist. Such a mixture would not harm any of your British Softbills. You must also supply ripe fruit and live insects, mealworms, beetles, spiders, etc. You would find most of the Foreign Thrushes good songsters, and handsome birds, full of character, and not likely to be unduly aggressive with the birds you already have, also the Pekin Robin, Persian Bulbul, and also the Indian Shamah; the latter would require to be watched till its demeanour was ascertained, but in such company I think it would be safe. It is not much use giving separate names for the Thrushes, as you will have to take such as happen to come to hand; they are not everyday things on the market. You will not find much, if any, more difficulty in keeping the Foreign Softbills than you have had with the British. Providing a good weather-proof and well-lighted shed is attached to your aviary they will successfully winter out of doors, that is, the Foreign. Mr. Weston will reply as to the others.

Budgerigars in Room.

I have five pairs in a room, and they keep stripping off the plaster. How can I stop this? I supply sand, egg shells, and mortar rubbish.—W.E.H.

W.E.H.—You have no remedy against the stripping off of the plaster, save by covering it with small (half-inch mesh) wire netting, fixing same, say, an inch from the walls. No matter how much mortar rubbish, crushed egg shells, and grit you supply on floor, this will not keep them from the walls, and your only remedy is covering them with netting or zinc.

Parrot and Parrakeet.

Herewith is a description of my bird. What kind is it? Will it talk?—DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES.

Doubts and Difficulties.—It is some species of Ring-necked Parrakeet, the females of which have no ring round the neck. And it is possible your bird is a female, or, possibly, an immature male. Most of these birds learn to talk fairly distinctly, though individuals vary much in this respect, and undoubtedly yours will ultimately pick up a few words. Note my reply to "Onward" in this issue, which covers the ground of your query.

Budgerigars and Cockateels.

In an outdoor aviary I have two pairs of Budgerigars and one pair of Cockateels. The Budgerigars have laid five eggs each time, of which only one has been fertile. The Cockateels have had three nests, two in first, eight in next, and now four. With the first two lots all were unfertile, of the last two were fertile, but young died in shell. Can you tell me the reason and remedy?—V.G.R.

V.G.R.—The cause is the same in both cases, probably mainly due to the quite unspeakable weather we have experienced so far this season, and your case is not an isolated one. At the same time, I should omit the hemp from their diet, and supply a small quantity of oats daily, also liberal supplies of grass in flower (grass in the ear), cuttle-fish, and lightly colour their drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food for a few weeks. Your later nests should then turn out better, unless you have worn-out males. You do not state size of your aviary, but if they are at all crowded this may be the cause, birds materially interfering with one another under such conditions.

What Bird?

It came from South Africa, is yellow and dappled green. Most of the feathers, however, appear blackish at base; this is only apparent when feathers are blown up. What is it, and will it breed with a Norwich hen?—J. WEIGHTMAN.

J. Weightman.—It is either the Wild Canary (Serinus canarius) or the Grey-necked Serin (Serinus canicollis), this last being also known as the Cape Canary. Undoubtedly he would mate with a Norwich hen, but, of course, as with all Hybrid breeding, results are uncertain, sometimes one or two season passing by before any success is attained; again, at others they will settle down and breed at once. There are other Serins which would fit your description, but I think it is S. canicollis, which is a handsome bird and a sweet singer. It is about the size of a Norwich Canary.

Grey Parrot Wheezing.

My bird had always been in the best of health, and is about 27 years old. It is often wheezing. What is the matter with it, and how must I treat?—EAGLETON.

Eagleton.—It would have been much easier to have given you a definite reply if you had supplied details of your methods of feeding and treatment. For one day put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in two tablespoonfuls of water, and let the bird have only this to drink for the day. Get from your chemist the following mixture:—Ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills, and glycerine in equal parts; for use, take half a teaspoonful of the mixture to two tablespoonfuls of water, and let the bird have this only for drinking purposes for the next seven to ten days. Keep the bird warm and out of draught, and feed as directed in this column almost weekly. If there is no improvement a week hence, you had better repeat query, giving full details as to the bird's diet, etc., and also as to any symptoms occurring during the interval.

Treating Rusty Parrot Cage.

I have a Parrot cage that has gone very rusty through not being in use. What paint or enamel can I use that will not injure the bird?—G.M.T.

G.M.T.—Thoroughly wash and scald out the cage to remove any vermin, etc., then give the wire work two coats of Brunswick black, which dries very quickly and is quite inoccuous. Paint the base a light blue-grey with Aspinall's enamel or some such preparation. Do not make any use of the cage till it is quite dry and hard.

Cause of Death among Lories.

(1) My birds are all in aviaries; said aviaries consist of well-built rooms, that can be warmed, and an outside flight. I have recently lost four birds that had stood the winter well. In each case P.M. showed inflammation of the lower bowel and cerebral hæmorrhage—illness and death came on very suddenly; weather conditions were hot sun and a very cold east wind. Am I right in supposing that these conditions would cause the symptoms named? (2) I have recently lost a pair of Varied Lorikeets that had been in my possession for about 18 months, from emaciation, with inflammation of the larger intestine and slight congestion of lungs, respectively. Illness sudden and short. All my birds are fed in the same manner, and the remainder, a very large series, are in good condition.—E.J.B.

E.J.B.—(1) You do not say what kind of birds these were, but I am assuming they are Parrakeets of some kind. Some species of these birds have an annoying habit of going off suddenly, when apparently in the best of health and condition, Lories being specially liable to so go off this way. A post-mortem reveals some trouble such as yours, and often of long standing. I never give bread and water sop to the general run of Parrakeets, neither do I permit these to have access to milk sop. Roughly, my birds get a mixture of canary, millet, hemp, oats, dari, wheat, and sunflower seeds, with green food, ripe fruit, and for such as will take it, a few pieces of plain biscuits (dry), with other essentials, cuttlefish, water, etc. This spring and early summer has been a record, and the weather simply unspeakable, and quite sufficient to account for their illness, which I should say arose from taking a sudden chill during the extremes we have been passing through. (2) My Varied Lorikeets, which have been out of doors since early May (at the Zoo all the winter), are in splendid condition; they are very conservative in their diet, practically taking nothing save green sweet water grapes and milk sop. The milk sop I prepare so:- Crush two Osborne biscuits to powder, one teacupful of milk, and two spoonfuls of castor sugar; boil the whole up together; it will keep fresh 24 hours. Your Varied Lorikeets, I am afraid, had some septic trouble of longish standing, in spite of their apparent good health. At the same time, it is quite possible a sudden chill, as in first query, set up the trouble, and your losses are largely due to the extraordinary inclemency of the weather. Lories generally, I think, are fond of, and do better with, a little more variety than you are giving; where they have plenty of exercise you need not be afraid of sugar boiled rice—sweetened stewed apple of a syrupy consistency. I don't like flights which the wind can blow through (that is the fault I find with the Western Aviary at the Zoo), and I should advise you to put wood and glass outside the netting on the east side of your flight.

Blue Tanager with Inflammation.

Herewith are full particulars as to my treatment, but as it has not yielded to any extent, and the bird is a blue one and a great favourite, I shall be glad if you can help me with advice as to treatment.- R. MILLSUM.

R. Millsum.—Cage the bird up separately, keep it warm and quiet, and for the time being let its diet consist of ripe banana, sponge cage, slightly moistened with boiled milk, and a little milk sop; prepare the latter so: take one Osborne biscuit (crushed), half a teacupful of milk and two teaspoonsful of sugar, boil the whole up together, when it will keep fresh twenty-four hours; but with this bird, while it is ill, prepare fresh twice daily. Your treatment has certainly kept the inflammation in check. Give 3 drops of olive oil (pure) direct to the mouth, three or four doses, say twice daily, that is, unless the bird become unduly scoured, in which case I should only give it twice; also anoint the vent with the olive oil, which can be continued till the inflammation yields. As the bird recovers strength and its appetite revives, let it have mealworms and its ordinary diet, and also lightly colour its water for a few days with Parrish's Chemical Food. Yes, it is a beautiful species, and I don't wonder at it being a favourite with you. I have a pair (I presume you mean Tanagra episcopus, popular names are very misleading) flying loose in my garden aviary which are in very fine condition. Hope your bird will soon pick up strength and condition.

What Parrot?

(1) General colour, green; beak, red; breast, greyish green; patch of dull red on each shoulder; tail, greenish yellow; underside, yellow; length about 12 in. What kind is it? (2) What is its proper food? (3) Approximate value? (4) Can it be taught to talk?—ONWARD.

Onward.—(1) It is one of the varieties of the Ring-necked Parrakeets (Palæornis); very probably a female. (2) Canary, oats, Indian corn, hemp, wheat, dari, and sunflower seeds; two parts of the first two and one part each of the others; well mix, and always keep a supply in the cage. Also supply ripe fruit, plain biscuit, green food, nuts, cuttlefish, grit, and water (the latter ad lib). Do not give tea, coffee, or milk slops, or any kind of animal food. (3) As yours is a newly-imported bird and not yet talking, its probable value is about 10s. 6d. (4) Yes; most of the Ring-necks learn to talk fairly distinctly, and are also good mimics. Individuals vary much as to their teachableness. Keep the bird where it will hear plenty of conversation; also try the constant repetition of short phrases and words, and it should ultimately pick up many words and short sentences. Much patience is required with many individuals.

Waxbills, Budgerigars, etc.

(1) The cause of restlessness is timidity. How can I make them more friendly. (2) My Budgerigars have plenty of crushed eggshell and mortar rubbish, but do not appear to eat any. Has the cold weather anything to do with egg binding? (3) My Budgerigars like groundsel, I presume that does as well as lettuce? (4) Please tell me fair prices for Gouldian Finches. Should they be kept in pairs separate from other birds?—DORKING.

Dorking.—(1) You can do no more than being very quiet and still in your movements when attending to them or near their cage; study their fancies, and try to tempt them with some tit-bit, and they should gradually become accustomed to you and learn to look for your approach. (2) Yes, the present season has been a very bad and risky one for all breeding birds, and I fear there have been many losses from egg binding. At the same time, though you have not observed it, I am of the opinion that your birds do pick up some of the mortar and crushed egg shells, even though you have not seen them doing so. (3) Groundsel will do quite as well as lettuce, but the latter is an exceptionally good winter food (though not cheap at that season); at the present time as much grass in the ear should be given as they will eat (it is their natural food), nearly every garden produces this. (4) There are no Red-headed Gouldian Finches on the market at the present time. Black-headed Gouldian Finches are worth from 17/6 to 20/- a pair. If you wish to make any attempt at breeding they must be caged up in pairs, and under any circumstances they must have a roomy cage. Kept in confined quarters, Gouldian Finches soon "shuffle off." I know many instances in which, quite apart from breeding, two pairs in a cage has resulted in such continuous fighting that they have had to be separated.

Newly-imported Firefinches, etc.

(1) I have a pair each of Zebra Finches, Cordon Bleus, and Cutthroats in a perfect state of health and happiness. I have recently purchased some Fire Finches, but they all died within three days of arrival. Can you tell me what was wrong? How should I treat newly-arrived small birds? (2) The birds when at rest peck round one another's throats. Is this affection or insects? (3) My aviary is fitted up in conservatory; when this is fumigated with nicotine, will that kill any red mite in the aviary? Of course, removing the birds.—ZEBRA.

Zebra.—(1) You lost your Fire Finches from some form of septic disease, contracted during the voyage to this country, consequent upon insanitary conditions of importation, and I am of the opinion that no treatment could have saved these particular birds. Keep newly-imported Fire Finches (and also Cordon Bleus) in a moderate sized cage, in a warm room (not stuffy), give them canary, white, brown, and spray millet, a little slightly moistened sponge cake, and sprays of foliage (from rose and fruit trees or vegetable growths) that are covered with green or black fly. If you can procure them live ants' cocoons (so-called eggs) would also be helpful, and, as a rule, are greedily eaten; a small turf is also appreciated by the birds to pick over; grass in flower should be offered as green food, water supplied for drinking and bathing, and grit supplied, at first with caution, that is, only a little at a time. Till we can get the conditions of importation altered, I am afraid the same frightful mortality that exists among Fire Finches and Cordon Bleus must still go on in spite of all we can do for them. (2) Mostly affection, and assisting one another with their toilets, that is, preening the feathers. Though many small ornamental Finches form the annoying habit of plucking one another's heads and necks bare. (3) The nicotine would undoubtedly be fatal to the mites (but not to the nits or eggs), if dense enough and continued for fairly lengthy period, say, from six to eight or more hours.

Sexing Zebra Finches.

How can I tell the sexes of these birds?- MRS. SIDNEY.

Mrs. Sidney.—Adult male: Top of head, neck and upper back, pearly-grey; lower back and wings, brownish-grey; upper tail coverts, white, regularly barred with black; tail, black; the front of the cheek has a white patch edged with black; ear coverts, chestnut; throat and chest, silvery-grey, each feather barred with black, separated from the remainder of under surface by a black band; remainder of under parts, white, slightly washed with buff; sides, chestnut, thickly spotted with white; beak, bright red; legs and feet, reddish flesh colour. The female is an unpretending but pretty bird, clad in lighter and dark greys, and entirely lacks the chest barrings, black band, chestnut ear coverts and sides of the male. These are very hardy and pleasing little birds, perhaps the easiest of all Foreign birds both to keep in health and breed.

Grey Parrot in Rough Plumage.

How can I get my Grey into fine plumage? It is always very rough in feather; fed as you direct; lively; splendid talker.—J. P. LAKIN.

J. P. Lakin.—During the summer let it have a bath twice a week; if it will not bathe it should be sprayed, and, of course, kept out of draught till dry. Let it have a good supply of cuttlefish, and a little greenfood, lettuce, green peas, etc., as in season. Mix a little flowers of sulphur with its seeds, a little of which will adhere, or may be made to do so, by just putting a few spots of water over them, and then sprinkling with the sulphur. Keep a piece of cuttlefish in cage, and a good supply of ripe fruit, and well colour drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food for a month or longer, giving clear water to drink every fourth day. I have a very rare Hawk-headed Parrot which would not preen or shake out its feathers after a bath, which we had to give, taking the bird in the hand and immersing it in the water, afterwards rubbing it dry with a towel; now it enjoys its bath, but looks for us to put it in, though it will splash itself over with water from the beak; it also preens and shakes out its feather now. Carefully avoid draught till the bird is dry; this applies to any season of the year.

Quails in Captivity.

Is it possible to keep a pair of Quails in captivity? What size cage would they require? What food? Will they live through the winter?—F.H.

F.H.—Yes; but they really require a similar erection to a small fowl-house and run. In fact, a cheap house or cage could be chosen for these birds from the catalogue of any builder of poultry houses, etc.; consult our advertisement columns. You must provide a dry bed of sand for them, and it is also advisable to keep one wing cut, as when alarmed these birds suddenly rise, and seriously damage their heads against the top of the aviary if the above precaution is not taken. Diet: Any kind of small chicken corn, with the addition of canary and millet seed, a little game meal, and a few of some kind of live insects, such as mealworms, beetles, spiders, caterpillars, live ants' eggs; in fact, almost any kind of insect that crawls or flies that you can capture for them. They would live through the winter, providing they were not kept in a damp situation; in fact, require little or no more protection than common fowls.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for a reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post-mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Canary (E.W.).—Awaiting fee.

Bramblefinch (E. Tylor).—Chronic enlargement of liver, recent inflammation, extending to lungs. "Chill," terminating in apoplexy.

Young Canary (T.B.).—This bird appears to have died of "Canary Fever." A description of duration and symptoms of illness should always be sent with bodies.

Canary (W. G. Brooman).—An apoplectic seizure is accountable for this sudden death. It has been observed that unmated Canaries are very susceptible to such seizures.

GENERAL.

Answered by the EDITOR.

Cutting (C.C.).—Many thanks, the item is most interestiug.

Cutting (W.L.L.).—Accept our thanks for your courtesy in forwarding cutting.

Report (J.W.N.).—Thanks for kind remarks. Always pleased to do what we can to help.

Cutting (W.L.V.).—Many thanks for thinking of us. We appreciate these little kindnesses greatly.

Report (W.R.M.).—The show you mention was not advertised with us, and we have no note of it.

Photo (J.L.).—Thanks for interesting picture and good wishes. We congratulate you on your success.

Hybrids (E. Ray).—It is against our rule to give addresses. We should, however, be pleased to forward a letter if sent to us properly stamped.

Unfair Tactics (S. Shaw).—Bless you, we don't at all mind what you are objecting to on our behalf. We rather like it. Thanks for good wishes, which we reciprocate.

Report (R.H.F.).—Many thanks for report. We had already received one from another source which was in type, thus could not use yours, which we regret. Glad to know you are going strong.

Wigan Show (A Visitor).—Why have you not the courage to sign your name? We never take notice of anonymous letters. Enclose your name and address with any future letter to us, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

Queries and Good Wishes (T. King).—Many thanks for the nice things you say, and for recommending our journal to your friends. The latter is just what we desire all readers to do. Your queries will be found answered by "Schoolmaster" this week.

First Feather Shows (Edgar Vincent).—We do not think it right to try to impart a fictitious importance to shows whenever one of our own staff officiates as a judge, and we will offer no similar encouragement to the appointment of the press representatives of any contemporary. First Feather Shows are frequently misleading indices to the subsequent positions secured by prize winners.

SUNDERLAND.

The show of young Canaries, Mules, and British Birds was held on July 6th, and turned out to be one of the best First Feather Shows held in the North of England. Sixteen classes were provided, and received an entry of close on 80, which, considering the poor breeding season, must be considered most satisfactory. The exhibits, taking them all round, were an exceptionally fine lot, the strongest competition being in the Norwich section, where a rare team was put down by Mr. A. Brown, of Gateshead, his winning buff being greatly admired by those present, and was christened "Pride of the Wear" by the Sunderland members. As is usual at Sunderland, Secretary Gordon had everything in grand order, and ably seconded by Messrs. Farrah, Riseborough, Swan, J. M. Walker, W. Reid, and Pemberton, everything was carried out in a masterly manner. Mr. J. T. Clarke had the placing of the prize cards, and his awards gave the greatest satisfaction to all concerned. NOR. CAMBRIDGE C.B.S.

Held July 6th. Although the weather has not been so favourable this year for the breeding and rearing of Canaries, nearly 60 birds were staged, and among them were several promising youngsters that are sure to make names for themselves later on. Year by year the quality of the birds has shown decided improvement, until now Cambridgeshire breeders are able to hold their own at the large shows throughout the country, as is evidenced by the fact that one of the members has had inquiries for stock from so far afield as the United States, and shipped a consignment there two weeks ago. On Saturday the silver medal for best bird was won by Mr. A. E. Brooks, with a Crested Norwich, showing good length of feather and droop. This gentleman was also successful for Norwich yellow, while in buffs Mr. C. Handley was prominent. The classes for Yorkshires were particularly well patronised, Mr. J. Gifford carrying off the first prize for yellows, and Mr. W. Casey supplying the first two birds in the buffs. This year a new feature was introduced, classes for British birds being added, and they proved very popular with the members, good entries being obtained. Mr. C. G. Williams' Goldfinch, which was first in its class, is an excellent specimen, with a deep and expansive blaze, but it was closely run by a smart one entered by Mr. C. Lambert. The staging arrangements were superintended by Mr. T. S. Moore, the secretary, and the judging was undertaken by Mr. J. Harrison, St. Ives, whose awards gave every satisfaction. NOR. PETERBOROUGH C.B.A.

The annual Spring Show was held at Mr. E. W. Beech's Aviaries, on June 27th, the birds being staged in the billiard-room, a grand place for a show, being well lighted and free from all draughts. It was about the best show the Society has held at this time of the year, and the thanks of the members are due to Mr. Beech, for his kindness in placing his grounds and aviaries at their disposal. The latter proved a great attraction to the visitors, including numerous large birds of prey, and had the evening been fine, no doubt a far greater number of townsfolk would have turned up. Turning to the birds, the backwardness of the season no doubt made a difference to the Canary exhibitors, while many of the British birds were breaking into moult, and, of course, were not in the best of condition, the Bullfinch and A.O.V. class being the greatest offenders in this respect; but many of the exhibits, if fortunate during the moult, will be nuts for others to crack. Points specials were won by Messrs. Sales, Popple, and Cocks. The Hon. Sec., Mr. H. C. Lilley had everything well in hand, and with our old friends, Messrs. Sales and Smith, as stewards, the birds were as comfortable as at home. Canaries and Mules were judged by Mr. J. Skinner, the British being taken by the President of the Society, Mr. S. H. Mays, who kindly came over for the purpose, and seemed to give satisfaction all round. NOR. YELL. (5): 1, Webb; 2, 4, Popple; 3, Dawson; vhc, Gage. BUFF (4): 1, 2, Popple; 3, Dawson; 4, Watts. CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

The members of the City and Suburban A.C.B. are to be heartily congratulated on the splendid success of their Young Bird Show, held Saturday last, July 6th, at Headquarters, the Church Institute, Marylebone, W. It was by general consent conceded to be the finest of its kind London has shown us up to the present this season. There was a grand total of 189 entries (some 40 more than last season), and it speaks well for the all round strength of the Association that no fewer than 77 of this number should be Hybrids, British and Foreign birds. In the British and Foreign sections, in fact, we had a display such as few open shows can rival in the height of the season, and that it proved a decided attraction to the visitors goes without saying. The birds were staged in attractive manner, and an impressive display of cups, trophies, plate and medals graced, as usual, the centre of the excellent room used by the society. Visitors turned up from far and near, and well filled the show during greater part of the day, there being almost a "crush" at night. They had some very good birds to look at, the quality in all the sections being well up to the mark, and in many showing a distinct advance on previous years. The champion Norwich Plainheads were a hot lot, the best bird in the show appearing therein, a new face, a clear buff, staged by Messrs. Cooper Bros., securing the silver cup. This was a grand youngster, very typical all over, and of lovely quality, and put down just at the right moment, which counts heavily in a young bird's favour, of course. Other very taking Norwich were staged by Messrs. Curtis and Rennie (champion), Burn and Hart (amateur), and Kelly and Wheller (novice). The champion Crest section was a failure, a disastrous breeding season being the reason, and in the amateurs Mr. Lazarus had things all to himself. In the novices, however, competition was surprisingly warm, the classes being large, and Messrs. Offord, Bryant, Ashby and Sanders staging some nice exhibits. The novices should be further stimulated next season by the cup generously presented on their behalf by Mr. Lazarus. The Yorks. classes felt the loss of Mr. Daintry's usual team, but mustered strongly and in good quality, the novice classes again being exceptionally big. Messrs. Rennie, Easterling, and Hawes (champion), Cox (amateur), and Pullinger, Morrison, Menhennett and Herring (novice) were the principal winners. Mr. Wynn had out nice teams of Cinns. and Lizards. Specially good birds in the British section were Mr. Vincent's Goldfinch and Hawfinch, Miss Brain's Bullfinch, Mr. Curry's Linnets, Greenfinch and Chaffinch, Mr. Rouse's Crossbill, Mr. Morrison's Blue Tit, and Mr. Wynn's Cirl Bunting, while Miss Shephard and Mr. Howard staged some beautiful foreigners, the lady also winning with a good Siskin. The "Grosvenor" points cup had another notch put in it by Mr. F. Curry, while the "Wynn" points cup stands at present in the name of Mr. E. C. Offord. Other special winners were the Misses Shephard and Brain, and Messrs. Cooper Bros., Burn, Wheller, Lazarus, Bryant, Rennie, Hawes, Cox, Pullinger, Menhennett, Wynn, Elgar, Wyse, Vincent, Curry, Rouse and Morrison. Of the management at the City and Suburban shows we have always to speak highly and it only remains to say that Mr. V. Wynn once again proved his excellence in the secretarial role, no detail escaping his vigilant eye. He had the assistance of the usual able band of stewards, including Messrs. A. W. Curtis, A. W. Hart, Shephard, A. C. Burn (the chairman) and others. Mr. C. Prior judged Hybrids, Brit. and For., Mr. J. Robson the remainder, and we heard not an adverse comment on their awards. CHAMPION NOR. GARSTON B.B.A.

Young Bird Show held in the Wellington Rooms, Duke Street, on July 6th. It was well supported by both members and visitors. The classification provided was for members, and drew an entry of 67, being an increase of 26 over last year's show. Mr. Harry Abbott (Farnworth) judged, and his awards were well received. The clear buff shown by novice Mr. G. Banks was a treat to see, and with a good moult will be hard to beat. The Linnet staged by Mr. Thompson was all there for size and markings, but could do with a little more colour. Mr. Lewis staged a very nice Bramblefinch (a recent purchase), one that has won at many shows. In fact, the quality of the birds was of the highest. Mr. Thompson worked like a Trojan, and is the right man in the right place, and much of the success of the show was due to his untiring energy. YORKS. CL., YELL. (6): 1, James; 2, Banks; 3, Slater. CORRESPONDENCE.

ALLEGED "BURKERS" IN THE BARROW AND DIS. C.B.A.

SIR,—I referred in my last letter to the members of the Barrow and District C.B.A., and up to the present they have had nothing to say, whatever, of which they can accuse me of in any way that was detrimental to the Association. I have shown that there are some who are members that are working detrimental to, or did do, to the Association at the time of my resigning. For proof of this my letter showed, which their worthy President was unable to contradict, or did not try. The Fancy now will be able to see by this that my character is as good as a fancier's ought to be, as it always was, and always will be. I shall join another club shortly which I know will do more good than ever Barrow has done for me, by saving me a trifle and getting satisfaction. By doing this I shall be able to retain my membership of the Cage Bird Union, which I want to see prosper. This is final as far as I am concerned. E. E. MILLER.

THE TYPE OF THE NORWICH.

SIR,—A meeting of the committee was held at Manchester on July 6th, Mr. Dent in the chair. After the minutes were read, a discussion arose on the scale of points, and, as no opposition had been received, they were passed. Several models were sent in for the committee's inspection, and three were selected as being the best. They were sent by Messrs. A. F. Lydou, H. Norman and A. Paddock, and the Secretary was instructed to get copies printed, with a view to sending them to all members of the club to get their opinion. It may take considerable time, but the committee felt they would not care to decide such an important affair as this without appealing to the members. The formation of new Norwich Plainhead clubs in Newcastle and other places came under notice. Some of the committee thought it strange that a new club should be formed in the very town where we are having a cup competition, as we give these cup competitions and specials in different districts with a view to getting as many members to join our club as possible, and, the more members we get, the more societies would get patronage from us. I beg to remind members that their subscription is due, and would be glad if they would forward same as early as possible, as only those who pay play. J. RAYNES.

A PLEA FOR SPECIALIST REPORTERS.

SIR,—Of late there has been an improvement in the reporting of sections in the Fancy, but there is a big lot of room to improve. The defect is, men trying to deal with subjects they absolutely know nothing about. A Border fancier seldom has a practical knowledge of British birds, and a British bird fancier kens little of the points of a winning Norwich. The Norwich breeder is self-absorbed, and kens nothing about a Hybrid; and a foreigner cannot say a word on the humpy-backed Scotch Fancy. It may not be my business, but, to have a report worth reading, a man should be on his own section—i.e., a Scotch Fancy breeder on the Scotch Fancy Canary; a Norwich breeder on the Norwich Fancy, and so on. I was at a show and saw the reporter depending upon the judges—Tom, Dick and Harry—in other words, upon the men in the street. Reporters need a deal more than presumption and assurance; they require practical knowledge of the subjects they treat on, and without such their reports are a farce. I know how reports are got up—present company always excepted. You had some grand reports in the winter. My object in writing is to help the Fancy. Non-fanciers should not report; they do it sometimes, but it is for the pay.
A FANCIER.

ALLEGED WITH-HOLDING OF SPECIAL AT LLANDILO SHOW.

SIR,—As your columns are always open to ventilate the grievances of fanciers, I beg to call your attention to the following unjust treatment of a member of the British Roller Canary Club, who won the second prize and special at the Llandilo Show, held last January 17th. It was advertised on special bills that the second prize winner would be awarded a special presented by Mr. Edwards, "Railway Hotel," Llandilo. Up to the present time the winner has not received it. He has written the Secretary, Mr. Owen Jones, several times, who has not had the common courtesy to reply. The Secretary of the C.B.U. and myself have written, with the same result. The donor of the special also has been written to, and sent no reply—evidently bad manners are catching in that part of the country. Why the special is withheld we cannot understand. The Roller class was a big success, 23 entries (the largest class in the show), and was the means of providing a big attraction, which must have paid the society well. In bringing these facts before your notice, we are in hopes that some member of the Llandilo Society will see this letter and bring it before the members, as I cannot believe that the society would sanction such treatment if they were aware of the facts. Will some member kindly oblige? J. W. NORRIS,

COAL TAR AS A REMEDY FOR ASTHMA IN CAGE BIRDS.

SIR,—In reply to your correspondent, Mr. H. Rees, who asks me where I obtained the coal tar for my bird, first of all I tried Messrs. Boots, the Cash Chemists, asking for coal tar in a liquid form. They told me that what I wanted was "solution of tar," and that it was 1s. per bottle. As that was rather more than I wanted, I next tried an ordinary chemist's shop, and was supplied there with three pennyworth of solution of tar. I took it home and gave my bird about six drops in two tablespoonfuls of its drinking water, with the good results I have already mentioned. The tar is a brown liquid, and when added to the water will turn it the colour of milk. I am surprised that Mr. H. Rees should have experienced such difficulty in obtaining this remedy; but think if he takes a bottle and asks at any drug stores for "solution of tar," he will be supplied with the same. I hope his hens will improve under treatment the same as mine did, for I have yet to find a better remedy for birds suffering from asthma. If there is anything else your correspondent wishes to know, and he will kindly write again, he will be answered with pleasure by MISS BUSHNELL.

SIR,—A correspondent signing himself H. Rees is making enquiries about the coal tar remedy. I am sure if he will go to any chemist's shop and ask for one pennyworth of "solution of coal tar" or "essence of coal tar" (the former for preference), instead of the common coal tar, he will get what he wants. Add four or five drops (not more) to two tablespoonfuls of drinking water, and he will see the milky-white tinge in the water he seems so much to desire, and it will not hurt the drinking vessel at all. I have used same, and find it a good remedy in cases of cold or slight asthma. J. A. L.

SIR,—I have been much surprised at the correspondence which has recently appeared in CAGE BIRDS re coal tar for asthma. To all qualified chemists this preparation is well known as "Solution of Coal Tar, B.P." It is very frequently prescribed by medical men, but is chiefly used externally—i.e., in ointments and lotions. Should any fancier desire to procure this article, he ought to have no difficulty if he applies to a good class chemist who dispenses the prescriptions of medical men.
R. SMALLEY.

SIR,—I have been following the correspondence with interest on the question of coal tar as a remedy for asthma in your widely-circulated paper. I myself last winter had a hen that was troubled with asthma, and was advised to destroy it; but I thought that I would like to try a remedy to cure the same. I tried several, but failed. Having a bottle of "Dutch Drops" in the house, I wondered whether that would have any effect on the bird. I placed four or five drops in the water daily, and stirred them up till they formed small globules on the surface, which the bird drank. This treatment I continued for over a fortnight. Now, I am pleased to say, I have had three nests from her, and a total of 11 young birds, all quite healthy. I am not quite certain, but "Dutch Drops," I have been told, is pure Stockholm tar, which can be bought at any chemist's shop at a very small cost—I think about 4d. or 5d. a bottle. With regard to Mr. H. Rees's letter, I fail to see how he can get that milky-white colour from mixing coal tar with water, according to Miss Bushnell's letter in CAGE BIRDS. I strongly advise others with birds that have the wheezing complaint to try the remedy which has proved successful in my case. Would any that try it kindly state the result in CAGE BIRDS for the benefit of its readers? S. H. GEORGE.

THE SCOTCH FANCY MODEL.

SIR,—Mr. Harrison's letter is not devoted to an expression of his opinion of Mr. Wright's model. He says not a word on the model, from which I infer that he is pleased with it as a model—a grand model! Who could say anything else? Yes, notwithstanding the opposition to the two stalwarts, we will see it adopted universally, and what will Messrs. Harrison and "Piebald" say then? If your readers had got the fun the Greenock fanciers had before the meeting, it was rare to look on, and see the frenzy, out, and in the shop, I do not know how many times a day. No wonder the second model was rolled up in paper and put away. I object to his mud-throwing at the Derby not a thousand miles from Greenock. If Mr. Harrison is a member, let him come to the meetings and have his say. He has always a funny way of doing things. I do not think it is honourable to take advantage of Mr. J. Hart's slip. If there was a point in the letter, your correspondent should come away and not beat about the bush. We in Scotland can hold our own. We will be pleased to see Mr. Harrison. Let him come from wherever he is, and have some fun again. It was all we got from his model of what I would scarcely call a Scotch Fancy. A bird in the flesh of the kind would be a queer member of the feathered tribe. We all know that Mr. H. has done very little in the breeding of the Scotch Fancy. The Norwich and Borders are nearer his line. How many has he bred this year, and where are they? Mr. Harrison's comrades would so much like to know where he is resident. Is he in London, Liverpool, or Manchester? We will be on our guard not to slip, and have the slip of the tongue published abroad. No more of that in Greenock!
ADVOCATE FOR MODEL.

THE DISQUALIFIED GREENS AT THE LATE PALACE SHOW.

SIR,—Now that the Cage Bird Union and the Palace Show officials have in settling (?) still further unsettled the above matter, it behoves the poor exhibitor to ask himself how he stands. The Palace Show was advertised as open to all, whether affiliated to the C.B.U. or not—and particularly so in respect to those not affiliated. When the C.B.U. rules were first formulated, Mr. Ramsden found that Rule 10 (now 17), in its entirety, would very seriously interfere with entries at the Palace Show, so he brought all his influence to bear on this point, and had the offending words struck out of the rules. By-the-bye, it would be interesting to know if the promise of a cup had any influence on the matter, and where, oh, where, the cup has gone to? There are several questions I should like to ask. I believe it is a fact that the C.B.U. solicitor had the rules submitted to him before they became law, and I should like to ask Mr. Tweed why he did not point out to the C.B.U. officials and the Palace people that non-affiliated exhibitors have not a right to appeal to the C.B.U. Council? Had he done so, a great deal of time and money would have been saved by both sides. Mr. Ramsden was the first to suggest my appealing to the C.B.U., and I have in my possession a copy of rules marked by Mr. R. under which rule to appeal. I see by this week's CAGE BIRDS (July 6th) that Mr. Ramsden has since been looking up the Arbitration Act, and carefully considering the same. On the strength of his studies and his consultations with various authorities (Mr. R. is great on authorities), he offers a great deal of advice to the C.B.U. Had Mr. R. consulted the Arbitration Act and his authorities a little earlier, this fiasco would not have occurred. Personally, I am not sorry that this "no right of appeal" was not found out before the meeting at Manchester. At that meeting the matter was fought out before a body of thoroughly practical and unbiassed men, who went into every detail. No sentiment was allowed; every little point had to be proved right up to the hilt, and I should imagine Mr. Hadwin had about the hardest afternoon's work he ever had in his life to prove to these hard-headed old fanciers that the feathers in dispute were naturally acquired. But that he and his witnesses, etc., did prove it, is evidenced by the fact that the appeal was carried unanimously. In the light of after events it would have been as well if Mr. Hadwin's request that the words "and prize-money be paid to Mr. Clayton" had been added to the resolution and adopted. But it was generally understood by the Executive that prize-money would follow automatically on the quashing of the disqualification. Mr. Bladon was asked this question at the meeting, and he answered in the affirmative. It seems strange to an ordinary mind that the conviction could be quashed and the penalty remain. Mr. Lambert Brown, in his letters to me, gives me to understand that he wrote Mr. Lythgoe asking if they were to pay my prize-money; but that Mr. Lythgoe had not given a definite reply. Perhaps Mr. Lythgoe will explain. In conclusion, I would advise the C.B.U. to have inserted in their show rules—"Entries from non-affiliated exhibitors gladly received, and we will do all in our power not to protect them."
P. CLAYTON.

P.S.—I beg to tender my sincerest thanks to Mr. Deacon and Mr. Helliwell, who have returned their prize-money as a protest; also to all who have been kind enough to try and find (and have found) same defect and published same; and last, but not least, to Mr. Hadwin, who has done his utmost to clear this matter up honourably.

EGGS OF THE NIGHTJAR.

A Rare Clutch.

SIR, I was present with the Manningham Cage Bird Society last Saturday, when reference was made to the article on the Nightjar in your last issue, which said that it only lays two eggs at a time. I had with me at the time a photograph of a nest containing four eggs, which caused a great sensation and was very much doubted by the members present. To prove the truth of my statement I took two well-known fanciers of this city (Messrs. Sleaford and Grange) to see it. We stood within five yards of the nest for five minutes, and saw the hen sitting. It has been carefully watched, and there is only one pair of birds. I shall be pleased to send you an article on it, with photographs of the eggs and young, which are due to hatch this week. I think this will cause a very pleasant and interesting correspondence between lovers of British birds, as I am informed on good authority that such a thing has not been recorded before. J. R. ASKEW.

[We shall be very pleased to receive the promised photograph of and notes on this peculiar occurrence. At the time of writing we can discover no previously recorded case of four eggs being laid in a clutch and incubated by one hen Nightjar. It will be of great interest to know the number of young hatched and reared.—EDITOR.]

A GOOD LAYER.

SIR,—I have a pair of Norwich Canaries who have had three nests this year, with the following results:—First round, five eggs, three hatched, one unfertile, and one laid outside nest and got broken; second round, five eggs, four hatched, and one unfertile; third round, seven eggs, six hatched, and one dead in shell. As a reader of CAGE BIRDS, I should be very pleased to learn through your columns whether any of your readers have ever heard before of a hen laying seven eggs, one each morning, without a break, and all fertile; as all the articles I have read on Canary breeding state six eggs to be very exceptional. Am glad to say the nest of six are going on all right, three of them being a week old to-day.

ALBINO ROBIN AT DOUGLAS.

SIR,—There has just been brought to me by a member of our society a young Robin (dead), pure white, with pink eyes, yellow legs and beak. It was caught in the country by a friend of his, who had no idea as to the young bird's parentage. Unfortunately, it was caught at a bad time, as by its appearance I should think it would be about three weeks old. Certainly the best was done for it to keep it alive, but, as it would not gape, there was no hope of rearing such a rarity. I think this is the first Albino Robin seen on the island. W. H. GILL.

PRESIDENTS AS JUDGES.

Is it a Questionable Practice?

SIR,—I should like to draw the attention of your readers who are exhibitors or members of clubs to the growing practice of committees to elect their own President as judge at all their shows. This practice is not only unwise in the interest of the Fancy generally, but placing, as it does, the judge in a privileged position, makes an impartiality of judgment difficult to conceive. With all due courtesy to those in that position, I venture to say their reputation must in general opinion be jeopardised. My advice to non-official exhibitors is—patronise no show, whether it be members' or open, that does not have an outside judge.
S. G. QUELCH.

THE CAGE BIRD UNION AND DEFAULT AT SHOWS.

"Doth the Giant Slumber?"

SIR,—I am instructed by the Committee of the British Roller C.C. to write you regarding the dilatory manner in which the Secretary of the C.B.U. has acted in connection with the special withheld from the Llandilo Show. The winner of the special, when he found he could get no reply from Mr. Owen Jones, the Secretary of the show, wrote to the Secretary of the C.B.U., who wrote back asking for full particulars, etc., which were sent him. After waiting nearly eight weeks, the winner wrote to the Secretary of the C.B.U. again, when the following letter was received:—

CAGE BIRD UNION,
25, Stamford Street,
Old Trafford, Manchester,
June 11th, '07.

LLANDILO SHOW.

Mr. H. Roebuck.

Dear Sir,—I reply to your P.C., I have written the Secretary of this show again, but have not had any reply. If you wish, I will get our solicitor to write and stir him up. I return you cards, etc.

Yours faithfully,
GEO F. LYTHGOE.

Fancy waiting nearly eight weeks and getting this kind of reply! I should say myself it is a pity that Mr. Lythgoe didn't stir himself, and not allow himself to be written to again after that length of time. The fact of the matter is that Mr. Lythgoe, not getting a reply from Mr. Owen Jones, did not think it worth while to trouble any more about the matter, which is certainly a very dilatory way of doing business, and will not do the C.B.U. any good. Hon. Sec. B.R.C.C.

Several Letters crowded out.

The Border Fancy Canary.

By J. PATTERSON.

A Paper read before the Newcastle C.B.S. on July 4th.

First of all let me state some of the leading points so prominently shown in this variety. No other bird to my idea is so perfect in shape, style, symmetry, quality of feather, colour, etc., as the Border Fancy. His neck and shoulders are not out of joint like the Belgian and Scotch Fancy. He is not burdened with a crest the weight of an umbrella, like a Norwich crest, which makes some visitors to shows term them monstrosities. His legs are placed securely and more in conformity to the rest of his body than his cousin the Yorkshire, he has no frills, no long loose thigh feathers, and no artificial colouring of his Sunday best suit, which he wears when out at show, like the Norwich, etc. I must pull up, in case I get into hot water with some of you next time we meet, as many of your members are quite as enthusiastic of their own particular variety as I am of our wee gem.

A HEATED CONTROVERSY.

Some have but a very faint idea of the Border's early origin, and how he came to be called by that name. The present Border Fancy Club was formed in the year 1890, as a result of a controversy in the Press. It was opened up by the leading fanciers in Scotland as a protest against English fanciers styling them the Cumberland Fancy. They had for at least thirty years been bred and exhibited as Common Canaries in Langholm and the surrounding districts on the Scottish border, as well as a few on the English. No doubt the latter would think Common Canary a very unappropriate name for such a pleasing and perfect variety, and therefore they thought to name it Cumberland Fancy, maintaining at first that they had bred them longest in their district. The Scotchmen, always ready to stand up for their rights, held out against it, and proved that it had been bred and shown on the Scottish borders previously. Some very heated arguments were advanced from both sides, which were both instructive and amusing. The Scotchmen fell in with their English friends to the extent that it was desirable that the bird should bear an appropriate name, or one applicable to both sides, as they felt sure that some counties on the Scottish side held a prior claim as being the longest breeders, and we are indebted to the esteemed President of the B.F.C.C., Mr. Richardson, for suggesting the name of "Border Fancy," stating that such a name was applicable to the whole Border district and not merely a portion of it. To him also we owe to a great extent the formation of the B.F.C.C., its rules, etc. This controversy raged for nearly a year; finally the Scotchmen formed the "B.F.C." Club, and their opponents the Cumberland Fancy Club, but later they amalgamated, and since then the bird has been known as the Border Fancy Canary. You will see from this that this variety has, like all the others, had its ups and downs, also that this is no new variety. To my mind it is the nearest approach to the original wild Canary, from which all show varieties have sprung. I have therefore the fullest confidence in recommending it as one of the most perfect, jaunty, and charming of any of our Canaries.

NOW WIDELY SPREAD.

The Border Fancy may now be found in every county of Scotland, England, Wales, in Ireland, and some of our Colonies, and rightly so, as it is well adapted from its hardiness to withstand any climate. It is very hardy, easily bred, and its close fitting feather makes it a favourite wherever shown. The essential points are type and quality for first consideration, colour and markings take the second. All these points have to be carefully bred for, and are only reached through study, trials, and disappointments. Failure may meet your efforts, where you look for success, but you must not be disheartened with a little knock-back now and again. Canary breeding is made up with petty annoyances and difficulties, all sent to strengthen us, and teach us self-control, patience, and perseverance. Such trials lead us to know our hobby better, and show us wherein we have erred.

CHIEF CHARACTERISTICS.

The general appearance of a Border Fancy is that of a clean cut, lightly made, compact, sprightly, close-feathered, smallish Canary, showing no tendency to roughness, frilling, flatness, or dulness in feather or movements. It should give one the impression of fine quality and general symmetry. The head should be small, round, and neat; beak fine, eyes bold and bright; neck rather fine, and free, to be proportionate to head and body; back well filled, and nicely rounded, running in almost a straight line, from a gentle rise, over the shoulders to the front of tail; chest corresponding, neither heavy nor prominent; gradually tapering away towards vent; wings compact, carried close on the back, meeting all the way down and not overlapping at tips; legs of medium length, showing little or no thigh, fine and in harmony with other points; feet corresponding; size not to exceed 5½ in.; plumage close, firm, and fine in quality, presenting a smooth, glossy, silky appearance, entirely free from frill or roughness; tail compact and narrow, and nicely rounded and well filled in at vent; colour rich, soft, mellow, and pure, as level in tint as possible, showing neither hardness nor roughness. Colour fed birds are debarred by rules. Position—semi-erect, standing at a fine easy pose, at an angle of 45 degrees; carriage gay and jaunty, with a fine free movement of neck and pose of head. Health and condition have due weight when counting up points. From the foregoing you will be able to gather what constitutes a good Border Fancy, and once you breed one up to these points of excellence you have done a great deed, something to warm your heart and feel proud of.

NOT EASY TO BREED.

I have heard breeders of other varieties state that it is as easy to breed Borders as Sparrows. No doubt they are very prolific, but on the other hand, it is quite as difficult to breed a good one, as many have found to their vexation. Within recent years birds have become more uniform in size and symmetry. Sometimes we see a large one, but such seldom get into the prize list, which is quite correct, for a bird over standard length loses the general style and sprightliness. We have also occasionally one on the small side, but I rather prefer the latter, providing it has quality of feather, and properly laid on wings, a point where a large percentage of birds fail, and to my mind one of the worst faults. Many only meet at tip of wings and leave a gutter or openness between, others are loosely carried, some are too tight, and many cross badly. The different varieties exhibited are Clears, Yellow, and Buff, Fouls, Unevens, Evenly-marked, and Greens; the two latter are coming rapidly into prominence. Cinnamons are still scarce, but judging from the application for stock birds, they will soon be a force to reckon with, as to my mind a perfect Cinnamon, either self or marked, is a great attraction on the show bench, and is admired by most breeders. Having given a definition of the breed in general, I will now state how to pair them to produce as near as possible the coveted medal winner.

HOW TO BREED.

In the first place, never pair two birds together showing the same fault, or you are establishing a point which is not easily got rid of. The most rapid and sure way to succeed, is, at starting, to place yourself in the hands of some fancier who breeds his own show birds, and select from him as many pairs as may suit your requirements. Get him to write their full pedigree for future guidance, also ask him how he would pair them, if breeding them himself. You have then the benefit of his experience, you will then know what such pairs will throw, and may expect a few good ones. Whereas, in buying one bird here and another there, although to all appearance they look well matched, the blood does not blend, and it takes longer to breed a winner when buying from all and sundry. A good start spells success, and a lot of trouble can be avoided by a happy first selection. After you see how such birds throw their young, you will be more fitted to grapple with the difficulty yourself. If not, the breeder will again assist you with a few hints. Many birds produce young faulty in head, thick and heavy in neck, or flat on back, too thick in front, or on the other hand open and thin. I have already pointed out the faults in wing carriage. Some are too high in leg, some fail in carrying the tail straight from the body, having a tendency to drop or circle towards perch, or perhaps open at end, which is termed fish-tailed. Many you will find are away from type and carriage, and some weeds may be expected from nearly every pair, which should be sold as singers; they will never improve, as I find a young bird taking the perch is like boys—father of the man.

THE NORWICH PLAINHEAD.

A Paper read by Mr. Barraclough before the Hyde and Dis. Ornithological Society.

To-night I have the pleasure to read a paper on the Norwich Plainhead, not with the direct intention of giving you an object lesson, but purely to give my own opinion, and to create a discussion between myself and fellow members. To commence with, I will deal with the preparation for breeding. I find, that by allowing Nature to take its own course to a great extent, so far as conditioning is concerned, is by far the most successful way. A bird that is forced into condition at short notice has not the stamina of one that gradually comes into condition. My contention is that a forced bird is all fits and starts, and very uncertain, but a bird that is brought on gradually, say, by giving a little mixed seed, and egg meat about once each week, commencing six or eight weeks before you pair up, gets that stamina which is so essential during the breeding season. A little green food, such as watercress, is very beneficial, and about this time of the year it is eaten with a relish, and also assists Nature during the process of changing the blood, through which every healthy bird has to go in spring time. By following this simple method of preparation you will find it of service during the breeding season.

THE MATING OF STOCK.

Now as to the pairing-up of the stock. I have no particular fancy for colour on the cock side, either yellow or buff. What I contend is this, that if you get substance and colour on the cock side, with type and quality on the hen side, you cannot get very far wrong, that is, if your birds are off good stock, but I do insist on having size on the cock side, for no doubt you are all aware that a large hen has a great tendency to be sluggish and lazy. Don't, however, have your hens too small, just a medium size and well developed.

IN-BREEDING AND DOUBLE BUFFING.

In-breeding I detest, as eventually it weakens the birds' intellect. It does not always do this in the first instance, but it is bound to come sooner or later, and the ruination of a good many fanciers is caused through adopting this course, and not understanding it. I know of a few instances where such a thing has occurred, and I put this down to bad judgment. Double buffing I don't believe in, for if size is wanted a change of blood is preferable. I also hold the same opinion about double-yellowing, for, in my opinion, neither is profitable and very poor progress, for usually it ends in utter failure. What is wanted is a bold-fronted cock, with plenty of depth, well moulded, and a sound colour, mated to a short, well-feathered, typical hen, and if your birds are off good stock, you can depend upon getting a few youngsters of the right sort.

THE GREEN BLOOD.

Of course, I may just mention that it is essential to have green blood in your room, but don't go to extremes with it, for I firmly believe that this, and double-buffing, is where the coarse feather comes from, but by using green blood judiciously, it becomes a very important factor in the building up of a strain. My method of using the green, when I require it, is to mate it up to clear-bred clears, as by doing this it has a tendency to counterbalance the density of blood in the green, which, of course, must be a cock, yellow-green preferred. Therefore, you don't get many dark-struck birds, and what clears and lightly marked birds you do get are extremely good in colour, especially the yellows, both cocks and hens. These birds are invaluable, for without them no fancier can expect to be successful on the show bench. Birds bred in this manner are very easily broken up, that is, their progeny soon revert back to the variegated and lightly ticked stage. These birds are good producers of colour, which is so essential in the Norwich Plainhead. Once you get it thoroughly installed in your strain the difficulty of getting colour is overgotten, for no amount of colour feed will fetch colour out if you have not got a fountain to work on; therefore, you must breed for colour, as well as feed for it.

CLEANLINESS NEEDED.

When nesting, see that all baskets, etc., are kept scrupulously clean, and free from red mite, or insect life of any kind, if you can avoid it, which is very difficult, I know, during the process of hatching and feeding. Give a good dose of Keating's insect powder in the basket, and also in the nest when you are giving the hen her eggs to sit, and don't be frightened to use plenty of it. A dust in the cage, so as to let it fall gently on the young ones, is also very good, for you all know prevention is better than cure, and that red mite is one of the greatest drawbacks we have to contend with in bringing up fine, healthy youngsters. As to the parting of young from their parents, I form my own opinion as when to remove them; some are much quicker than others at managing for themselves, but the longer you can let them stay with the hen the better they will be. Of course, I am assuming now that the parent birds are on their best manners, and not ill-using them.

WEANING AND MOULTING.

When the young are ready to be removed I believe in flying them in a large, roomy flight for about six weeks. This helps to develop their bodies, and get them strong and ready for the moult. After being in the flight six weeks I divide them out in twos, ready for moulting, commencing to give a little colour food, and working it up gradually to the desired strength, which I intend to be satisfactory for them. This I continue until the birds are well through the moult and ready for the show bench, then I gradually give them less of it, but the same strength as they were having during the height of their moult, and continue this throughout the show season, giving it to them twice a week. During this part of the year it is necessary that they should have the best of everything, and carefully watched, as you have nothing to lose, and a lot to gain.

After the paper had been read, numerous knotty questions were asked, and very satisfactorily answered. Mr. J. Matthews moved, and Mr. W. Shaw seconded, a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Barraclough, and this brought a very successful meeting to a close, all having enjoyed it immensely.

STRAY NOTES ABOUT BIRDS.

By Claude St. John.

SEX OF MULE TO BREED WITH.

We have not yet quite done with the question concerning the fertility of Mules. So much the better. New interest in the matter cannot fail to arouse new questions, new investigations, new experiments, new fanciers, and, will it be, new results. Any way, the sum total will assuredly be new life and another fillip to the cage bird hobby, and the Mule Fancy in particular. The question has been raised as to which sex of Mule is the most likely to show proof of the fertility—or perhaps it would be better to say, to disprove the general belief in the utter sterility—of the race. Doubtless the next year or two will throw much light on this matter, and it would help greatly in this direction if every fancier who makes an experiment in breeding from Mules would make it a point to definitely and accurately mention the sexes of the birds mated together, as well as the result obtained. Hitherto experiments of this kind have been very much of a haphazard nature. The readiness with which hen Mules as a rule will brood young and feed them would appear to suggest that she was the sex to give the most satisfactory results, but only actual experiments with both sexes could really decide whether this is so or not.

A NOVEL MODE OF SEXING BIRDS.

There is quite a novel method of distinguishing the sex of birds which may form a fitting sequel to my last "Stray Note" upon the subject. It has this advantage, that it is said to be equally serviceable for every kind of bird or animal, irrespective of size or breed, or of the presence or otherwise of obvious external differences. Whether its success depends to any extent upon the nervous, or magnetic, temperament of the person trying it, I must leave each individual to discover for him or herself. I merely give the method for what it is worth, and on account of its novelty. The process was well-known many years ago as a phase of animal magnetism, and was referred to in a work on "Human Electricity," published about the middle of the last century. Briefly, the method is as follows: You take a piece of thread about half-a-yard long and thread it through a needle, then hold the two ends of the thread between the thumb and finger of one hand and hold the needle suspended over a silver coin—a florin for instance—keeping the point about an eighth of an inch above the surface of the coin, and hold the bird to be experimented upon in the other hand. If the bird is a male, the needle will swing diametrically across the coin; if a female it will swing in a circle round the coin. Now then, ye puzzled novices, these phenomena are distinct enough to be unmistakable. But pray do not anathematise your humble servant if it fails. It will, at any rate, be an interesting experiment.

BIRDS AND FRUIT.

Strange as it may seem, the usual connection between bird and fruit which we hear much about is that the safety of the latter, from a gardener's point of view, can only be assured by the destruction of the former, who are frequently accused of destroying crops wholesale. And yet comparatively few bird keepers appear to realise the fact that during the summer months they have abundance of delicacies at their command which would be vastly appreciated by the birds, and also aid in no small degree in bringing them through a healthy and good moult. In quite a number of cases the very best colour food British birds could have is a free and regular supply of the various small fruits which come into the market in succession all through the summer and autumn. The larger Thrushes and Starlings will consume quite a large amount of cherries and strawberries, and be all the better for the change, although the cages will require more careful attention, and a liberal supply of sawdust, which is much better than any sand at this season when giving fruit. The smaller Thrushes, Warblers, and most, if not all, the Hard-billed species are equally fond of the smaller berry-like fruits, such as currants, raspberries, bilberries, and the like, until such things as blackberries, elderberries, and privet berries are obtainable. Crush any of these fruits and notice the tenacious stain its juices leave behind. It is an object lesson in colour feeding, but as to whether it is morally wrong or right to utilise such stains to stain a bird's plumage from within must be left to the judgment of each individual. Do not be afraid if a bird appears relaxed when giving such fruits as those suggested. No harm will come of it. As a matter of fact, one will rarely, if ever, find a wild bird at this season that is not far more relaxed than any of our caged birds. Green peas are vastly appreciated by Hawfinches, Jays, and other birds of the Crow tribe, as well as a number of Parrots and Parrakeets.

THE HOUSING AND TREATMENT OF FOREIGN BIRDS IN CAPTIVITY.

By Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., etc.

ARCHBISHOP TANAGER (Tanagra ornata).—Given space in which to exercise, all the Tanagra are alert and active birds, several of the species have the lightning-like movements of a Liothrix, and this species is certainly as active as any, and should be provided with a roomy cage in which to take exercise and display their beauties, half of which is lost if they have not space to take a short flight. Described from a living specimen at the London Zoo, which must be getting quite aged now, as it has been there many years, and is still vigorous. Adult male: Upper surface, olive green, darker on the upper back; lesser wing-coverts, bluish, edged with bright yellow, forming a broad bar of bright yellow when wing is closed (this is rather variable, being much mingled with olive green in some specimens); head, sides of face, throat, and breast, deep blue, merging into whitish on the abdomen; vent, yellowish; under tail-coverts, pale greenish-white; under wing-coverts, cream colour; bill, dark horn; legs and feet, deep brown, with a bluish sheen. Total length 7½in., tail 3in. Adult female: Similar as to plumage, but much duller, and with less blue on the throat and breast; her beak is shorter and also broader at the base than that of the male. Habitat: S.E. Brazil, where it frequents the woodland coastal districts, and, according to Burmeister, it lives near the settlements, not being at all shy, frequenting gardens and cultivated tracts as well as the wilder portions.

Tanagra abbas.—I do not remember to have seen a living specimen of this species, nor yet do I think it has so far been imported alive to this country. It is similar to T. ornata, but has a bright yellow band across each wing, and is brighter and more yellow on the under parts. Total length 6½in., tail 2⅞in. Female similar, but the hues of her plumage lack the brilliance of the male. Habitat: Mexico, Guatemala, and Honduras.

Tanagra cyanocephala.—A very handsome species, being principally dark olive above, washed with yellow; crown, blue; sides of head, blackish-brown; under surface, palish cinnamon-brown; flanks and ventral region, yellow, washed with olive; under wing-coverts, deep yellow; bill, dark horn; legs and feet, deep brown. Total length 6½in., tail 3in. Female similar, but less lustrous in plumage, and beak probably broader at the base and shorter. Habitat: According to the Brit. Museum Cat., Andes of Bolivia, Ecuador, Colombia, and Venezuela.

OLIVACEOUS TANAGER (Tanagra olivicyanea).—Similar to T. cyanocephala, but has the whole of the head and under-surface bright blue; bill, black; legs and feet, brown. Total length 7in., tail 2⅞in. According to the B.M.C., the female is similar, and its habitat is the Andes of Venezuela and Colombia.

THE STRIATED TANAGER (Tanagra bonariensis).—This is an exceedingly handsome species, of which a very fine specimen is on view in the small birds' house at the London Zoo, from which the description, as under, is taken. It is an alert and confiding bird, and rivals in the resplendency and variety of its hues the genus Callistæ. Adult male: Lores, eye region, and whole of the back, rich black; head, edges of wings, and tail, blue; rump, glowing orange; breast, deep orange mingling into yellow on the abdomen; upper mandible, horn colour; lower mandible, whitish-horn; legs and feet, deep brown. Total length 7in., tail 2⅜in. Adult female: According to the B.M. Cat., she is greyish-brown; beneath, paler, tinged with yellowish-olive on the rump and throat. The B.M.C. gives South Brazil, Uruguay, Paraguay, Argentine Republic, and Bolivia as the habitat of this fine species.

DARWIN'S TANAGER (Tanagra darwini).—Somewhat similar to T. bonariensis, but may readily be distinguished by the olive back of the male. Adult male: Lores and eye mark, dull black; back, olive green; rump, saffron-yellow; head and neck, blue; wing and tail, blackish-olive, edged with blue; abdomen, yellow; upper mandible, horn; lower mandible, whitish horn colour; legs and feet, deep brown. Total length 6¾in., tail 2⅞in. The B.M. Cat. describes the female as brownish-olive on the upper surface; rump, greenish; below, paler; abdomen, tinged with yellow. Habitat: According to Museum Cat., Bolivia, Peru, and Western Ecuador.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

SOME PROBLEMS OF COLOURATION IN BIRD PLUMAGE.

By the Rev. D. Percy Harrison.

BLACK-HEADED, OR REED BUNTING?

There always seems to be some confusion of the Black-headed Bunting and the Reed Bunting by the novice, chiefly, no doubt, because the latter species, as well as the former, is possessed with a deep black head and face. But I was very greatly surprised to read in my daily paper one day last week in an article by a well-known writer and naturalist such words as these: "Wander along by the side of a stream and you will probably see a Black-headed Bunting. It is not a migrant—at any rate, not in England. . . . At this time of the year it forces itself upon your notice." The writer then goes on to describe how the bird feigns injury to draw the intruder away from a spot where his presence is deemed undesirable. All this obviously applies to the Reed Bunting, which is, undoubtedly, the bird the writer had in mind. The Reed Bunting is resident with us all the year round, but the Black-headed Bunting, which is quite a different species, is a rare visitor to the country. Save for the black head, which is common to both species, they are so distinct that even were both species common with us the veriest novice need not confuse them if he remembered the fact that the Reed Bunting in general plumage of body is at a glance not unlike a common House Sparrow, whereas the Black-headed Bunting is of a decidedly yellowish tint on the under surface, which at sight makes it appear more like a Yellowhammer.

NUPTIAL PLUMAGE IN BRITISH BIRDS.

One so rarely finds any mention made of this subject, that it may surprise many to know that there really is such a thing as a state of nuptial plumage in most—and probably in all—our British cage birds. Except in a few British birds which are not usually kept as cage birds, there is certainly none of the remarkable changes in form which are so characteristic of some of our foreign cage birds, which may account for the latter being generally noticed and the former almost entirely ignored. But a perceptible change, or, rather, increment, of colour takes place, and if this were closely observed it might help the fancier to tell more truly when his birds were in good condition for mating. Note the steely blue glimmer grow upon the Bullfinch's black wings and tail, and the warmth and tone come into the plumage of each variety generally, increasing the contrast between the different colours, and in most of the Finches there will be a perceptible change in the colour of the beak. The Goldie loses its black satin and is subtly suffused with a pinkish tinge; the Linnet puts on a somewhat leaden hue, the Chaffinch assumes a decidedly blue tint, etc., etc. None of these trivial points should be allowed to escape the notice of the fancier.

SEXES OF DIFFERENT BROODS.

As regards our wild birds, some of the earlier writers on ornithology held very definite opinions on this subject. At one time it appears to have been largely believed that the first brood of the season of each pair of birds consisted almost solely of male birds, and the later broods contained a majority of hens, the latest broods, except in rare cases, being solely composed of females. How far this may be correct I would not attempt to assert, but that there is some colour for the theory must be patent to everyone who has hand-reared birds to any extent. A greater proportion of males will invariably be found in broods at the beginning of the season, and the reverse at the latter end of the year. It would be interesting, however, for breeders to make a point of carefully noting this subject to ascertain how far the theory is endorsed by birds bred in captivity. A correct comparison may not be quite possible, as a fairly high proportion of the first clutches of Canaries' eggs are lost by a too early appearance, and a variety of other causes. Still, even with these set-offs, I fancy more cocks are produced in the early part of the season, and that clutches of eggs laid from the middle of June onwards show a very small proportion of the sterner sex.

WILD BIRD NOTES AND QUERIES.

Protecting Wild Birds.

In every county there is a list of wild birds protected by law, and although this has no doubt helped considerably to prevent wanton destruction, one is inclined to think that the growth of public opinion, and the spread of Nature study, has done more for the birds than protection by law.

The Singing of the Thrushes.

This spring and summer the Thrushes have sung much more than usual, and no doubt the inclement weather has had something to do with it. The bird that will sing in winter foretelling the snow storm that will cover the hills with a mantle of white cannot resist the pleasure of singing about "more wet, more wet" in the month of June. For once we should dearly like to be pining for the loud song of this prophet.

The Short-eared Owl.

It is erroneous to suppose that all Owls fly only by night, and live in barns and hollow trees. The Short-eared Owl is an exception to the general rule; it loves open heaths and moorlands, meadows and downs, and cultivated fields. It doubtless does a considerable amount of good, feeding chiefly upon mice, rats, reptiles and large insects. It hawks over the ground almost as much in broad daylight as it does at night.

The Jealous Wren.

The tiny cock-tailed Wren is just now fussy and jealous, for among the bundles of faggots at the back of the farm buildings she has a brood of tiny youngsters. They were hatched and reared in a beautiful nest, built in the ivy at the back of the wood house, and as soon as they could fly she took them over to the faggot stack, as possibly being more secure there than roaming about. If one approaches too near she commences to scold, her "tick, tack" sounding like an old-fashioned kitchen clock. There is no prettier sight in bird land than a brood of these tiny atoms returning to roost in the old house; one hasn't the heart to give them a fright by placing the hand over the entrance and capturing the whole family.

Increase of Woodpeckers.

I am inclined to think the Woodpeckers are slightly more numerous than formerly. A certain wood had contained several of them this last year or two; in bygone times they were rarely seen or heard there. One can generally depend upon getting a sight of the gorgeous Green Woodpecker upon a common not far away, and throughout the pine woods and tracts of common land in Surrey they are fairly plentiful. At one period all Woodpeckers had a rough time of it, as they were frequently shot at sight as being destructive to timber, but it is now a generally accepted fact that although a tree to all appearances may be perfectly sound, it is not so if the Woodpecker bores it for nesting purposes.

The Persistent Yellowhammer.

Repetition in most cases means monotony. The Yellow Bunting repeats his short song over and over again, note for note, trill for trill, and yet we linger under the hedgerow, with the sweet scent of the briar and the newly-mown hay filling the air, and listen to his song without one thought of displeasure. If we were in a room, we should possibly think otherwise; but out in the fields the wind modulates the sound, so that at times only part of the song reaches us in full. As a songster, the Yellowhammer sings almost as long as the Lark. We heard him in the early spring, we hear him now in the summer, and in the autumn, when the golden harvest is being gathered, he will sing to us from the topmost spray of some blackberry-laden bramble.

The Food of the Perigrine.

Along the southern coast line we have still a pair or two of Peregrine Falcons nesting in spite of having the almost annual visit from egg collectors. These beautiful Falcons are very conservative, and will nest yearly in the same spot even after being robbed time after time. They would undoubtedly soon increase if left to themselves. If this were so I am afraid Pigeon fanciers would soon have something to say upon the matter, for it is common knowledge that many a high-bred long-distance flier has furnished a meal for this magnificent bird. Many of the wild Doves which nest in the cliffs also sooner or later fall victims. Occasionally Partridges, Thrushes, Jackdaws and Gulls are taken, the two latter only in cases of necessity, for they are perfectly safe when Pigeons are to be had.

The Home of the Shrike.

The excitement of birds' nesting is almost over, and the foliage is now so thick that it is difficult to locate some of the smaller nests. This is fortunate for some of the birds, for the early structures are easily detected, and suffer in consequence. The Red-backed Shrike is a late builder; if it was not so, the species would hardly exist, for the nest is almost as large as a Blackbird's, and is seldom hidden very securely. There appears to be three distinct types of eggs, the ground colours of which are pale green, creamy white, and salmon colour. The pale green eggs are usually marked with olive-brown, and the others with reddish-brown. All varieties are exceedingly handsome, and are as pleasing to look upon as any of the eggs of our smaller birds. A clutch I found recently of the pale green type had a ring of marking round the larger end, and, so even were they, that they looked almost unnatural, and as though they had been put on by mechanical means.

"CAGE BIRDS" GREAT
CANARY BREEDING COMPETITION.

A Boon to the Fancy. £28 Cash in Prizes.

TWO SECTIONS: (1) NOVICES, (2) OLD HANDS.

1. Only Novice Breeders are eligible for the Novice Competition, a "Novice" to mean anyone who has never bred Canaries before.
2. The Prizes will be: A, Cup, value £5 (or Cash), First Prize; B, Cash, £3, Second Prize; C, Cash, £2, Third Prize; and D, Five £1 Cash Prizes for the next best in succession.
3. Prizes to go to the "most successful" breeders, meaning those of the competitors who are most successful in satisfactorily rearing the best average of healthy young birds during 1907 Canary breeding season now in progress.
4. The young Canaries must be bred by the competitors on or before July 15th, 1907, next. None bred after that date will be eligible. (Note definition of "successfully reared" given on Declaration Form.)
5. All stock birds used must be the bona fide property of the Competitor.
6. Competitors must have the results of their breeding operations attested to by two responsible officials of any recognised Cage Bird Society; or may swear a declaration attested to by two responsible witnesses. Declaration Forms (see extracts printed below) are now ready, and will be sent any competitor post free on application; a postcard will do.
7. From now till the date of the COMPETITION CLOSING, AUG. 17th, each issue of CAGE BIRDS will contain a Coupon, and when sending in the declaration competitors must enclose the whole series of coupons to show that they have been during the period regular readers of CAGE BIRDS.
8. The Editor's decision shall be final.

FIVE POUNDS Cash, or Cup to full value, at winner's option, is offered for the most successful Canary breeder of any experience. All breeders of one season's experience and upwards eligible. Same conditions as for Novices. The Editor's decision to be final.

NOTE.—All entries must be sent in by August 17th.

EXTRACTS FROM DECLARATION FORMS.
FOR COMPETITORS.

I, the undersigned, having entered for "CAGE BIRDS" 1907 BREEDING COMPETITION, hereby make declaration, according to the terms of the said Competition: (1) That this is the first season I have tried to breed Canaries; (2) That I have used this season .....(state number)..... Cocks and .....(state number)..... Hens, which were and are now bona fide my own property; (3) That I successfully reared* by August 15th, 1907, ...(state number)..... young Canaries entirely from the aforementioned .....(state number)....., stock birds, the said young Canaries being in good health on the said August 15th.

* By "successfully reared" is meant that the young birds are feeding themselves—that is, are requiring no assistance from their parents.

FOR WITNESSES.

We, the undersigned, having read the Declaration of .....(state name)..... of .....(give full address)..... hereby declare that, to the best of our knowledge and belief, the said Declaration is true in substance and in fact, we having seen the above birds and checked the stated particulars concerning them.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four week's trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us, and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard.

* * Sounds made by Birds' Wings.

Birds are such masters of the voice that it would seem as though they need no other means of expression; yet many of them make use of their wings for this purpose. When a Grouse bursts up from our feet, the noise so disconcerts its pursuer for an instant that the bird has time to get a good start. This does not compare in volume or interest, however, with the loud muffled drumming of the cock Grouse in the woods, which is a call to its mate and a challenge to rivals. Various other birds have the same habit. Turkeys scrape their wings along the ground, and in spring Night Hawks make a strange booming noise in the air with their wings. As the breeding season begins, the male Snipe commences calling for a mate. These calls are always uttered upon the wing, and consist of a piping and clicking note, often repeated, and accompanied at intervals by a humming or bleating, not unlike a goat. Hence the Irish provincial name "Heather Bleat" for this bird. Whenever this sound is emitted, the bird is diving from a great height with extreme velocity and giving a trembling motion to the wings, which are peculiarly formed, so as to produce a drumming noise.—Sent by HARRY MILLER (age 11), 35, Oxford Street, Warrington.

* A Tame Thrush.

A friend of mine was once sitting reading in a room. The hall door was open, the day being hot. His reading was interrupted by a sharp, plaintive chirp in the hall. On going there he found a young Thrush, which had probably fallen or been pulled out of the nest by its mother's claw. He took it in and gave it some soppy bread and one or two worms. He kept it in the kitchen, allowing it to do what it pleased. But, although the door and windows were constantly open, it never made an attempt to fly away. It used to come down from its favourite perch and hop about the table, waiting till it was fed, and then fly off again. One day it somehow managed to fly up the stairs into the bathroom. The bath was, unfortunately, full of water, and the young bird, while perching on the side, overbalanced and fell into the water. It drowned before it could be rescued.—H. V. HUMMEL (age 13), 152, Woodsley Road, Leeds.

* Bird Life in Douglas.

The east coast of the Isle of Man, sheltered from the prevailing winds, is much frequented by birds. The parish of Onchan, embracing Groudle Shore, and the delightful cove known as Onchan Harbour, is the best observatory in the island. It is better wooded than most parts, and is covered with wild shrubbery and verdure down to the water's edge. Here in May I met the Song and Missel Thrush, Blackbird, Starling, Rook, Jackdaw, Cuckoo, Chaffinch, Robin, etc., all whose names are familiar to every English-speaking person. The Missel Thrush—third of our trio of common breeding Thrushes—has now ceased singing, and the Cuckoo, although it calls when flying, is far more heard than seen; and I find as a rule that English birds are much shyer and more difficult to observe than ours, though I cannot account for this apparent difference. The Song Thrush and Robin are, however, exceptions. The Bullfinch and Goldfinch, due to the persistent trapping, are now getting scarce, which leaves the Chaffinch as the best dressed, most musical bird among the common members of this family. One cannot wander far without hearing the "Pink, pink" of this bird. It's song is a bright bit of bird music—a song of rather hurried notes, resembling a Wren-like thrill. Since May the season of song has been waning. Larks do not warble so often; the Brown Linnet, the Yellowhammer, the Tits and Wrens, would have their love notes worn by the cares of providing for young birds. Tree-creepers have arrived, and other specimens of rare visitors who may be future migrants.—Sent by F. GILL, 20, Drumgold Street, Douglas, Isle of Man.

LEEDS.

The usual week-end contest again took place at Skinners' Arms, Buslingthorpe, in which thirteen good birds competed for three prizes. There was a fair attendance to hear the birds sing, and they sang well, all being satisfied with the result. 1, Brook; 2, Galley; 3, Ward.—F. RAPER, Sec.

SHEFFIELD.

Linnet singing at the Bird in Hand, Broughton-lane, Attercliffe, on July 14th. Twenty-two birds sang for three prizes, two minutes hanging. Soldier Jack 66, Watson 65, Booker 60. Judges, Messrs. Bollington and Cocking. A meeting of the Club was held at night, when several rules were read over to members and intending members. Number of members up to date, 33.—F. WATSON, Sec.

THE SHOWS.

BARROW.

The Neal Feather Show of the Barrow C.B.A. was held in the Greengate Temperance Hall on July 13th. There were 107 entries, which, considering the bad season experienced by breeders in the district, was decidedly good. The quality also was well up to the average. Two silver cups were competed for, Mr. Galt winning that for the best Border Fancy with his winning buff, whilst that for the best bird in the show fell to Mr. Cherry's yellow Norwich. Mr. J. H. Wynn judged, and his awards gave the greatest satisfaction. The arrangements were ably carried out by the committee under the direction of Mr. Willison, the Hon. Sec.

CUMBERLAND Y.C.C.

The members held their Young Bird Show in the Forester's Hall, Whitehaven, on July 12th. Entries were a falling off as compared with last year, but the general excellence of the birds staged showed a decided improvement on last year, which more than compensated for the short entry. Messrs. Irwin, Stewart, Douglas, and Tweedie put down some good teams, many of the specimens being a credit to the breeders. Unfortunately, owing to the bad season experienced in this district, several members were unable to exhibit, but I was pleased to hear of a decided change for the better in the second round. Mr. J. Nixon, of Maryport, judged, and gave every satisfaction in his awards, which were as follows:—

YELL.: 1, 2, spl for best bird, Irwin, leader a nice, slim, well-drawn, reachy youngster, good length and carriage; 2, rare shape and head, nicely filled neck and back, grand quality, might have gone up; 3, vhc, Douglas, another grand pair of slim well-drawn birds, somewhat spoiled by the moult; hc, c, Stewart. BUFF: 1, 3, Irwin, nice quality and shape, good position, grand head, neck, and wing carriage, third excellent carriage, but fails in head; 2, vhc, Tweedie, nice lengthy bird, grand shape and quality, but shade stout; hc, c, Stewart. TKD., ETC., YELL.: 1, 3, vhc, Stewart, leader a gem for shape, grand quality and colour, nicely cleaned away at waist, bonny head, neck, and wing carriage, must have pressed very hard for best bird in the Show, eye and wing marked, third fine lengthy bird, shade stout; 2, hc, Irwin, slim, grand quality and shape, fails in length to winner; c, Tweedie. BUFF: 1, 3, Stewart, clinking Yorkie, rare shape and length, excellent quality and style, A1 position, third very similar but not the length, a little soft; 2, Irwin, another good Yorkie, well moulded, good length, but not so compact; vhc, c, Douglas; hc, Joyce. CINN. MKD.: 1, Lewthwaite, nice leggy, stylish yellow hen, marked on breast, good shape, A1 position; 2, Tweedie, buff, marked both wings, good length and quality, nice shape but shade heavy; 3, vhc, Irwin, variegated buff, nice quality, not so well drawn as leaders; c, Douglas. BRIT.: 1, 2, vhc, Stewart, real good team, first rattling Yellowhammer, grandly marked, excellent shape, A1 condition, second good Linnet, rare type, markings, and colour; 3, c, Pearson, well marked young Thrush, grand colour and carriage, moves nicely, good shape; hc, J. Harkness.

HARTLEPOOL.

On the 13th inst the Hartlepools' Cage Bird Society held their Nest Feather Show at the Cleveland Hall, Hartlepool. The exhibits were confined to the members of the society, and some excellent specimens of birds were shown. The exhibition was regarded as a great success, there being about 70 entries. Mr. A. Meynell, West Hartlepool, officiated as hon. secretary, and in the absence of Mr. Hill, Mr. Ben Evans, of West Hartlepool, adjudicated, his awards being well received. YELL. YORKS: 1, 2 Williams. LEEDS.

Linnet quality singing contests July 13th, at the King's Head, when nineteen birds sang for three prizes, given by Mr. J. Booth. 1st, 2nd, Fisher, 3 Clegg. July 14th, twenty-four of the best pieced birds sang for three prizes. 1st, Summers; 2nd Nicholls; 3rd, Crowther. Judges, Messrs. Hardcastle, Clegg, Cooper, and Worth. As birds are falling off in moult, we have decided to give up Saturday matches until further notice.—T. SUMMERS, Hon. Sec.

BRISTOL.

A grand Linnet contest will be held July 26th at the New Inn, St. Philip's. Five good prizes fifteen minutes hanging. Competition to draw on Friday night, 9.30.—W. SHEPPARD.—ADVT.

A Goldfinch match for £5 was sung between Aaron Moxham's "Rags" and Mr. Morgan's "Tenner." The match took place at Mr. Taylor Phipp's, Kingswood. Score:—"Tenner," 9 score 15; "Rags," 4 score, Morgan winning by 5 score 15.—W. SHEPPARD.

BLACKBURN.

The final contest of the Blackburn Lark F.A., held at the Good Samaritan Inn on July 13th, proved a big success, there being some splendid singing. Twenty-one prizes were competed for, the following being the order:—1, J. Sheffield, 9.44; 2, R. Sheffield, 9.35; 3, Walmsley, 9.16; 4, Fecitt, 9.15; 5, Airey, 8.15; 6, Mercer, 8.12; 7, Hayhurst, 7.59; 8, Pollard, 7.56; 9, Halliday, 7.20; 10, W. Markham, 7.15; 11, J. The gold medal presented by that good ornithologist, Mr. David Bentley, of Great Harwood, for the most time put in the season's club sings, was won by R. Sheffield, and the special, given by the editor of CAGE BIRDS to the best bird that has not previously won a prize, was secured by R. Airey. Timers, H. Ainsworth and J. Walmsley.—JOHN SHEFFIELD, Sec.

HOUSE'S

CANARY MANUAL

Price ONE SHILLING. Post Free 1 2.

Superbly illustrated by the Champion Canary Artist Mr. H. NORMAN. EVERY BIRD DEPICTED IS A VERITABLE MODEL, and shows the breeder what to aim for. Some idea of the popularity of this Practical Manual may be gathered from the fact that under the title of "The British Canary," it has passed its Third Edition, entering upon a Fourth Edition of 5,000 copies under the new title of "HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL." MR. HOUSE has thoroughly revised and brought this work up-to-date and incorporated a chapter on the "Roller or Singing Canary."

WOLVERHAMPTON C.B.S.

Nest Feather Show July 13th, at the Vine Hotel, Prince's-square. The show room is an excellent one, and very suitable for the purpose. There was a very fair entry, considering that several prominent members have experienced a disastrous breeding season, and the quality throughout was good. Norwich contained several promising youngsters which should certainly be heard of again. Mr. Garfield staged a clinking head-marked yellow, on which many envious eyes were cast. It was very typical, well up in size, and of good quality, and scored a popular win. Mr. F. J. Weaver had but a very nice clear buff, not over large, but grand type and quality. Yorkshires came up well, the clear or ticked class being one of the best we have seen. Mr. I. Jones won nicely with real good yellow, which was also awarded special for best Canary in the Show. This was a very smart youngster, of rare length, grand position, nicely drawn, and lovely feather. Mr. F. Howes was very close up with a grand buff, which we liked very much. Third and fourth were also very creditable exhibits. In A.O.V. Mr. Weaver showed two nice Cinnamons, and Mr. Hughes a pair of typical Borders. In Mules Mr. Tonks put down a nice team, a Goldfinch-Bullfinch leading, of fair size and good colour, but rather rough on the back. Second, a very fine Siskin-Canary, good size and colour, well marked, and in fine condition, a bird that should do well later on, third a Greenie-Bullie, nice size and shape, very steady, but lacking colour. Old Mules were headed by Mr. Weaver's variegated yellow Goldie-Canary, which was in the pink of condition, and took special for best in Mule or British section. Mr. Tonks was close up with a nice Goldie-Greenie and buff variegated Goldie-Canary. British were not so numerous as expected, several of the members having their birds in moult; still, they were able to stage some very creditable exhibits, and in grand condition. The winning Goldie is of good size and shape, has an excellent blaze, and good tanning. There was a fair attendance of visitors, and the secretary informed us he had three applications for membership as a result of the Show. The awards were made by Mr. J. Pitchford (Stoke-on Trent).

NOR. CL. OR TKD.: I, 2, 3, vhc, Weaver; hc, Garfield. MKD.: 1, 2, Garfield; 3, vhc, Weaver. VAR.: 1, vhc, Tonks; 2, 3, Weaver; hc, Willowbhy. YORKS., CL. LUTON.

First Feather Show held July 10th, with an entry of 90 exhibits, some excellent young birds making their debut. The arrangements were in the capable hands of the hon. secretary, Mr. E. Cherry, and the prize money was paid to the winners during the show. Mr. J. Robson judged.

YELL. NOR.: 1, 2, vhc, Ward, clear, rich colour, nice size and quality, second heavily marked, also good quality; 3, Webb, marked head, excellent type and colour; 4, Bennett, good size and colour, a shade too long; hc, Horwood; c, Pedder. BUFF: 1, Litchfield Bros., well made bird throughout, the correct type; 2, 3, 4, vhc, Ward, full of bloom, third we liked much; hc, Thring; c, Webb. YELL. YORKS.: 1, 4, hc, Sapwell, excellent stamp of birds; 2, Webb, wing marked, nice length, and correct type; 3, Reddall, clear, full of nerve, and straight as a rule, if well moulted should do some winning; vhc, Cherry; c, Bloomfield. BUFF: 1, Webb, very nice ticked bird of correct length, stands well on perch; 2, 3, 4, Sapwell, cinnamon marked, of rich quality and correct type, third bit rough, commenced to moult; vhc, hc, Cherry; c, Bloomfield. CRESTED NOR.: 1, 2, 4, hc, c, Bennett, a fine team of youngsters, first marked on wing, with nicely formed crest, second green, has a rare crest for a baby, we shall be surprised if he does not beat the first bird next time they meet; 3, vhc, Litchfield Bros., clear, nicely formed dark crest. CRESTBRED: 1, Bennet, marked, good head and quality of feather; 2, Verran, good green; 3, Litchfield Bros., nice stamp of bird; 4, Rose; vhc, Smith and Aldridge. A.O.V.: 1, Cherry, very smart green Yorkshire, a future winner, we believe; 2, 3, Parkins, couple of lovely Seifert Rollers. MULE: 1, 4, Webb, two Greenfinch Mules, of nice quality; 2, Witmus, dark Goldfinch; 3, vhc, Smith, both similar to second. GOLD. A.O.V. BRIT.; 1, Miss Parkin, very brilliant coloured Greenfinch, and very tame; 2, Horwood, another nice Greenfinch; 3, Ward, fair Waxwing; 4, Smith, Crossbill; vhc, Cooper; c, Litchfield. FOREIGN: 1, 4, Cooper, two very fine and rare Blue-bonnet Parrakeets, in rare fettle; 2, 3, vhc, hc, Mrs. Warren Vernon, a lovely team of Foreigners, viz., Blue Tanager, Scarlet Tanager, Superb Tanager, and Bronze-headed Troupial, all in excellent feather and well staged; c, Meadow. NOVICE NOR.: 1, Gregory, well made buff; 2, Dillingham, equally good; 3, Thring, very nice marked bird. YORKS.: 1, 2, Fountain, couple of good cinnamon marked buffs; 3, Stokes, good clear; 4, vhc, Heady; hc, Rhodes; c, Dunham.

CROOK.

The second open show of the Stanley, Crook, Peases West and District Fanciers' Society was held with great success on July 13th, in a field belonging to Mr. Proudfoot, at Bankfoot. The hon. secretary, Mr. John Homer, of Roddymoor, had the managerial reins well in hand, and a large body of committeemen worked to the best advantage. Mr. Jos. Templey judged, and we heard no dissatisfaction whatever at his awards.

NOR. (12): 1, r, H. Wilson, fine bouncing bird of good type and quality; 2, Aters, nice style and well up in colour; 3, Rutherford and Bright, slightly smaller but all there for quality; vhc, Siddle and Dawson; hc, Clough; c, Brown. LEEDS C.B.S.

Young Bird Show held July 13th in St. Luke's Schoolroom, Skinner-lane. Judge, Mr. Oates. There was a fairly good muster of birds, Yorkshire and Norwich classes filling well; out of 109 entries, made by 24 exhibitors, Yorkshires totalled 44 and Norwich 35. There was only a poor show of British—Goldfinches four, Linnet one, not a Bullfinch, and only three Greenfinches. The Leeds and President's Cup were competed for, and the points gained at this show are added to points gained at next members' show in December, the one gaining highest number of points holding the cup for one year. Four birds have to be nominated for the Leeds Cup and six for the President's. Mr. H. Woof comes out on top at this show, scoring 23 points for the Leeds Cup and 33 for the President's, Mr. C. Hunt coming second for the Leeds Cup with 20 and Mr. J. Wilson next with 19. Mr. J. Wilson is runner up for the President's Cup with 31 points, Messrs. Chew and Stokoe next with 24, Mr. Stead, the present holder of both cups, being out of the running. Mr. Oates placed the cards as follows:—

MACCLESFIELD.

The third annual First Feather Show promoted by the Macclesfield and District Cage Bird Society was held on July 13th. Mr. John Garner judged, and seemed to give very general satisfaction. Twenty-eight classes were provided, and, on the whole, entries were fairly good, although some classes were cancelled. Lancashires and Norwich Plainheads appear to be most popular in the district, judging from the numbers and quality of the birds staged. W. Lee staged a good team of Lancashires, and with a fair share of fortune's favours in moulting them off, should finish the season with a real good lot of young Lancashires. LANCASHIRES, YELL. COPPY (7): I, 2, Lee, the winner a shapely clear, second a strong-built ticked one, that should come on a lot; 3, Riseley, ticked, not as large; vhc, Risley; hc, Smith; c, Rushton. BUFF COPPY (6): 1, 2, 3, Lee, a good one, hard to beat, second and third both good type, but smaller; vhc, hc, Riseley; c, Smith. YELL. PLHD. (5): 1, 3, Lee, winner good shape, not very big, third a doubtful yellow; 2, Smith; vhc, Rushton. BUFF (7): 1, 3, Rushton, both good shape, winner a hen; 2, Smith, loses by condition; vhc, hc, c, Lee. LIZARDS:—CLEAR CAP: Both Gold and Silver cancelled. BROKEN CAP GOLD (1): 1, Holland, a nicely marked bird. SILVER (1): 1, Holland, not ready. NOR. YELL. (7): 1, Lee, nice quality and type; 2, Cundiff, looks like making a fair bird; 3, Freeman, we thought could win for shape and quality; vhc, Bunting; hc, Broadhurst; c, Hall. BUFF (12): 1, 2, Lee, a nice pair; 3, vhc, hc, Cundiff, the former will be heard of later on when moulted off; c, Bunting. TKD. YELL. (10): 1, Cundiff, tight feathered, shown at his best; 2, Lee, loses in quality; 3, Broadhurst, good shape; vhc, Hall; hc, Oliver; c, Hall. BUFF (12): 1, 2, 3, Freeman, a good and useful trio, good type and fit; vhc, Riselcy; hc, Oliver; c, Bunting. YORKS. YELL. (2): 1, Oliver, typical in shape and best in feather; 2, Bradley, loses in feather. BUFF (4): 1, Clark, wants more length, good feather; 2, Broadhead, shown very fit; 3, Bradley, should fine down into a good youngster. TKD. YELL. (4): 1, 2, Wright, the winner very smart, good shape and well put down, second not as well staged; 3, Broadhead, will improve with a moult; vhc, Bradley. BUFF (4): 1, Wright, the best Yorkshire in show; 2, Clarke, not far behind; 3, Broadhead, rather slack in feather just now; vhc, Bradley. CREST (2): 1, 2, Broadhead, both want more time. CRESTBRED: 1, 2, Broadhead, not as stout as we should like, but well shown. GREENFINCH, ETC. (5): 1, Oliver, tight, good coloured Goldfinch; 2, Tomlinson, Greenfinch, good condition, steady; 3, Cross, steady Bullfinch, good cap; vhc, Cross; hc, Snape. CHAFF OR BRAMBLEFINCH (6): I, Snape, Bramble, very distinct in markings, steady; 2, Roone, a young Bramhle, colour not up yet; 3, Cross, a fair Chaffinch; vhc, hc, Cross. A.O.V. BRIT. (2): 1, Tomlinson, a nice Yellow Bunting. MULE OR A.O.V. CAN.: 1, Cross, a Linnet Mule. NOVICE SECTION:—LANCS COPPY (3): 1, Hall, ticked yellow, well shown; 2, Howarth, a likely bird for improving; 3, Cross, wants more substance. PLHD. (6): 1, Howarth, good type and quality; 2, Hall, smaller and not quite fit; 3, Howarth, beaten by size; vhc, Cross; hc, Hall. YELL. NOR. (4): 1, Bracegirdle, nice type and size, and good quality; 2, Holland, not as well fined down in feather; 3, Howard, loses in shape; vhc, Whittaker. BUFF (13): 1, Whittaker, wins by condition; 2, 3, Barber, good shape, not as good in quality at present; vhc, Cross. TKD. YELL. (4): 1, Bracegirdle, hard pressed by second, Cross, a nice quality bird; 3, Roone; vhc, Howard. BUFF: 1, medal for best novice bird, Barber, a stout-built one, and should make a good back-end bird; 2, Barber, not as good in shape; 3, Cross; vhc, Bracegirdle; hc, Roone; c, Howard.

BEGINNERS: You MUST read the ANNUAL.

WALTHAMSTOW.

A new lease of life seems to have been taken by the cage bird section of the Walthamstow Fanciers' Association, and the display at its Young Stock Show, which was held in the Workmen's Hall on July 13th, was most distinctly creditable to the members, and far in advance of recent years. This is due, doubtless, in some measure to the fact that the cage bird section has now a secretary of its own, Mr. A. B. Forse, an official with unlimited enthusiasm, and who is not afraid of hard work. His efforts have been most ably seconded by the cage bird committee and by other officials, prominent amongst whom are Mr. J. S. Clarke, the chairman, and Messrs. E. J. Voss, B. Forse, F. R. E. Handscombe, J. A. Marley, R. Farmer, C. Carr, W. Coles, and the general secretary, Mr. C. W. Mead. With such good fanciers controlling things, it goes without saying that the arrangements were of the best. During the evening a goodly number of visitors put in an appearance, and all were loud in their praise of the quality and number of the exhibits. In Yorkshires Messrs. Forse, senr. and junr., had matters all to themselves with a capital lot of smart, slim, racy birds, and once again was exemplified the old adage of nothing beating the old 'uns, except the young 'uns. Thirty-four Norwich turned up in the three classes provided, and a real bonny lot they were too. In clears Mr. Mein won cleverly with a most typical little buff, one of the old-fashioned sort, all type and quality. Mr. Marley's second, a beautiful yellow, lost a bit in bloom. Age tells! One of the new hands, Mr. Watcham, was on top in the ticks with a neat wing marked yellow, but we very much liked Mr. Handscombe's eye ticked yellow, which came second. The variegateds made a strong class of sixteen. Messrs. Marley and Carr held the premier places, and, curiously enough, each with dark tailed yellows of grand colour and feather. In Crests Mr. Farmer led with a heavily feathered even-marked Crest, a most promising green Crest-bred of Mr. Johnson's coming second. In the two Hardbilled British classes Mr. Marley was well to the front with a charming Goldfinch, a shapely, well-marked Linnet, a bonny Siskin, and a smart Yellow Bunting. Mr. Baldry's well-known Redstart met with no competition in the Softbills. Mr. J. S. Clarke made the awards in a most masterly manner, and for once the grumblers seemed to have stayed at home.

ORMSKIRK AND DIS.

This flourishing young society held its First Young Bird Show at headquarters on July 13th. The entries were very good, considering the poor breeding season some of the members have experienced. The staging of the exhibits was all that could be desired. The special for most points (a handsome teapot) was won by Mr. T. Johnson (Southport), who put down a splendid team, and the special for best seed-eater was secured by Mr. T. H. Tiffen with a clinking Bullfinch. Mr. P. Waring judged, and appeared to give every satisfaction.

WEST LONDON F.A.

The West London F.A. held their annual Young Bird Show at Headquarters, the Bush Hotel, Shepherd's Bush, W., on July 13th. An excellent entry turned up, and there were some birds of exceptionally good quality on view. The exhibits were staged to the best possible advantage, and made a nice display, the room occupied by the society being a really first-class one for a cage bird show, spacious, and with a grand light. Mr. J. Dewhurst, the secretary, left nothing undone to ensure the success of the fixture, and he received able assistance from Mr. Dewhurst, jun., and some painstaking stewards in Messrs. Stevenson, Mugford and Turner. The principal prize-winners were: In Norwich—Messrs Cooper Bros. and Lethbridge (champion), Lack (amateur), Williams and Mugford (novice); in Yorks.—Messrs. Peverall and Crisp (champion), Robinson (amateur), Neal and Stone Bros. (novice); in Crests and C.B.—Messrs. Turner and Gibbons (champion), Mugford (novice). Mr. Dewhurst, as usual, staged some grand British and foreign birds, Mr. Lewis also showing some nice Britishers. There was a good special prize list. Mr. B. Stevenson's cup for most points by three starred birds at young and annual shows, novice section, stands as follows:—W. H. Mugford, 15; J. Williams, 14; Messrs. Stone Bros., 12; G. Neal, 11. Other special winners were: Most points throughout Canary section, tied for by Messrs. A. G. K. Robinson and A. J. Lack; best Crest or C.B. in show, Mr. W. J. Gibbons; best Norwich in show, Messrs. Cooper Bros.; best Yorkshire, Mr. H. Peveral; best bird in novice section, Mr. G. Neal; most points in champions, Messrs. Cooper Bros.; in amateurs, Mr. A. G. K. Robinson; in novices, Mr. J. HULL C.B.S.

The City of Hull Cage Bird Society held their Annual Show of Canaries and British Birds on July 13th. This was about the largest show ever held by the society. In the Canary section 20 classes were provided, 10 for champions and 10 for novices. The Mule and British classes had six between them, open to all members. The competition among the Norwich in the champion classes was very keen, the judge having great difficulty in placing his awards. Crests and Yorkshires in the champion classes were conspicuous by their absence. The Yorkshire and Norwich novice classes made a grand show themselves, and if the birds staged are a specimen of what the novices can do, the champions will have to look to their laurels, as the placed birds were all worthy to be shown in open competition. Cinnamons only made a poor display; it seems a pity this beautiful breed should be so much neglected in this district. The British classes filled fairly well, some nice exhibits being staged. Mr. Clews judged the open Canary and British classes, Mr. Foster taking the remainder, their awards giving universal satisfaction. Among the visitors present were noticed Mr. Ferens, M.P. for Hull, and some Grimsby friends. NOR. YELL (OPEN): 1, Hope; 2, 3, Barwick; vhc, hc, Pepper. BUFF: 1, Hope; 2, Pepper. GLOUCESTER.

The members of the Gloucester and Dis. C.B.S. held their annual Nest Feather Show at Headquarters, the Ram Hotel, on July 13th. The quality in most of the classes was very good, the winning clear yellow being put down by a novice, Mr. Hiam, and capturing the special for best Norwich shown by a novice. The special for best Norwich in the show went to a grand buff tick, the property of Mr. H. Davis, an exceedingly smart youngster, and one that should do well at the winter shows. We were informed by the owner that this bird was bred double buff twice. It was greatly admired by all present. Mr. Birchley put down a nice team of Britishers. A novice, in Mr. Wilcox, won in the Hardbill class, with a very nice Goldfinch, shown in grand condition. The awards were made by Mr. J. H. Payne and Mr. F. Mansfield (partners of 30 years ago). CREST, CL. BODY (1): 1, Treasure, should make a good one later on, but crest just now a bit ragged, nice quality and good shaped body. GREEN, ETC. (2): 1, Roylance, pied tail, well filled in crest, nice droop and radiation, bit short in frontal crest, but capital back; 2, Treasure, good frontal crest, well filled centre, nice droop. CL., ETC., C.B. (1): 1, Treasure, clear buff, nice quality of feather, fair skull. GREEN, ETC. (3): 1, 2, Miles, vgtd. leading, rare cushion-shaped skull, wide entrance, good length and width of head feather, good shaped body and full neck, nice exhibit, second not so good in head (being longer), nice length and width of head feather on back skull, shorter over beak; 3, Roylance, nice shape of skull and substance, fair length of head feather. NOR. CL. YELL. (6): 1, spl best novice, Hiam, grand colour, nice shape and quality, well packed flights and closely folded tail, neat head; 2, Davis, beautiful quality of feather, good shape, nice head and neck, short flights and tail; 3, Wasley, nice shaped body, drops tail a bit; 4, Herbert, nice colour, quality and shape of head; vhc, Merchant; hc, Barnes. BUFF (9): 1, 2, Stephenson, beautiful feather and quality, nice head and full short neck, good type, second better in colour, nice body, not quite so full in head and neck, still a good one; 3, Davis, grand shaped body, short neck, flights and tail, not quite so tight in feather; 4, vhc, Hiam, beaten in feather on chest, nice back and style; hc, Houghton; c (2), Merchant. MKD. YELL. BUFF (12): 1, spl best Norwich, Davis, grizzled on rump, most beautiful quality of feather, rare shape, wings well braced, grand back, gets well over perch, honny youngster; 2, Stephenson, mkd. wings, tail, and left eye, nice colour, good shaped body, bit wild; 3, Wasley, tkd. left eye, nice back, good quality, beaten underneath; 4, Davis, vgtd., nice shape and feather, good wings and tail, looks like a hen; vhc, c, Jennings; hc, Merchant. BRIT. SOFTBILL (7): 1, 2, 3, 4, vhc, hc, c, Birchley, good team, grand Hoopoe leading, second grand coloured and well spotted Thrush, third splendid feathered and very steady Shorelark, fourth sweet little Meadow Pipit, in good condition. HARDBILL (7): 1, vhc, c, Wilcox, Goldfinch, nice rich blaze, grand tanning on chest, nice bars and buttons, good style, in grand feather and very steady; 2, 3, 4, hc, Birchley, second Hawfinch, rare size, nice feather, very steady, third good feathered and well marked Snow Bunting, fourth very nice feathered and well marked Siskin, pale in colour.

BARNSLEY.

The First Feather Show of the Barnsley and District Society took place on July 13th. The exhibits were staged in a nice sized room at the Clarence Hotel. The Yorkshires on view were of a very neat order, being of nice feather and position, and in several cases of good length. The winning yellow, shown by Mr. C. Hoyes, found many admirers, and with a good moult should come out well. The buff owned by Mr. E. Carlisle, was of a taking order, showing true Yorkie characteristics, and is of silky feather. Mr. J. Barnes stood first in the hen class with a ticked-headed bird of fine quality, A1 position, and beautifully drawn. The Norwich were few in numbers, but one or two were birds possessing merit. Mr. J. E. Taylor won with a nice silky feathered bird of rich colour and of good shape. In the buff class Mr. E. Thorpe led with a bouncing clear, perhaps a little heavy behind, yet a grand one if only for stock purposes. Amongst the Mules and British one found many to please the eye. Mr. G. A. Pogmore staged a rather neat dark Goldie-Canary and a magnificent Goldfinch, the latter bring one of the best we have seen for many a day, the condition of same being unsurpassable. Mr. E. Fairhurst was represented by a rattling Linnet, grand in colour, rare size and shape, beautifully pencilled, clear and distinct, and as steady as a top; this exhibit gained special for best Britisher, he was a real gem. Mr. J. J. Senior placed on view a very handsome Reed Bunting, not a feather out of place, which fully deserved its win. Special for best Yorkie went to Mr. C. Hoyes; special for best Norwich, Mr. J. E. Taylor. The stewards were Messrs. A. Green and J. Whittaker both proving themselves most useful and capable officials. Mr. T. Coward, the worthy secretary, is the right man in the right place, and by what one heard, appears to be very popular amongst the members, he being very enthusiastic in the welfare of the society. Mr. J. C. Barnes placed the cards, and gave every satisfaction.

YELL. YORKS. (6): 1, spl, Hoyes, clear, fine length, well up, good feather and colour; 2, Carlisle, full of type, A1 feather, wee bit short, yet nice; 3, F. Race, beautiful stand, capital back and wings; vhc, G. Race. HALIFAX O.S.

First Feather Show, held at the Talbot Hotel Assembly Rooms on July 13th. Judge, Mr. M. Broadley, who awarded the cards with every satisfaction. Entries totalled 91. Mr. S. S. Rigg exhibited a remarkably good clear buff Yorkshire, which took the special for the best bird in the show, and also the special for the best bird exhibited by a novice. Other good birds were exhibited by Messrs. Sutcliffe, Walsh, Whitaker, Simpson and A. Tinkler in the Yorkshire section. In the Norwich some nice exhibits were shown by Messrs. Sutcliffe, Lloyd and Murgatroyd.

BOLTON O. & ROLLER CANARY SOCIETY.

Nest Feather Show, July 13th, at Joiners' Arms Hotel, Deansgate. Entries totalled some 70 birds, a very fair number considering the poor breeding season which most fanciers experienced in this district. The spectators came up very well and amongst those present were fanciers from Preston, Leigh, Ratcliffe and Bury. They were very interested, and it was a pleasure to meet so many sympathising one with another over the poor season which they had experienced. There were some grand exhibits staged in the Yorkshire, Norwich, Crest, Crestbred and British classes. Mr. Jos. Ogden won the special for best bird in show with a grand bird, and with a good moult it should be seen on the show bench in the coming show season. Mr. J. Trengrove judged, and gave general satisfaction.

LONDON & COUNTIES A.C.B.

With an entry of 104, the Show of the L.C.A.C.B., held at the association's headquarters on July 13th, was a most interesting little exhibition, for the quality in many of the classes was of the highest character, and deserving of far more extended competition. In the Norwich class Mr. Hayden led with a sweet little yellow, a bird of quality and type. Mr. E. Pretty's team were good, but just a bit too far gone. Mr. Bell was well ahead in A.O.V. Norwich, staging a very handsome pair of wing and head marked birds, which were split by a choice heavily marked yellow of Mr. Hayden's, a rare bird for stock purposes. Amateur Norwich found their sole representative in Mr. Sparke, who staged a quartet of very smart birds, the leader being a lovely yellow, combining the three great essentials of type, quality, and colour. Mr. Stacey had matters all his own sweet way in the Novice Clears with a very pretty trio, whilst no one opposed Mr. Orme in the A.O.V., to which class the special fell, the winner being a neat cap and wing marked yellow. The veteran, Mr. E. Pretty, had the Crests and Crestbreds all to himself. There was a time when it was not so. What has happened to London Crest breeders? The sole representative of the Yorkshire champions was Mr. Tringham, who benched half a dozen slim, stylish beauties, the buff, to which fell the special, being a very smart racy bird. Amateur Yorkshire exhibitors were conspicuous by their absence. How cometh this, friend Robert? The Novices, however, toed the line strongly, making the two best classes in the Show. Mr. Morrison was on top in either class with a pair of grandly feathered, stylish birds. Messrs. Stacey and Simpson, however, pressed him hard. Mr. E. Pretty had a quartet of Cinnamons on view which for type and quality were splendid; they also had the colour, and given a bit more size would be hard to beat. The A.O.V. champions were represented by Mr. Pretty's Lancashires and Mr. Tringham's Yorkshire greens. The Britishers were indeed the section of the Show, and no section has advanced like unto this. Not only in this society, but in all the Metropolitan societies, one finds the Britishers not only select but numerous. Here the gems of the collection were the Goldics of Messrs. Adamthwaite and Hayden, which were grand coloured birds. A little gem of most exquisite colour and marking was Mr. Sparke's winning Linnet. The Redpolls of Messrs. Williams and Morrison were just "wee beauties." Mr. Wright's Siskin most deservedly held top place by reason of its depth of colour and clean cut markings. Chaffinches and Greenfinches were good, not much dividing the contestants. In the variety classes interesting exhibits were Mr. Hawes's Crossbill and Hawfinch, and Mr. R. J. Pretty's Buntings, Yellow and Reed, Redstart, Nightingale, and Blackcap. The birds were nicely staged, and well looked after by Mr. R. J. Pretty and his committee. A fair number of visitors put in an appearance, all of whom were pleased with the quality. Mr. W. Armstrong judged Canaries, Mr. H. Norman British birds.

LEEK AND DIS. C.B.A.

Nest feather show held on July 13th at the Central Liberal Club. Entries came up well in the Norwich section, but the Crest and Yorkshires were only moderate. Some very fine Norwich were staged by Messrs. Bowyer, Hall, Green, Whetstone and Fowler, and some of them we think will be heard of again. The special for best in open section was won by Mr. Bowyer with a very fine, clear buff. In the novice section Mr. Green staged a lovely clear buff, just in full bloom, a bird we liked much. Others of great promise were Mr. Bowyer's marked buff, Mr. Hall's marked yellow and Mr. Whetstone's second prize clear yellow. This bird was rather too young for the show bench, but with a week or two more age should make into a very fine bird. The arrangements were of the best. Mr. Fowler and his committee had everything in good order. Mr. L. H. Roe judged.

IPSWICH.

The Suffolk C.B.S. held their Young Bird Show on July 13th. Mr. Chas. Simpson officiated as judge. The entries were not quite so numerous as last year, but the birds staged were well up to the standard. Thirteen classes were provided, and about 60 birds staged. The special for best Norwich Pinkhead, also silver medal for best bird in show were won by Mr. W. Schofield, both with same bird, a typical buff Norwich, a real gem, six weeks old.

MANCHESTER AND NORTHERN COUNTIES O.S.

The M. and N.C.O.S. held their Nest Feather Show on July 6th at the Coal Exchange, Marketplace. It proved a thorough all-round success, being, in fact, the best Nest Feather fixture of the society for six or seven years past. Some splendid Norwich and Yorks. were staged. A hard fight throughout the Norwich section was waged between Messrs. Raynes, Hindley, Marlor, Royle, Kilvert, and Coulson, these exhibitors putting down some very promising youngsters. In the Yorks. section there was £1 cash special offered for the best clear yellow, and this was captured by Mr. Broughton, of Wilmslow, with a really grand bird. This exhibitor also carried off the gold medal for the best team of four birds. No fewer than 21 teams competed for this medal, including Nor., Yorks., Borders, Lizards, and Crests. Other capital Yorks. were staged by Messrs. Mitchell, Downing, Lindsay, Gray, Pease, Riley, Aspinall, and Waters. Mr. John Garner had out the winning Crests, Crestbreds, Lancs. and Lizard, very nice specimens, a credit to their breeder, Mr. Beard running him a good race among the "spangle backs." Cinnamons saw Mr. Bladon with a trio of good youngsters. In the Border section the members from the Altrincham district had a splendid lot of birds on view, and seem to be going very strong with the variety. Messrs. Wardleworth, Blackshaw, Waters, and Beaty's exhibits were much admired. The British section was disappointing so far as numbers went, seeing that a specialist judge had been engaged to officiate, and good specials provided, but the quality was good. The chief winners were Messrs. Whalley, Pollitt, Fryer, and Smith (Hybrids), Fryer, Hill, and Beaty (British). The Novice section was encouraging, the quality of the birds therein being excellent. Messrs. Dalzell, Bleasdale, Stocker, and McCann (Yorks.), and Boswell, Smith, Evans, and Whalley (Nor.) secured the chief awards. The management was carried out on the right lines, and the many visitors expressed themselves as well pleased with the show and the arrangements, for which Mr. Lythgoe, the secretary, and Mr. Jones, the assistant secretary, with Mr. Bladon, the chairman, and the rest of the officials deserve every praise. The attendance was very good, showing a substantial increase on late years' results. Messrs. F. W. Nelson (Canaries), and G. H. Massey (British), both of Stockport, judged, and gave every satisfaction.

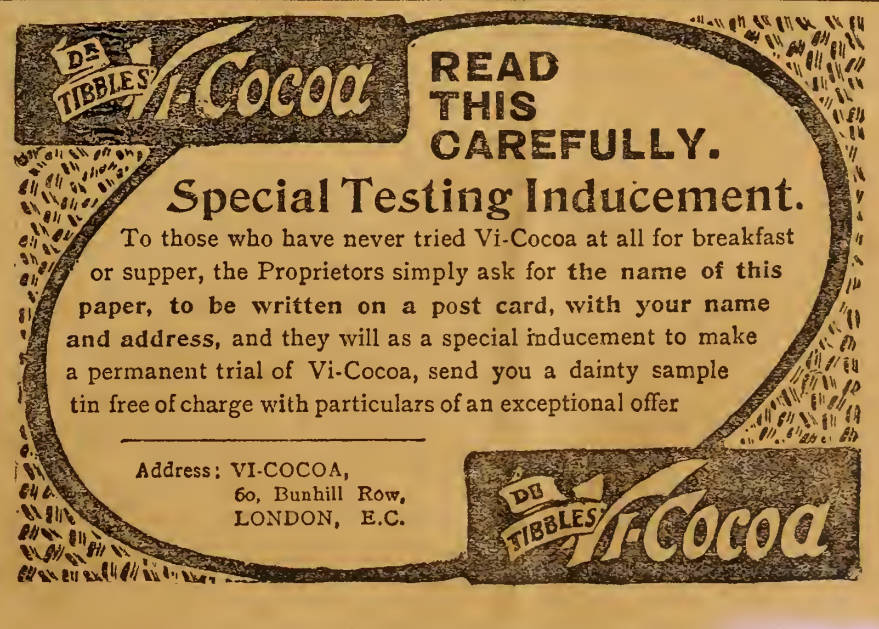
OTLEY.

This society's First Feather Show was held in the Lecture Hall of the Conservative Club on July 6th. Mr. W. Mundell, of Bradford, judged. Mr. W. Dawson, the secretary, had the birds well staged, placed at an even distance apart, and a nice height, every bird could be seen without the trouble of handling them. A very smart and typical lot of young Yorkshire birds were staged, Mr. Crossley's winning yellow being well on leg and full of quality. Mr. Dawson's buff was a very typical specimen, full of quality, grand position, but a shade on the small side. Mr. Joe Robinson staged the best bird in the show, an unevenly marked yellow, well on leg, full of bloom, good wings and grand position; this bird, with care and attention, should moult out into a real good winter bird, we should be pleased to see Mr. Robinson blossom forth into one of our champion exhibitors. In the British class a nice Linnet, well pencilled, nut brown, and very steady was placed first, Mr. Thomas running a close race with a Yellow Bunting. Along with the Secretary, Messrs. Midgley and J. Dawson were the acting stewards.

YORKS. YELL. (6): 1, Crossley, well on leg, grand wings and tail, full of quality, very steady; 2, Gilroy, nice type, good wings and tail, well on leg; 3, Robinson, good flights, well on leg, rich colour; 4, Iveson, fine strong bird; vhc, Dawson; hc, Gilroy. BUFF (4): 1, 4, Dawson, first a slim, typical bird, full of quality, good tail, grand wing carriage, shade on the small side, fourth long, full of quality, grand wings and tail, a bit too old, just falling into moult, a good bird; 2, Gilroy, well on leg, good wings and tail; 3, Iveson, typical, well on leg, long flights and tail. TKD., ETC., YELL. (5): 1, Bonnar, Linnet, well spangled, rich nut brown, very steady; 2, Thomas, Yellow Bunting, rich yellow colour, but lacks in the brown, nice type, very steady, lame when we saw it; 3 Thomas, Chaffinch, bit wild; 4, Iveson, Linnet.



MANSFIELD WOODHOUSE.

The annual show of cage birds of the Mansfield Woodhouse H. and P. Society was held on July 16th. The committee are to be heartily congratulated that the weather was in their favour. This annual fixture being held at the village feast, it is the recognised rendezvous for many hundreds of people in the district, and, given a fine day, is probably the greatest day in the year, especially for the old inhabitants. In the cage bird section the classification is limited, but enthusiasm is always high, and the battle keenly contested. This year the committee wisely took out a license from the C.B.U., and a good steward was found in Mr. Hobbs, who looked well after the exhibits. Mr. J. N. Harrison judged, and we heard few complaints. Mr. W. Roslyn (Mansfield) represented the C.B.U.

PLAINHEAD: 1, W. Barwise, real good Norwich, grand chest and back, full of type and quality; 2, Swain, another of good stamp, but loses to winner in general massiveness; 3, vhc, C. L. Hare, good quality, shade slight in build for present day judges; vhc, J. Swan, J. Scrimshaw; hc, W. Hobbs; res., J. R. Booth. Many birds in this class emphasised the difficulty of keeping birds in show condition at this time of the year. CANARY, BRED 1907: 1, 2, C. L. Hare, well-built beavily varieg. buff Nor. in good trim, second nice neat Yorks.; 3, Hobbs, good quality buff Norwich, fails bead and neck; vhc, Barwise; res., J. Morris. BRITISH: 1, Sparkes, really grand Bramblefinch, well marked, feathers like satin, and as steady as a rock, deserved his place; 2, Clarke, a good Goldie; 3, Hare; res., Roslyn, Blackbird; vhc, Hobbs and Roslyn, still more Goldies. FOREIGN: 1, silver medal for best bird in show, Roslyn, Hill Mynah; 2, 3, Crimson Crested Cardinal and Zebra Finch respectively, belonging to the same exhibitor.

TWITTERINGS.

We understand that it is doubtful if any cage bird show will be held at Frome this year.

We hear that Mr. G. Mackley is still in the doctor's hands, but that he intends resuming business shortly.

After closing for press we hear from Mr. Ramsden as follows:—I will reply to Mr. Clayton next week.

It is proposed to start a new society for Woolwich and District. The project is mooted in our correspondence columns.

Mr. J. Raynes (Norwich Plainhead Club) writes: "The model submitted by Mr. Norman is certainly a credit to him, and it was very much admired at our late meeting."

The many friends and correspondents of Mr. John Dobbie (Leith) will regret to learn that his wife has just undergone a very serious operation. Best wishes for her speedy recovery will be tendered her by the Fancy.

In sending report of the Cambridge Nest Feather Show, writes Mr. T. S. Moore, the Hon. Sec., I regret I omitted to include the following:—Novice Norwich, 1st, G. Bainbridge; Novice Crest, 1st and 2nd, H. Cartwright.

C.B.U. delegates of District 12 are reminded that the two voting papers sent them on the 13th, should reach Mr. Geo. Lythgoe, 25, Stamford Street, Old Trafford, Manchester, not later than to-day (Saturday, July 20th).

Having received so many replies re Green B.F. Cock wanted, we find it impossible to answer all. Would you allow us to thank all applicants through the medium of your valuable paper?—T. and W. NISBET, High Street, Musselburgh.

By an error, the article which appeared in our last issue on "Some Problems of Colourisation in Birds' Plumage" was credited to the Rev. D. Percy Harrison. The writer was our esteemed and valued contributor, Mr. Claude St. John.

In asking for the support of exhibitors for their forthcoming show, Mr. Bowen, Hon. Sec. of the Dawley Society, says:—We are only at the bottom yet. This is our third season. Each time we have given a special prize in every class, and shall do the same this year. We shall be glad of any assistance that can be given us.

Our Cardiff friends are hoping for a good show on July 24th, at Naish's Royal Stores. The schedule is an ambitious one, containing 29 classes, and the judges are the local celebrities Messrs. Walters (Norwich and Crests), T. H. Melhuish (Yorks., Scotch, Cinnamons, and A.O.V.), F. Jones (British and Foreign). The birds are to be staged at 7 o'clock.

Carlisle and Dis. C.B.A. have joined the Cage Bird Union. The annual show will be held on December 6th and 7th. Mr. J. Thompson, of Wigton, will judge Borders; Mr. Parker Robinson all others.

We have selected for our Annual Show, on December 6th and 7th, the following judges:—Messrs. W. Vardy and J. Bexson. We have also joined the Cage Bird Union.—J. C. HAYES, Sec. Rotherham C.B.S.

It came as an agreeable surprise, when I received my CAGE BIRDS on Friday morning, to see my young marked Yorkshire depicted on the front page, with that beautiful young Norwich of Messrs. Cooper Bros. Your artist deserves great credit for such a splendid drawing.—F. EASTERLING (Fulham).

Mr. Lythgoe, Secretary of the C.B. Union, writes:—Kindly announce that the following shows are held under C.B.U. Rules—viz., August 1st., Stonehouse; August 2nd and 3rd, Brislington; August 5th, Churchdown; August 6th, Downend; August 10th, Runcorn and Heanor. Union members may, therefore, enter at these shows.

I am hoping to visit Scotland, writes Mr. J. A. Tonks, of Alma House, Oxford-street, Wednesbury, at the end of the present month, and should much like to call on fanciers. The towns I am likely to visit are Dalry, Glasgow, Edinburgh, Coatbridge, Ayr, and others in Ayrshire. Any fanciers in the above towns who would not mind my visiting them, I shall be pleased to hear from.

The following well-known judges have been appointed to judge at Kilmarnock Show on December 7th:—Scotch, John Smith (Howwood), David Black (Govan); Crests, John Young (Rutherglen); Norwich, John Ferguson (Glasgow); Borders, Peter McKenzie (Kelso); British, D. J. Gardner (Bathgate); Foreign, J. B. King (Kilmarnock). Classification—Scotch, 12 classes; Crests, 13. Crest Club Show to be held in conjunction—Norwich, 13; Borders, 10; British and Foreign, 20. We have also decided to guarantee full prize money in every class.—WM. WATSON, Sec.

Yorkshire C.C.

The adjourned committee meeting, Market Tavern, Godwin-street, Bradford, July 20th, at 5 p.m.—JOHN GREAVES, Sec.

The Weather.

A sudden rise in the temperature has taken place at the time of writing. It will, consequently, be wise to see that one has the means for efficient and free ventilation to keep the room at a tolerable temperature. Do not wait until the birds are showing the effect of the heat before knowing whether you have the means to combat it.—CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Bradford B.B. and Mule Club.

Meeting to be held Market Tavern, Bradford, July 20th, at 5 p.m. Business, framing rules, etc. At the above meeting the outside vice-presidents (two), and twelve committee, are to be elected, and we should like to see large numbers of fanciers from other places besides Bradford.—W. R. MYERS.

Another Canary-Bullie.

Mr. Walter G. Bull, of Redfield (the well-known cage bird enthusiast), informs us that a Hybrid has been bred by Mr. J. Maggs, of Hambrook, this year from a Canary cock and Bullie hen, and that it is a beautiful specimen, too. It was to have been on view at the Bristol C.B.S.'s Young Bird Show, held July 3rd last.

Breeders—What of the Season?

Taking them upon the whole the reports to hand of the breeding season, so far as it has gone, are distinctly encouraging. Here and there we hear of a disastrous experience, but north, south, east and west the average of healthy youngsters is considerably better than for some years past. The spread of knowledge about Canary breeding has had much to do with the situation.

Cinnamon Marked Yorks. C.C.

The last day for receiving applications for our patronage is July 27th. Meeting for considering applications will be held at the Market Tavern, Bradford, on July 27th, at 5 p.m. There will be 13 prizes, besides the best 4th and most points for novices, at each competition show, particulars of which I will forward later. All fanciers are earnestly invited to join the club.—R. GARNETT, Hon. Sec., 17, Woodville Terrace, Windhill, Shipley, Yorks.

Welsh Cage Bird Club.

I provided myself last week with evidence of the truth of the old adage, "The more haste the worse speed." In order to meet the suggestion that I should secure publication of the result of the voting for the Welsh Cage Bird Club in CAGE BIRDS last week, though voting papers only finished coming in the same week, I omitted to take into consideration 11 votes secured by Mr. Camden for the position of committeeman. Mr. Nicholas, therefore, will give place to Mr. Camden on the committee, and my apologies to both gentlemen for the oversight are hereby tendered.—F. CARL, Scrutineer.

An Unfortunate Finish.

I have been rather unfortunate in Hybrid breeding this season, writes Mr. R. J. Howe, the well-known Wellingborough fancier. I had 14 eggs from a hen Hawfinch and cock Greenfinch, and eight eggs from Song Thrush and Blackbird. I had also a cock Nightingale that used to sing to a hen Blackcap splendidly, but just as she was starting to build, the 'Gale fell in full moult. I might as well say that all the above eggs came to an unfortunate end through my aviary coming to grief from the falling in of the wall of a burnt-out factory. The aviary was 28 feet long, 8 feet high, and 5 feet deep, and was a splendid place for the purpose.

"Quality is the true test of cheapness." This is a motto we see prominently figuring in Mr. Samuel Young's latest catalogue of appliances which has just reached us. Mr. Young has for many years been recognised as one of those sterling traders who do their utmost to give their customers satisfaction, and this compendious and clearly-printed compilation of his wares sets out in easily-understood fashion all that is necessary to know about them. Clap nets of every size, Lark netting, springs, call-cages, bird lime, one-hand hemp mills, spring brass bird poles, bird foods, cages, etc., in endless variety—these are only some of the things Mr. Young sets himself out for, and certainly all bird trappers should immediately communicate with Mr. Young, Misterton, Crewkerne, Somerset, mentioning CAGE BIRDS, when a copy of his price-list will be sent them

Under this heading we shall illustrate weekly some idea useful to the bird keeper. Readers are invited to send us particulars of any novel and practical appliance of use in our hobby, either in cage, birdroom or aviary, with a rough sketch of same where possible. Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

AN AID TO BUDGERIGAR BREEDING.

Sent by J. Thompson, The Common Road, Hucknall Huthwaite, Notts.

Enclosed is a sketch of a method I find very useful to save young Budgerigars that have been thrown, or carried, out of the husk by the parent birds. It catches the young birds instead of allowing them to be dashed on to the hard floor of the aviary and killed. Get a piece of old canvas, or cloth, and cut it triangle shape, and eighteen inches along the three sides. Then fasten three pieces of string, or tape, to the three corners and suspend the canvas underneath the husk, allowing it to be sufficiently slack to bag a little in the middle. When you have done so, if you take a look at the bag (or net) about twice a day, you may find there is a young bird in it. It may at first appear to be dead, but take it to the fire and breathe on it and warm it, and you will soon see signs of animation returning. Then return the bird to the husk and it will soon be all right again. —J. Thompson.

A REMOVABLE PARTITION.

Sent by S. Booth, 48, Edward Street, Grantham.

The accompanying is a sketch of a removable partition which I am using for converting a large flight cage into a double breeder. I have three in use, and find them very handy. They are easily fixed and easily removed at the end of the breeding season. Fig. 1 shows a piece of wood ¼-in. thick, height and width to be ¾-in. less than the inside measurement of cage. It has a piece cut out 5 in. by 3½ in. to take a wired slide (D) which is made of two pieces of punched bar 5 in. long and eight or nine bits of wire 3½ in. long, and one small piece bent and soldered on to form a handle, as shown at D, Fig 2. Four bits of wire marked C hold the partition in place, two driven fast in the bottom to stand out ¼ in. and two just slightly driven in the top, so as to be easily drawn out when you wish to remove the partition. The four strips of wood marked B on Fig. 1 may be thinned down to 3-16 or ⅛ in., which will make a neater job than if they are ¼ in. thick. Round off the edges a little, and fix as shown by dotted lines marked B on Fig. 2, and fasten with thin oval sprigs ½ in. long. The strips will form the grooves to carry the wire slide as shown by E. Give it a good coat of paint. This will be found a neat and clean partition, and will not afford a harbour for red mite, as there is a half-inch space between back of cage and partition, and ¾ in. at the top and ¼ in. at the front. This is for cages with a loose rail in front, which I much prefer to sand-trays, as with about ½ in. deep of sand on the cage bottom, I can keep my birds much cleaner than with a sand-tray. It may be used with sand-tray cages by shortening the partition, and fixing a false piece to clear the sand-tray and support the partition.—S. Booth.

IN THE COURTS.

SHOW CANARIES GOING ASTRAY.

A Railway Company's Liability.

A case of importance to exhibitors was heard at the Wigton (Cumberland) County Court on Monday last, July 15th, in which Joseph Thompson, a well-known Wigton Canary fancier, sued the Maryport and Carlisle Railway Company for the recovery of £3 1s. 5d. damages for breach of a special contract, dated January 6th, 1907, by which defendants undertook to carry from Wigton and deliver at Llanelly a case containing two Canaries in time for the opening of a cage bird show held on January 8th, 1907. The case, plaintiff alleged, was not carried to Llanelly, but was returned to him by the defendant company on January 8th. Particulars of plaintiff's claim were:—Loss of time and labour in preparing the birds for show (including 3s. entry fees paid), £3; carriage paid to defendants, 1s. 5d. The defendants had paid into court 4s. 5d. in full satisfaction of the claim, but at the same time denied liability. Mr. Hetherington was for plaintiff, and Mr. Rigg for defendants. The case was heard by his Honour Judge Steavenson, in a crowded court.

Mr. Hetherington, in opening, said that plaintiff was a well-known breeder and exhibitor of Border Fancy Canaries. On Jan. 6th he took to Wigton Station a box containing two Canaries he had entered for a show at Llanelly. The box had a reversible label, and when handed over the label read:—"Live stock.—Urgent. For Show. Deliver immediately." Then followed the address of the show secretary, and printed across the face of the label were the words, "To be delivered before 9.30, Tuesday morning, Jan. 8th, 1907." On the reverse side of the label (not then visible, of course) were the words, "Live Stock.—Urgent. Deliver immediate," followed by the plaintiff's name and address. This latter address could not be seen without undoing the string by which the label was attached to the box. At the railway station plaintiff saw the head clerk, Purdain, and called his attention to the fact that the birds were for the show at Llanelly, remarking he had brought them in good time, so that there would be no doubt about them getting there in time. The clerk agreed, and made out and signed a contract, plaintiff paying the carriage to Llanelly, 1s. 5d.—His Honour: Value declared?—Mr. Hetherington: No value declared.—Mr. Rigg said that under the bye-laws value should not exceed 5s. where no value was declared.—The plaintiff, however, was not suing for the value of the goods, Mr. Hetherington said, but suing for breach of contract. On the morning of the show a porter returned the box containing the Canaries to plaintiff, without any explanation. The label had been reversed, plaintiff's name and address appearing at the top. Upon inquiring at Wigton Station, plaintiff was told they did not even know where the case had come from; no way-bill came with it. It simply landed up in the train without being booked. A few days later the original way-bill was produced, marked "Case not seen," and plaintiff was told it had been through to Llanelly. But the birds had not. Plaintiff was claiming for loss of time and labour in preparing the birds for show, and also the 3s. entry fees paid and 1s. 5d. carriage. He (Mr. Hetherington) quite admitted that damages plaintiff could recover were not the value of the prizes for which he was competing, although it was a fact that plaintiff was a noted and successful exhibitor. As a matter of fact, he had not shown once this year without securing the first prize, and had won 20 first prizes with 23 birds. Plaintiff, the advocate further explained, was in the running for a cup to be awarded to the winner of most points at four shows held in different parts of the country. At two of these—Dulwich and Morecambe—it had already been won, and Llanelly Show was the third of the series. Up to that time plaintiff was leading all other competitors, so that it was very unfortunate for him, at all events, that the birds should have miscarried. He did not want to make too much of that, however, but submitted that plaintiff was entitled to damages for breach of contract.

Mr. Rigg said that defendants held that the case came within No. 3 of the special conditions printed on the back of the contract: "The company will not in any case be responsible for any loss of market or any other special damages whatever."—His Honour: Is that a "reasonable" condition?

Joseph Thompson, the plaintiff, gave evidence. Asked how long it took to prepare Canaries for show, he said that from July to October the birds took special attention, as it was the time they cast their feathers. If awarded the full amount claimed, he reckoned he would not be half paid for the loss sustained. The cup referred to was offered for competition at Dulwich, Morecambe, Llanelly and the Crystal Palace. He won at the two first-named, and was standing top for the cup. Llanelly was not as big a show as Dulwich.—His Honour: You did not show at the Crystal Palace?—Witness: No, my chance was gone.—Cross-examined: He had a large number of Canaries, and paid special attention to all of them. Dulwich Show was in October, and Morecambe Show in November, and the attendance he was now claiming for covered the period previous to Dulwich Show.—His Honour: How many birds do you keep, getting up for show?—Witness: Between 30 and 40, your Honour. I have nearly 100 in my room to-day.—His Honour: Have you each bird in a separate cage when you are getting it up for show?—Witness: Yes.

For the defence, Mr. Rigg submitted that the damages claimed were too remote. They were exceedingly sorry for Mr. Thompson. It was a great pity, but it was not the fault of the Maryport and Carlisle Railway Company. How it happened no one could tell. The birds were despatched from Wigton to Carlisle in time, and certainly reached Crewe. They had to change from the London and North Western Railway to the Great Western, and all that arrived concerning them was the waybill, the birds coming back to Wigton on the Tuesday morning by the first train. Then, as he had already indicated, there was the special condition, which his Honour could consider was reasonable or not; and he further submitted that the damages were too remote and excessive. It was not so much a question of money as principle. Supposing a man was sending a horse to London for the Derby by rail, and by some means the horse was not delivered in time at Epsom, his Honour could not say that the railway company were responsible for the training of the animal from the beginning until the race was won. Damages of that description were far too remote. This was a competition, and for anything Mr. Thompson or anyone else knew, there might have been a couple of Canaries at Llanelly Show which would have beaten his. His (the speaker's) experience of bird shows was not very great, but what he did know led him to know that judges' decisions were very variable. (Laughter.)

His Honour said the real thing the defence had to establish was whether their condition was reasonable. It was a sweeping condition. Unless they could show him some authority, he was of opinion that it was too sweeping, and not reasonable. Then it came to the simple proposition, "Are the damages that were incurred excessive or too remote?" Part of the damages claimed might be too remote, but the other part might be quite reasonable. He could not help thinking that although a man might not be entitled to all the damage of getting up his birds for the show, yet he would be entitled to something for his time and trouble. He thought, however, £3 would be excessive. The question was, whether a railway company—who know everything in some way or other—(laughter)—could reasonably contemplate that a bird would require special attention to be prepared for show.—Mr. Rigg pointed out that the plaintiff was claiming for something which happened before the contract was made. They could not say that the damages sustained by plaintiff were either the "necessary or lawful result of the defendants' conduct."—His Honour: If that was so, a person preparing boots and shoes could not recover the value of such goods not delivered—could not recover anything in preparing and making them ready.—Mr. Rigg: Making them!—His Honour: Well, preparing a bird for show is "making" it, in a way.

Certain cases bearing upon the point were referred to, and his Honour remarked: I am not allowed books. The Government, in its wisdom, does not allow County Court judges to carry books about. He is supposed to know everything—to carry everything in his head. I have not got everything in my head, I must confess. (Laughter.)—The Judge further stated that he would like time to consider his verdict, and he would give his decision at the next Court.

An International Barter.

The Town Council of Adelaide, N.S.W., is exchanging with Weymouth Corporation white for black Swans. Ten of the dozen sent from Australia have arrived at Weymouth, the other two having died on the way. In the same cages which brought the birds to England a dozen Weymouth Swans will be packed for the Adelaide Ornamental Waters.

Her Majesty as a Bird Keeper.

At Queen Alexandra's new Danish home at Hvidoere a small aviary has been erected, close to the kennels. We understand that the inmates are to be brought up on the no-egg plan. Whether this refers to a prohibition against them laying any eggs in the royal cages we confess ourselves unable to state. Anyway, Her Majesty has our best wishes, whatever her intentions.

Talking "Parrot" at Withington.

Some practical joke is evidently in progress at Withington, Manchester. According to one correspondent, a marvellous talking Grey Parrot, with very distinct articulation, travels every day by a train leaving Stockport and arriving at Withington at 8.27 a.m. Another correspondent volunteers the information that this marvellous "bird" usually takes a seat in a smoking compartment near the engine, makes a hideous bawl each morning, and is, in reality, a railway employee. Will some Withington man explain?

Profits in the Bird Fancy.

A most interesting item of information has reached us. It appears that a bird which was purchased at the last Crystal Palace Show for a figure approximating a "tenner"—and which, by the way, was purchased by its previous owner for the ridiculous figure of 18s.—has been successful in producing about £30 worth of young stock for its new owner this season. Had the original owner kept his bird, it might by some be assumed he would now be at least £37 10s. better off than he is through the transaction; but, then, at least £36 worth of knowledge and experience have been required to ascertain the correct value of the specimen in question. This seems to throw an interesting sidelight on the question of sight versus pedigree breeding.

The Colour Food Bill.

Ten tons of colour food! These words have many times caught my eye, writes "J.E.N.," in the "Norwich Evening News," and often have I wondered what number of our little songsters it would take to consume this great bulk of artificial colouring. Mr. J. Sandiford, of Preston, Lancashire, has this season manufactured this great weight of colour food. Taking 71,680 pairs of Norwich Canaries, each pair will also consume one score eggs in the ten weeks, thus totalling 1,433,600, valued at £5,973 6s. 8d. The amount of bread used during this period would be about 3½ lbs. per pair, and that will come close upon 17,920 stones, the price of which may be taken to be £1,306 14s. 8d. In addition to this, there is the sugar bill, which amounts to £298 13s. 4d.

Some Amazing Figures.

The ten tons of colour feed, of course, continues "J.E.N." must be taken as two-thirds of tasteless pepper, which may be valued at £984 17s. 10d., and one-third of hot Natal, £946 12s., making in all £1,731 9s. 10d. for a condiment so much valued by the true fancier of the Norwich Plainhead Canary. The whole cost to produce the 71,680 pairs of Canaries would be £9,310 6s., the major portion of which comes from the working men's pockets, who indulge in the fascinating hobby of breeding Canaries.

"Nearly off T'Perch."

Mr. J. Bailey, of Allerton, is a well-known figure not only in Yorkshire circles, but amongst London bird men. His visits to the Great Glass House are very regular, and his fame as a breeder and exhibitor of the "slim gentlemen" is world-wide. We were delighted, therefore, to run up against him in Bradford, looking the picture of health, and could hardly credit his statement that he had been nearly "a dead 'un" with pneumonia. Mr. Bailey confided to us that he had had a good season, and that he hoped to produce something to astonish the London chaps. Londoners, said James, have progressed marvellously in their breeding of late. He was in hopes of having a run round the Metropolis and then going over to Jersey to see his partner, Mr. Swanger.

CANARIES.

NORWICH PLAINHEADS.

Answered by J. H. PAYNE.

Painting and Moving.

Markham.—(1) I should certainly advise you not to paint your bird house while the birds are in it, as you would be almost sure to have them go wrong. Why not use one of the many good washable distempers that are now on the market? You can get them in any colour, and they would be quite harmless, and would answer your purpose admirably. (2) You could move your young birds into the house whilst they are in the moult. The sooner you can shift them the better. Pleased to hear my previous advice has been of service to you.

The Clear-Egg Puzzle.

Anxious.—It is impossible for me to tell you the cause of your having four nests of clear eggs as, of course, the fact of your rearing two in another nest proves neither cock nor hen is barren, and the hen must certainly have been in good health and condition to have laid five clutches. I should have been under the impression the cock had fallen a bit sick, but, of course, such could not be the case if he has been in full song and very lively. Such cases do occur occasionally, and there is no accounting for them. The only advice I can give you is not to depend upon the hen for next season's breeding, as most likely the strain on the system produced by the laying of five nests of eggs, followed by moulting, will have an effect on her constitution.

Never Lays.

Herbell.—The best advice I can give you is to get rid of the hen, as she is either a barren one or an old one that has been used up, and her breeding days over. The fact of the man you purchased her from at a good price as a cock not now being in the Fancy is no excuse for him not recompensing you in some way. Had he been an honourable man he would either have returned your money or have found you another cock. His excuse is a lame one—about as bad a one as the bird he sold you. I have a friend a solicitor, and I will ask his advice as to what chance you would have in an action for recovery, and will let you know his opinion in next week's issue.

Dont Part Yet.

"Cage Birds" Reader.—Instead of parting with any of your young birds now, I should advise you to keep them, and when they are through the moult you will then be able to tell the cocks from the hens by their singing. Pair one of the young cocks back to its mother, and one of the hens to the father. If the father is a yellow, then you will want a buff hen for it (or vice versa), the same rule applying to the mother. When you have picked out your birds, you can then make exchanges with your friends. You are mistaken in supposing you will have to keep mixing the blood of other birds with your own in order to get good birds. To found a good strain you must practice a little judicious in-breeding, but take care only to use good sound healthy stock.

A Little "Run Down."

E.E.W. (Devonshire).—As you do not say anything about your bird making a noise in any way, I think the cause of his not singing is due to the fact that he is "run down" a bit. Let him have in his drinking water, fresh daily for a fortnight, 10 drops of tincture of quinine, and three times a week give a small teaspoonful of hard-boiled egg and crushed biscuit, well mixing with it 6 drops of Parrish's Chemical Food. Let him have three times a week a couple of young dandelion leaves or a spray of watercress. As you do not say how you are feeding, of course I cannot give you any advice on that point, but I should conclude you have not been far off the mark, as you say he has been a good songster for three years.

An Increase.

Perplexed.—The mixture you have been giving your bird is a very good one, and your treatment in all other respects quite correct. I think you had better continue the mixture for another week or two, when I feel sure you will find an improvement in him. If not, then write again, and I will advise you; but you may give double the quantity, as 12 drops is not sufficient.

Feeding Him Generously.

Llan.—Give your bird in his drinking water, fresh daily, for a fortnight or three weeks, 10 drops of tincture of quinine. Three times a week let him have a piece of sponge cake, about the size of a walnut, over which put a few drops of best sherry, or good old port. In addition to the plain canary, you may give him three times a week a half teaspoonful of the following mixture: Hemp, German rape, and niger seed, equal parts; also, occasionally, a pinch of maw seed. (2) Yes; Parrish's Chemical Food is practically the same as that you asked for, and would be just as beneficial.

YORKSHIRES.

Answered by H. W. BATTYE.

Young Birds Swollen.

Whinple.—Give the young Yorkshires canary seed as their staple food, and in addition, for one week, give half a teaspoonful of fresh made egg food to each bird, sprinkling a little maw seed over the egg food, and to each two tablespoonfuls of drinking water add 8 drops of good Scotch whisky. Stop the milk sop and crushed hemp seed. When you see this examine the birds again, and if they are still in the same state get a feather and dip the end in turpentine and lightly daub the birds' bellies with it. If you have another room at liberty, you may remove the ailing birds into it if you wish, but I don't think it is really necessary to do so.

Linseed or Linseed Meal?

Tren Crow.—Canaries do not, generally speaking, care much about eating linseed, and that being so it is in no way strange that your birds should waste a lot during their moult. I gather from what you write that this seed has been given in its whole state all through the moult in previous years, and you are intending to use linseed meal in place of the seed this season. This will answer your purpose all right, but any seed that is ground for birds' food should be newly ground, and much of the linseed meal sold is of inferior quality in the seed, and will in most cases have been ground a considerable time before it is sold, and, being of a greasy nature, it will, like hemp seed, lose much of its oil by not being fresh ground. There are machines that will crush seeds, and if you got one of these you could crush just as much as you required for present use, mixing, say, a teaspoonful to half a pint of mixed colour food. There is no necessity to give it until the birds are well advanced in the moult, say three-parts through, at which time a small piece of boiled carrot stuck in the wires of the cage twice or three times a week will greatly assist in tightening up the new feathers, but this should not be given until the bird has practically got rid of its old feathers. (2) A little moist sugar, say a teaspoonful to half a pint of mixed colour food, will both assist in depositing the colour where it should be, and at the same time prevent the constipation you say your birds have been subject to, but if your birds do show signs of constipation 6 drops of syrup of buckthorn in two tablespoonfuls of water is a suitable proportion to use. (3) Sulphate of iron is of service given at the proper time and in proper quantities. I prefer the citrate of iron, which you will be able to get at any chemist's, who will tell you which is the best to use, but neither should be given till the bird has nearly completed its moult. This is my opinion, some think differently, and give it all through the moult, which, I think, is calculated to do the birds harm, and over and above that is needless so far as tightening up the feathers is concerned, if you can get rid of the old feathers quickly you need not have much fear about the new ones coming all right.

Young Birds Puffy.

Mauvis Hasard.—(1) I think your birds are about to begin their moult, and they often seem sleepy and inclined to mope a bit at that time. I should advise you to give half a teaspoonful of maw seed to each bird daily, and to stop the rape seed. I don't think the chemical food will do any harm, but may be beneficial, so you may continue same for a week or two. (2) Probably the nest of four that have been out of sorts ever since leaving the nest have been over-eating themselves. Put 4 drops of syrup of buckthorn into their egg food for three days, and then for a week put 4 drops of chemical food in place of the buckthorn, well mixing with the egg food. (3) From the description of the pair you give, I should expect to breed mostly heavily marked or variegated birds, both green and Cinnamon marked. The food should be mixed with the colour food in the usual quantities, as if you were using ordinary egg food. About two tablespoousful to half a pint of the food when mixed.

Birds Slipping the Perch.

Mayo.—The cause of your young birds slipping the perch is probably weakness. Put in the birds' drinking water, fresh daily, six drops of tincture of steel and six drops of brandy. Give a little egg food three times a week, and half a teaspoonful of maw seed on the days you do not give the egg food. In place of the round perches give thin ones made like the letter V or triangle shape. This may greatly improve them, but birds troubled as yours are do not very often get perfect.

CRESTS AND CRESTBREDS.

Answered by W. E. GREEVES.

In an Outside Building.

G.S.—A portable building in a sheltered position in your garden would be a suitable place for keeping your Crests in, provided the birds have been used to a cold room. If they have been used to warmth during the winter you might possibly be able to introduce a little heat during very severe weather, and, if so, it would then answer admirably. Carry out your intentions with regard to light, ventilation, and being raised from the ground; also covering with felt, especially the roof.

Boreham should note that there is no advantage to be gained by colour feeding Crests or Crestbreds. I advise you not to do it.

CINNAMONS.

Abnormal Beaks.

F. Jarvis.—Apart from being able to examine your young birds, I should think their beaks would be all right if the old hen would not nibble them. The false growth seems to me to be the natural scab forming in the healing of the injuries she has inflicted. You cannot do much good; the only thing I can suggest is that you touch the sore places with boric ointment, lanoline, or extract of witch hazel.

LIZARDS.

Answered by BARKER CLEGG.

No Perfect Caps.

A. Wayne.—Being your first season it is rather disappointing that all the caps are imperfect. Never mind that. You may have a few gems of broken caps. Select those birds which are good to the eye lash; don't trouble yourself about the irregularity, because you say they don't run down the neck at all. Cage them separately and cover up with paper or curtains, and proceed with the colour feeding. The remainder you may turn into the aviary. I must give this encouragement that there is a great probability of your being satisfied after the moult, because many what you now call imperfections will have greatly improved; in fact, so much that you may be proud of your broken caps.

MISCELLANEOUS CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by "OLD JUDGE."

Green Food for Young Birds.

Is it safe to give green food to young Canaries after they are eight weeks old, and should they have the bath?—R. L.

R. L.—Yes, the young birds should still have green food. I believe in giving it to them right through the moult. It assists in the digestion of their other food, and keeps the liver working freely. During the warm weather you should give them a bath every other day. It will materially assist the moult. I don't think your birds have commenced moulting yet. The feathers you saw were probably plucked by the old birds.

Young Plucking each other.

Rose.—Give them green food two or three times a day; also some spray millet. They probably do it from a desire to employ themselves. You know the old story—Satan finds some mischief still for idle hands to do. Let your birds have employment and they will doubtless leave off plucking each other, unless you have them overcrowded. Overcrowding is often the cause of feather plucking.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

Linnets and a Greenhouse.

Would you recommend this mixture for Linnets throughout the year:—One part canary seed, half part German rape, half part teazle, quarter part linseed, with a sprinkling of hemp, maw, and cracked sunflower, and green stuff? Should I add any millet, niger, charlock, or any other seed, such as dandelion or gold of pleasure? Would an unused greenhouse, 9 ft. by 6 ft., free from draught and wet, facing west, do to keep the birds in (in cages) throughout the winter, if warmed by an oil stove? Have just reared nest of five Linnets. Is it rare for all five to turn out cocks, as these have?—GINT.

Gint.—The stock mixture you mention is a good one, and quite suitable for Linnets. But the "sprinkling" of other seeds does not want adding to it; the latter should be given separately, occasionally, as "tit-bits." A quarter part of charlock might be added to it with advantage. During the moult the linseed should be brought up to a half part, and a half part of hemp should also be added. All the other seeds (except millet) are good to give as occasional treats. You must give them plantain, ripe shepherd's purse and chickweed, and flowering groundsel when moulting. This greenhouse, seeing that it is used for no other purpose, might answer very well as a bird house. The variations of temperature experienced in such places, however, are generally detrimental to birds. You must arrange for efficient ventilation during very hot weather. Could you not manage to then replace some of the glass portion with wire netting? I think it would be better unheated, if free from damp. Oil lamps, anyhow, are far from ideal heaters. They require considerable attention to avoid smoke and smell. It certainly must be rare for all five young Linnets in a nest to turn out cocks. But are you really certain? Young Linnets are very difficult to sex except by experienced fanciers—and they are often puzzled. I remember a British-bird-loving friend and myself being told of a nest of five hand-reared Goldfinches which all turned out cocks. Yet the very one we were being shown was actually a hen, though the owner did not know it, as it sang, as many hens will.

Goldfinch-Lizard Canary Mules.

F.K.—Mules bred from a Goldfinch and hen Lizard Canary would be quite equal in value to ordinary dark Mules bred from any other variety of hen Canary. But ordinary dark Mules have no great value at any time; it is only good show specimens which fetch big prices. As songsters they may fetch from five to ten shillings each, according to customer; they might fetch the latter figure easily if colour fed and showing plenty of colour, as they are almost certain to do, seeing the mother they had. One way to enhance the value of otherwise ordinary dark Mules is to train them to sing under either a good Linnet or Goldfinch, so that they sing the pure song of one or other of these species. They must not hear a Canary, of course, or other singing bird.

Moulting a Pied Blackbird.

Black and White.—Pied Blackbirds are freaks (as, of course, you know), and these kind of freaks often moult in a freakish fashion. I have known many pied birds, of all species, moult out lighter at each successive season, and, on the contrary, I have known them moult out darker—that is, lose more or less of their white plumage. One friend of mine paid a stiffish price for a pied cock Linnet (very nearly all white), and this bird moulted out all brown at its very first moult indoors. So far as my own observations carry me, I am of the opinion that the only constant specimens are the true Albinos—i.e., those that are pink-eyed. All others seem more or less unstable, and liable either to revert towards the normal or to progress further in their particular form of freakishness. Thus your pied Blackbird may get lighter, or he may lose the few light feathers he at present possesses. I will say this, however, that the general tendency seems undoubtedly for a bird to moult lighter and lighter. As regards colour feeding your specimen, I cannot advise this. I have never yet seen a colour-fed pied Blackbird, but should imagine, as the beauty of such a specimen lies in the contrast 'twixt black and white, that the bird would be spoilt in the process. A pink (or red) and black Blackie would look distinctly funny, I should imagine. If you moult the bird another year, perhaps you will let me know whether the area of white plumage increases; I should be glad to hear, also to learn the experiences of other readers on this point. If you want a "tip" to get gloss on your bird's plumage, here it is: Grind a little linseed very finely, fresh every day, and add a teaspoonful to its allowance of stock food. Begin with less than this amount, and work up to full strength. Let the bird bathe freely, in cold water.

Should she Nest again?

Chadwell.—You will, in my opinion, make a grave mistake if you let the hen go to nest again. It is very near the moulting season now, and the extra strain a fourth nest would put upon her might so weaken her as to make her unable to withstand the strain of casting and reproducing her plumage, and so go wrong and die, or be spoilt for next year's breeding. She has served you very well indeed, and deserves consideration at your hands—many fanciers would give something to possess a few hens bringing off nine young in the first two nests and a "bumper lot" of seven in the third to finish up with, as it were. It is very seldom indeed a hen lays seven eggs, and probably much more seldom that she rears all seven young. Take away nest and nesting material, and let her have the run of a good sized cage, say not less than a 3 ft. flight or double breeder, when she will probably soon drop into moult. I should not put her with the young (or other birds, if I could help it) until after she has had a week or two by herself, for, with the "nesting fever" on her still, she would probably set to and pluck them. If you don't want to risk harm coming to her, however, do not let her nest again. If you do, she might quite likely drop into moult ere the young could fend for themselves, then desert them and let them die.

Stuffed, and in a Case.

Wants to Know.—You say the bird whose name you desire to know is about 12 ins. long, with green back and wings, and white spots on the edge of the flight feathers; throat, whitish; underparts, greenish-grey; top of head, grey, red at the "ends" (I presume you mean at the ends of the feathers); round the eye black, on the rump yellowish. Well, my friend, that is a pretty accurate description of the Green Woodpecker (Gecinus viridus). It is rather surprising, however, to find you make no mention of its peculiar tail, or of the fact that it has its toes disposed in pairs (two before, two behind) to assist it in climbing up tree trunks. If your specimen has no red in the moustachial streak (the black streak situate under the eye) it is a female. The Green Woodpecker is a favourite subject of the taxidermist, for it is a striking looking bird, and its habits permit of it being "set up" in a manner likely to attract customers.

What Bird is it?

Pryderns.—I have no hesitation in saying that your bird is a Twite (Cannabina flavirostris). If it has a distinct ruddy patch of colour on the rump, it is an undoubted cock, as hens never possess this—in a two-year old and over male this patch is quite a rosy-red. I should, judging by the colour of the beak, say your bird is a young male. In some districts the Twite is known variously as the Mountain, Stone, Rock, Grey, Heather, and Small Linnet, etc. The call note sounds something like "Twit" (long-drawn out) hence its name. The cock has a pleasant little song, not altogether like a Linnet's, but more like a combination of the notes of the Redpoll and Siskin. It is neither a pretentious nor very varied ditty. The cock Twite is not at all a difficult bird to breed Mules from when paired to a Canary.

Moulting a Lark.

R. Kelly.—I don't know that you need anticipate any particular trouble in moulting your Skylark. The moult is a natural proceeding, and a bird in good health at the start, and being well and properly fed, is likely to go through without any hitch whatever, though losses will occur, of course, in the best regulated establishments, and cannot be avoided. Some members of the Lark and Pipit family are difficult to get to break into moult, however, and will often go a year or more without, apparently, shedding any of their plumage. One of the most successful winning exhibition Skylarks out last season failed to moult at the previous moulting period, yet was not one jot the worse for it, so far as you could see. Whether he will moult this year remains to be seen. Many Lark fanciers endeavour to get their birds to break by gradually retiring their cages into a dark corner (or cupboard), or gradually sheeting down their cages with a dark cloth, so that they are, to all intents and purposes, living in the dark. These conditions usually cause a bird to drop into moult. You don't say how you are feeding the bird, but I presume in a proper manner. Let it have plenty of road-dust, containing some insect powder, to use as its bath, and let it have a tin of good grit to use if it so chooses. Also do not omit to mix some finely-chopped green stuff amongst its food daily, the best possible being young leaves of clover grass. You can ensure a supply of this by keeping a turf or two by you. A few mealworms every day, and a spider or two now and again, will also be of much help. If there are any particular points you want information on, state them briefly, and I will try to give you an answer. You certainly should read the article on the Skylark by Mr. Allaway, which appeared in No. 282, date June 8th, post free 2d.

Moulting a Linnet Mule and a Bullfinch.

Herbell.—I cannot understand why your 1906 Linnet Mule and your cock Bullfinch should be unsteady. They ought both to be steady enough cre this. What type of cage do you use? The box-pattern (wired at front only) is the correct one. You should house them both in a Finch stock cage, which any up-to-date cage maker will supply, and which was illustrated and described in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL for 1906. Run them out occasionally into an all-wire "hop" cage, and spray them lightly with water; also let them spend an occasional day or two in a show cage. This will help to steady them. All dark Mules need to be colour-fed to stand any chance of success in keen competition. The pepper used is the tasteless, sweet pepper. It is given them in the same manner as it is given to Canaries. For full details of the process you should consult a good book on Canary keeping, and read the various articles which have recently appeared in our columns. An easy way would be to use the egg cake recommended "Saddler" last week. Mix in the colour food in very small quantity at first, to get the bird on to it, gradually working up to full strength, about one part of pepper to four of crumbled egg cake. He should eat about a teaspoonful daily. In the drinking water, three times a week, dissolve a tiny pinch of citrate of iron crystals. Give the usual seeds to both the Mule (note reply to "Moult" last week) and the Bullfinch. The latter bird should have a free supply of all the fruits and berries with colour in them, especially blackberries and privet berries; in addition to these you have straw, rasp, elder, mountain ash, and other berries, black currants and cherries, etc., to say nothing of the wild seeding plants I am so frequently recommending. That Bullie is a great bud and fruit-eating bird one look at his bill should convince anyone; try him with any fruit you think suitable. Let both birds bathe freely.

Linseed During the Moult.

A. Wilson.—I certainly think linseed of great value during the moult, for its liberal use puts a fine gloss on the new plumage. It is Canaries chiefly that do not seem to care to eat it in quantity, for all British seed-eaters are partial to it—as a matter of fact, most Canaries like it quite well, too. I give every bird of mine, whether Hybrid or British, some linseed every day, and I make sure they eat a fair quantity as the moult draws to a conclusion (at least a teaspoonful a day, somewhat according to size of bird). It can be given amongst the colour food, if necessary. For this purpose it must be ground to powder in a mill, fresh every day. Don't overdo it then, however, by giving it in the seed mixture as well. A little of this ground up linseed (about a teaspoonful, the precise quantity again according to the bird) is very useful to mix among the soft food of moulting Thrushes, Larks, Pipits, and other soft-food-eating species.

Young in an Aviary.

Stanley.—No particular preparation is necessary for feeding any young which may be hatched. I presume you supply the usual seeds, and give suitable green food (including seeding wild kinds, chickweed, shepherd's purse, groundsel, grasses, etc.). If this is so, then all else needed is the provision of two dishes of soft food daily—one containing a first-class insectivorous mixture, and the other the usual egg and biscuit (or bread) adopted by fanciers. If you choose to do so you can omit the latter item—should you give it be certain it is always fresh and sweet, changing the supply twice or thrice a day during very hot weather, and keeping it in a well-shaded portion of the aviary. A feed of small mealworms daily would be appreciated and any other suitable insect food you can lay hands on, though the breeding birds, I am afraid, would get little of this with Chaffinches about. It certainly is not too late as yet for young to be successfully reared this season. By-the-bye, the egg cake recommended "Saddler" in last week's issue would answer admirably as a substitute for the egg and biscuit. It need not be moistened at all, providing it is not too stale and dry, but may simply be crumbled into a suitable dish and placed in the aviary. Don't add anything at all to it. But give the insectivorous food in addition.

Bleeding over the Beak.

C.W.T.—It is difficult to account for the recurrence of the bleeding except on the supposition that one or other of the birds the hen Goldfinch is with attacks her now and again and pecks her over the head at the base of the beak; or she may dash about the flight cage for some reason or other, and periodically knock the damaged part about. You certainly ought to have removed her before this to a small cage by herself. Dissolve as much boric acid as just covers a threepenny-bit, in a breakfast cupful of nicely warm water, and gently and thoroughly bathe the wound with this. Dry it as far as is possible, and paint over with a smear of friar's balsam. Don't let either of the above into the bird's eyes if you can help it. Keep her very quiet (covered over if necessary) for half an hour or so afterwards. Don't put her back among the other birds until after the moult, or towards its conclusion.

About a Skylark.

E.V.—It is difficult to gather from your very brief letter what, if anything, is wrong with your Skylark. Are you quite sure that it is really a cock bird? Or is it commencing to break into moult? So far as my own observations go this promises to be an early year for the moulting of British birds. I know many which have already started to drop feathers, and we seem likely to get them more forward in condition for the early shows than is usually the case. The safest thing I can advise you to do is to get a bottle of cod liver oil and hypophosphites from a chemist, and commence by mixing two or three spots amongst the Lark's daily food supply, gradually increasing the quantity to seven or eight spots. If the bird is in low condition this will help to pick him up, while it will also do him good if he is on the verge of the moult. I am presuming, of course, that you are feeding and managing the bird properly, for you tell me nothing on these points.

Aged and Ailing.

C.T.W.—Thirteen years constitute a fairly ripe old age for a Mule, and if your bird is "breaking up" as the effect of his weight of years, I am afraid you can do little to help him. By-the-way, I note you describe him as a "Mule-Canary." What do you mean by this? Is the bird really a Mule (a cross between some British bird and a Canary) or is it what so many people imagine to be a Mule, viz., a Canary with more or less dark plumage? If the bird is purely and simply a Canary, then its age is great indeed. The lump on the wing, if a hard growth, you should paint once daily with tincture of iodine, obtained from a chemist. This is a very powerful lotion, and must be used with discretion. Only a smear should be applied at a time, and it should not be allowed to go on surrounding parts. Feed the old chap generously. Maw seed is excellent for aged birds; give a small teaspoonful every day. A pinch of niger now and again would also be appreciated no doubt. But, best of all, allow him a small teaspoonful of egg cake daily, with which you have well mixed (or let it fall on a lump and soak in) four or five drops of Parrish's Chemical Food. You cannot better the recipe (if you make your own cake) given "Saddler" last week. You can bake half, or a quarter, the quantity there provided for.

Outdoor Room for British Birds and Canaries.

Ellis Dean.—I should imagine you will find your place of a rather inconvenient size. A height of four feet will not allow you to move about in it in comfort—unless, of course, you yourself are less than four feet in stature—while the width, three feet six, is also cut rather fine, seeing you intend putting cages in the place. British birds will winter out of doors all right in such a room, providing it be damp and draught proof (I note you say it is well protected). Such a place should stand at least six inches off the floor (nine or twelve were better) to allow free passage of air underneath. A few blue bricks (at a pinch) answer admirably for it to stand on. The roof is best boarded before the tarred felt is put on, and the latter should be of the very best quality—it is false economy to use any other—and have a coat of tar and sand put on it at intervals, as necessary. As regards housing Canaries therein, if the said Canaries were hardy birds, and came from cold-room bred stock, they would take no harm. But I am with those who hold that exhibition Canaries are much the best kept in an indoor room, or, at any rate, in a substantial, brick built place.

Hand-rearing Bullfinches.

What is the best food to rear young Bullfinches on? I can find most things I want in CAGE BIRDS.—T. NOYCE.

T. Noyce.—If your last sentence means you cannot find information on hand-rearing Bullfinches I am afraid your search was but perfunctory, for I believe I gave it twice only last month. Here you are again, however, in brief: Neither Goldfinches nor Bullfinches are difficult to bring up by hand, providing the two principal rules connected with hand-rearing are duly observed, viz., to feed a little at a time only from dawn to dark, and to keep the nestlings scrupulously clean. I don't believe in taking them from their parents at too early an age; let them show their feathers nicely before you remove them. The food to be used is the usual kind—that is, egg and biscuit. Crush two Osborne biscuits, and well mix with them the yolk and half the white of a hard-boiled egg, using a fork to do this with, one with thin prongs. When feeding take the required quantity of this mixture, and make it the consistency of thin paste (or of cream) with new milk. See that it is always sweet and free from the slightest taint of sourness. It must be made fresh at least once daily. A few small cut-up pieces of mealworm may be dipped in milk and popped into the nestlings' mouths pretty frequently; likewise any house flies you can capture should also be fed to them. As the youngsters grow, add a little soaked summer rape to the stock food, gradually increasing the quantity. Steep the rape seed in cold water, which thoroughly change every day. It will soon begin to germinate (burst), and is then ready for use, dabbing it as dry as possible in a towel before mixing it with the soft food. When they begin to pick up for themselves, wean them on to soaked rape, maw, lightly cracked canary and hemp seeds, hulled and broken up sunflower seed kernels, seeding chickweed, shepherd's purse, and groundsel tops. I have had them pick up ants' eggs with relish; in fact, I often mix some amongst the food I hand-feed with. See another reply this week to "J. Huggard."

Hand-rearing Goldfinch-Canary Hybrids.

I would be very thankful to you for particulars on hand-rearing Goldfinch-Canary Hybrids.—J. HUGGARD.

J. Huggard.—I thought I had done with hand-feeding queries, as very many replies on the subject have been given by me during the last month or two. Follow the procedure advised "T. Noyce" this week. Use the soaked rape freely, and mix a pinch of powdered cuttlefish amongst the food every second day. Keep the nestlings scrupulously clean. When the birds begin to pick up for themselves give them water to drink which has been coloured a light red by the addition of a small quantity of Parrish's chemical food. I generally use Fellow's Syrup of Hypophosphates myself, but this is an expensive preparation, and not to be bought in small quantities. It is certainly, however, a fine strengthening medicine for birds. When they commence to pick about for themselves also offer (in addition to soft food and soaked rape) maw seed, lightly cracked canary and hemp seeds, groats, or coarse oatmeal, shelled and broken up sunflower seed; also seeding heads of chickweed, shepherd's purse and groundsel, and thistles in season. Don't, at the same time, forget grit and cuttlefish, likewise old, crushed mortar.

Feeding Bullfinches.

Have had some Bullfinches (feeding themselves) given me, and want to feed them properly. Will you give me advice?—W. BERRY.

W. Berry.—A good stock mixture for Bullfinches at present would be:—Canary and teazle three pints each, linseed and summer rape one pint each. In a finger drawer (or separate dish), however, the following would need to be given, in addition, to provide the necessary variety:—A small dessert-spoonful of sunflower seed every day, except when giving hemp, of which each bird may have a teaspoonful once a week, say for a Sunday treat. In a tin you could keep a mixture of niger two parts, maw three parts, and give a pinch twice or thrice a week. Then you have thistle and dandelion seed and wild seed mixture, small feeds of which may also be occasionally given. Thus your bird can be provided with a "grateful and comforting" change in the menu almost daily. Hemp is a seed often unjustly abused. Still, it is quite true it should not be given too freely to Bullfinches. For green foods give any of the following, according to season:—Shepherd's purse, dandelion, groundsel tops, chickweed, flowering grasses, watercress, lettuce, rape or canary seedlings, etc. The seeding kinds may be freely given. Bullies are very fond of many berries and fruit, for which please refer to another reply this week. Charlock, dock, thistles, hardheads, and many other wild seeding plants, these birds are also very fond of.

Soft for Three Weeks.

What is the best food to give a Goldfinch that has been soft for the last three weeks?—ARGYLL.

Argyll.—You never ought to have left the Goldie for three weeks (it will now be four) without treatment of any kind. You will be lucky to pull him through, especially so seeing the nearness of the moulting season. For one day dissolve as much sulphate of soda as will just lie on a shilling in two tablespoonfuls of water, and give him this to drink. Follow it with three or four mild doses of dandelion juice (taraxacum), obtained from a chemist. Mix half a teaspoonful in the above quantity of drinking water. But give it on alternate days only; plain water in between. Lightly crack the hemp seed you give the bird (do it fresh every day) and you can mix with it a little cracked sunflower seed. Let him have as much maw seed as he likes to eat, also teazle seed. If he is right "off his feed" a small teapoonful of niger every day might tempt him to eat, and help to pull him round. Try the bird also with a small mealworm pinned down to a perch. If he eats it let him have them freely. A dish of soaked ants' eggs might also be appreciated. A simple method of preparing them is to turn some ants' eggs into a saucer containing a little water, and press them gently down therein with the tips of your fingers. When soaked through, drain off the water, and turn the ants' eggs on to a sheet of clean blotting paper, to take off as much of the moisture as possible. They are then ready for the birds. If you are in a hurry, the last part of the operation can be dispensed with. If you can prepare them at least twice a day, the ants' eggs are much better soaked in new milk than water. Wash the dish after each supply. A few small dandelion leaves, groundsel tops and any thistles, hardheads, etc., that you can get, should also be offered. The main object is to try and tempt him to eat, when there is a great chance of the bird recovering. Otherwise he is a "goner," to use an expressive localism.

Canary-Bullfinch Hybrids Bred.

I have got three fine Canary Bullies hatched and doing well. Is it necessary to colour feed for showing? I do not use any egg food, but give dried flies, ants' eggs and biscuits freely, also mealworms, crushed hemp, Spanish canary, linseed, teazle, rape, wild seeds, dandelion, etc. The eldest C.-Bullie, five weeks old, has had some tail feathers plucked by the old birds, and the new ones are coming with light marks on. Will it spoil him for this season's shows? The tail is only plucked on one side.—LUCKY.

Lucky.—I am very pleased to hear of your good fortune when following the methods I advocate. As you say you have never shown any birds, I should advise you to visit an exhibition (even a First Feather Show will do), and make acquaintance with the methods followed by fanciers, before you venture to send out the Hybrids you have bred. I am afraid I can only answer that it is absolutely necessary to colour feed the Canary-Bullies if you desire to have them stand a chance in strong competition. It is a rather troublesome process, so far as the tax on one's time goes, but not at all difficult. In recent replies (this and the last two weeks) you will find much information on the subject. Use sweet pepper and egg cake. I shouldn't like to say that the feed would prove so effective if given with an ordinary insectivorous mixture. You could gradually get the birds on to the egg cake (see reply to "Saddler" last week), and then commence with the pepper. See that they eat a full portion every day. Sweet pepper is perfectly harmless. You should certainly commence at once, or you will have the birds (the eldest one, at least) striking into moult. The white tail feathers which you say are coming (a peculiar thing, this) will handicap the bird a little when competing against self-coloured Canary-Bullies, and may also render it necessary for you to show him in the variegated Mule class at certain shows (according to the wording of the schedule). Mr. John Williams has of recent seasons exhibited a Canary-Bullie with light tail feathers. I shall hope to see this bird at one or other of the shows.

Answers in Brief.

Whose Egg is It? (W.A.).—The egg you send is, I feel sure, that of the Spotted Flycatcher. The brief description of the owner that you give answers to this species. The Flycatcher has a habit of choosing some coign of vantage (such as a wood fence, or post, or gate, in a wooded lane, or on the outskirts of a spinney or garden), from which it springs to catch a passing insect, and returns after making a capture.

Skylarks (Red Flag).—In our issue No. 282, for June 8th last, appears an article on the Skylark for contest singing. I advise you to get this number (post free 1½d.). If you want any further information after reading that article, I shall be glad to try to supply it. It gives, of course, much fuller details than I myself possibly could in the short space allotted these answers to queries.

Seed Mill (Kelmore).—The wood mills with tin cylinders are useful in many ways, but the most durable and satisfactory are the iron ones, modelled on the lines of mince-meat machines. One of the latter you would find quite suitable for your purpose. They can be adjusted to crush to different degrees of fineness. Price about 7s. 6d.—higher, of course, than the first-named ones.

Peat Moss Litter (John B.).—No, it is not the "slabs" of peat moss you want to get for cage bottoms. It is too hard, and an awful job to break up, being suitable only for stables, etc., for which, indeed, it is really intended. The kind you need is that which I always call peat moss litter, though another name for it is granulated peat moss. This is in small pieces, and only needs a little teasing out to be ready for use. If you explain to the corn-chandler what you want it for, he will give you the right kind—if he stocks it, of course.

Concerning Shepherd's Purse (Bucks, A.S., J. G. Somerset).—The samples you send are shepherd's purse. (G.H.H., J.T., E.W., Malden, F.H.).—Samples of shepherd's purse have been duly forwarded on to you.

Charlock, Etc. (B.P.).—Have sent you a sample of shepherd's purse. Charlock is a very common plant, found in every cornfield. It flowers all the summer, carrying clusters of yellow blossoms (like four-petalled primroses, roughly speaking), and the seed (which has a very hot taste when chewed) in pods, very like miniature pea-pods.

What Bird is It? (A Bird Lover).—The specimen you have is not a British bird, but a Pileated Finch, a small foreign seed-eater.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S.

Lovebirds in Poor Plumage.

Thanks to your reply, my Lovebirds are now quite recovered and in fine condition again. A friend has asked me about a Red-faced hen which is almost bare of feather. It will not eat fruit or green food, only the seed mixture. It appears in good health. What is the correct treatment?—M. GREEVEN.

M. Greeven.—If insects are the cause of the trouble, spraying the bird with quassia solution will get rid of them; but the cage must also be cleansed from these pests, by being first painted with neat paraffin, seeing that it is well rubbed into all joints and crevices. Let it stand a few hours, then thoroughly swill with boiling water, and finally with cold water, leaving it in the open air till thoroughly dry. Keep a piece of cuttlefish in the cage, and try to get the birds to take a little ripe fruit, banana, etc.; but any kind they will eat will do. Also damp the seeds with a few drops of water from the fingers, and then dust them with sulphur (this is usually sold as flour or flowers of sulphur). You must continue this treatment for some time, as such cases take time to recover condition. If the bare parts of the skin are very dry, rub in a little clean vaseline—that is if the birds will let you handle them without scaring them too much. Keep the birds in some warm position, yet not in a stuffy atmosphere.

Diet for Young Mocking Bird.

What is the best food for young Mocking Bird just arrived from Texas?—ARGYLL.

Argyll.—Its principle diet must be some good soft food mixture—several are advertised in our columns—or the following is a good one for the purpose:—Either game meal or crushed puppy biscuit for half its bulk, the other half to consist of ants' eggs (best), dried flies, dried silkworm pupæ (fine ground), boiled potato and fine crissel; to be made crumbly moist for use. You must also supply such ripe fruit as is in season (letting the bird's taste be your guide as to kind), and such live insects as you can capture, beetles, cockroaches, grasshoppers, smooth caterpillars, etc.; or, failing these, about a dozen mealworms per day. A little green food (lettuce, etc.) finely minced and mixed with its soft food, is also advisable several times a week during the summer months. Also such table scraps as it will eat all help to make a change of diet. See that it gets some live insects; scarcely anything comes amiss in this respect. Also note its cage must be a roomy one, or it will soon get in a dirty and bedraggled condition, and also out of health.

Blossom-headed Parrakeets.

Last October I got a dealer's pair (that is, both one sex) of Blossom-heads; they both sing, but I believe they are hens. Do they acquire the plum-coloured cap at first moult? Both my birds have grey heads.—AVIARIST.

Aviarist.—The sexes of these birds can be readily told when adult, by the top of the head, which is rich reddish purple or plum colour in the male and lilac or brownish lavander in the female; she also lacks the black collar and red wing patch of the male. The young resemble the female till they are fully two years old, and till they assume adult plumage the sexes can only be told by the demeanour of the birds one to the other; two young males when they get over a year old, do not as a rule agree well together; if they don't fight, they keep out of one another's way, as a rule; when caged they usually keep at opposite ends of the perch. Your birds are quite as likely to turn out two males as females; from your remarks, the former more probably.

Breeding Yellow Budgerigars.

(1) When would be the best time to get a pair of yellow Budgerigars for next season's breeding? (2) Should I get young ones or adults? (3) Is it advisable to get them from different sources to avoid in-breeding?—YELLOW.

Yellow.—(1) Almost any time will do to purchase; adult birds procured at the present time would probably breed this year. Unless you purchase aviary-bred specimens, I should not advise their being purchased later than end of August (i.e., for keeping out of doors); a little earlier would be better. (2) Young ones—that is, those sufficiently old for sex to be distinguished; and if you procure some, and you have their quarters ready, you can not do better than purchase at once. (3) When buying more than one pair, it is best to procure each pair from a different source. There are several breeders advertising in our columns which would supply you with unrelated pairs. You could then pair up the young of the respective pairs without fear of deterioration of stock through in-breeding.

Do Waxbills, etc., require Fruit?

I have been told that small foreign Finches and Waxbills require fruit. Is this correct; if so, what kind?—NEW YEAR.

New Year.—Ripe fruit as in season will not harm any small Finch that will eat it. But the only essentials for keeping Waxbills and small foreign Finches in health is canary, white, French and spray millet, green food, cuttlefish, grit and water for drinking and bathing. Some species of these birds are fond of a little crumbled sponge cake (slightly moistened), and a few ants' eggs scattered over their sand tray. Greens in flower, groundsel, and lettuce, also canary seed when about 3 in. high, are about the best green food, and with such you can keep up a supply all the year round.

Birds for Outdoor Aviary.

My aviary faces south, is 5 by 3½ by 7 ft. high. Which of the following would be most likely to do well in it?—(1) Pairs each of Madagascar and Red-faced Lovebirds, green and yellow Budgerigars and three or four cock Weavers; (2) Waxbills, Mannikins, Avadavats, Zebra, Nuns, and other small Finches. Would the cock Weavers fight?—A.E.G.

A.E.G.—It is rather difficult for me to answer satisfactorily your queries from the details you give. There ought to be some sort of a retiring place, or night shelter, for your birds; in fact, a small shed, 3 ft. square would do. It should be well lighted, and be close boarded all round, with one good-sized hole for entrance and one or two smaller ones with small platforms attached near the top. Selection (1): The Passerine and Red-faced Lovebirds are doubtful; during their first winter out they ought to be shut up in the shed portion of the aviary during exceptionally severe weather. The second winter they might be left to take care of themselves with the other birds named, all of which would winter safely out of doors. The cock Weavers would undoubtedly have a spar now and again, but I have never found them to maim or kill one another. It would be best not to have two of the same species. Selection (2): The general run of the freely-imported small Finches and Waxbills could be successfully wintered in your aviary, say, Zebra, Ribbon, Ruficauda, Saffron, and Green and Grey Singing Finches, any of the Mannikins and Waxbills. Nuns are Mannikins. As regards which is best, that is a matter of choice; there would be a lot of colour in selection (1); they are easy to cater for, and the Budgerigars would breed regularly once they made a start, and thus provide a little towards the upkeep of the aviary, besides the interest of seeing the youngsters reared.

Preserving Wire from Rust.

I have a large outdoor aviary, covered with ½-in. mesh wire netting. What can I paint it with so as to preserve it from rust, and yet not poison the birds?—J.M.

J.M.—A coat of Brunswick black in the fall of the year will keep rust at bay, and is quite innocuous to the birds. The only possible danger is, if you are forced to paint the wires with the birds inside, that some of the birds will cling to the netting before it is dry, and get their plumage soiled. Every other year would be sufficient, providing your locality is not a very damp one.

Breeding Passerine Parrakeets.

(1) Will the Passerine Parrakeet breed in an aviary? (2) How can I distinguish the sexes? (3) Are they known by any other name? (4) Which of the Lovebirds do you consider the freest breeders in an outdoor aviary?—COWAN HUD.

Cowan Hud.—(1) These birds are not free breeders in captivity, but complete success has been obtained in several instances, both in cage and aviary. (2) The hen is entirely green, and lacks the blue rump and wing feathers of the male. (3) Yes, they are most commonly sold as Blue-winged Lovebirds, but the name at head of query is the correct one; their scientific name is Psittacula passerina. (4) None of the Lovebirds are free breeders in captivity, unless you include the Budgerigars among them, and prolificness of these latter is proverbial. The Madagascar is only half hardy—that is, the hens, and ought not to be left out of doors during the winter, unless they have a roomy and well-lighted shed attached to their enclosure. Perhaps the most ready to breed of the true Lovebirds (Agapornis) is the Rosy or Plum-faced Lovebird, which is also one of the largest and most handsome of the family. It, however, should have a moderate-sized aviary to itself, furnished with suitable logs, and during the second year of their occupancy would most probably settle down to reproducing their kind. When they once begin to breed, usually two or three broods are produced each season. They are not often on the market, and are consequently rather expensive. If your need is not covered, repeat query.

Budgerigars not Breeding.

I have had a pair of these birds in a cage, 2½ by 1½ by 3½ ft. high, since the early part of April, but have made no attempt so far to breed. Is my diet and food correct? Can I do anything to forward matters?—A. SHARP.

A. Sharp.—Foreign birds, even the free breeding species, do not breed with the same freedom as Canaries—that is, pair them up, and you may look for eggs in a few weeks time. Foreign birds, and also wild-caught Britishers, take time to settle down, and in many instances do not attempt to breed their first season in captivity; some species not at all. To come back to the Budgerigars, these always breed with greater freedom in an outdoor aviary, where two or more pairs are usually kept together, and stimulate one another in setting up house-keeping. You have a true pair, and they appear in good health. You will have to exercise patience for a bit, and they will duly settle down. Raise your husks so that they are almost against top of cage. Your diet is all that is necessary, but now, while they are easily procurable, let them have as much grass in flower as they will eat. Budgerigars never bathe, but roll about in the wet grass. You can give them a bath by putting in their cage a small turf of longish grass that has been well watered; of course, letting most of the water drain from soil before giving it to the birds; and you will soon see by their doings how much they appreciate it.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for a reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post-mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Canary Chick (E.W.).—Death was caused by "chill" and general bad "mothering."

Yellowhammer (M. Malet).—Enlargement of liver, with rupture of blood vessel, also recent inflammation of lungs. This bird was much too fat.

Weaver (Northern).—Inflammation of liver and lungs, ending with apoplexy. It was a cock bird, but a long way from breeding condition. Your feeding is correct.

Canary, Chick, and Cardinal (E.G.W.).—(1) Softening of liver and acute inflammation of lungs. This bird seems to have been too generously treated with glycerine lotion or ointment, which may have induced a "chill." (2) Starved to death. (3) This appears to have been an aged bird, and had chronic liver disease.

Canary Hen (W. H. Moore).—This hen, and possibly the other six, died of a fever peculiar to the sex, the egg-passage and adjacent parts showing distinct inflammation. The liver was also in a softened condition, and the lungs were inflamed. It would be prudent to turn your hens into a large cage and give them seed, milk sop, and salad, not forgetting a bath every alternate day.

GENERAL.

Answered by the EDITOR.

Breeding Competition (Anxious).—The competition closes on August 17th, and on that day all results must be in our hands.

Egg Tester (Notting Hill).—We are obliged to you for favouring us with the idea, but as it is one in general use, and widely known, it is hardly suitable for the column you mention.

Opinion on Bird (W. James).—We have no objection to giving an opinion, for whatever it may be worth, on the age of the bird, providing it be distinctly understood that we take no responsibility for its safety or well-being.

Obtaining "Cage Birds" (J.P.).—Many thanks for your kindness in giving away your copy of CAGE BIRDS when you have finished with it. It is a good way to make new fanciers, and fresh readers for us. We wish you good luck with your birds.

Table Shows (J. E. Jeffreys).—We do not as a rule send our representatives to table shows. We publish free of cost all reports which are sent us by secretaries, and it is usual for secretaries to look after the interests of their societies by doing so.

A Lost Case (F.A.H.).—While we sympathise with you heartily (on the facts you state) in losing the case, we regret that we are unable to publish your letter. As no name is (or could be) mentioned, we feel sure you will, on reflection, see that it would do a general injustice to dealers using our advertisement columns. No doubt you ought to have returned the two Canaries immediately after receipt of them, when you found ground for complaint.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Meeting at Headquarters July 8th, Mr. A. C. Burn presiding. The election of three members and nomination of three took place. The payment of prize money and presentation of special prizes won at the recent Young Bird Show took place, the Chairman congratulating the members upon the success of the show. On the definition of a novice and proposed federation of London societies, Mr. Wheller wished to know who issued the scheme, and was informed that a meeting was called, inviting all London secretaries to attend, and who were asked to take a vote of their respective societies on the question. Mr. Wheller wanted to know, further, if the scheme was in opposition to the C.B.U., and was told that no hostile intentions were meant in the promotion of this Federation, but rather to assist and strengthen the C.B.U. Mr. Crisp understood that it was to be subordinate to the C.B.U., and he (Mr. Crisp) didn't see why delegates couldn't submit dates and appoint judges. The Chairman thought that a show of all the federated societies could be held without in any way impairing existing fixtures, while in the case of seed and pepper adulteration, being purely a local matter, it would be too big a job for the C.B.U. It was decided that the Council should consider the matter and draw up a report. Standing in the name of the Chairman was an amendment to rule 17 of the C.B.U., and this was referred to the Council to consider. A vote of thanks was conveyed to Mr. C. Prior for his services in judging the British section of the Y.B.S., proposed by A. S. Wheeler, seconded by A. W. Hart, and supported by R. L. Crisp, who remarked that there was no more capable man in England. Specimen class numbers and stands exclusively designed and presented by Mr. J. E. Ashby, were on view for decision as to adoption for show purposes, and, after a lucid explanation of the same by Mr. A. W. Hart (who has been entrusted to execute them), No. 2, ivory white with black lettering, was adopted. Votes of thanks were accorded to Messrs. A. W. Curtis, A. W. Hart, and W. Shepherd for services rendered at the Y.B.S.; also to Mr. A. Lazarus, for his generous gift of a silver-plated cup for competition in the novice section of the Crest and Crested-bred breeders. The Chairman, with evident emotion, announced that the lecture and demonstration on "Cage Making" would have to be postponed until the next meeting, in consequence of the sudden illness of Mr. A. W. Curtis. There was no one who would regret it more than Mr. Curtis himself, and more especially if he could but see the company gathered to greet him. He was sure all would wish him a speedy return to health again. Upon the initiative of Mr. R. L. Crisp, a discussion took place upon the Norwich Plainhead, in which Messrs. P. G. Cooper, A. C. Burn, A. S. Wheller, F. Easterling, R. L. Crisp, and G. E. Weston took part. A vote of thanks to the Chairman closed the meeting.

SEAHAM HARBOUR & DIS. C.B.B.A.

Meeting July 13th, Mr. T. Toy in the chair. Mr. H. Dobson was elected assistant secretary. The Secretary not being able to get regularly through, it was thought advisable to have an assistant. The next business was the alteration of rule 13. Up to now our members could only show birds at our own shows that had been bred by them. Now they can show any bird if it is their bona fide property and they have had it a certain period before showing. Next we had a discussion on the C.B.U., and after a good healthy debate on that old stumbling block, rule 17, it was decided to join at once.

J. M. NICHOLSON, Sec.

NATIONAL B.B. AND M.C.

Committee meeting held at headquarters, 25, High Holborn, June 27th. Present: Mr. Trower (in the chair), Messrs. Dewhurst, Silver, Weston, Dobson, Cooper, Goodchild, Plumbridge, and Carr. A letter was read from the Bradford and County British Bird and Mule Club requesting this club to favour them with a rule book and the list of British birds, so that they could frame their rules after the parent organisation. It was proposed by Mr. Cooper, seconded by Mr. Silver, that the request be granted, with best wishes for their future success. Letters were also read from Messrs. Hills, Hamblyn, Maxwell, Hunt, Sandy, Chick, Newbould, Cheney, and L.C.B.A., and the secretaries were instructed to deal with them. The birds recently added to the list were classified as follows:—To compete in the Hard-bill section: Turtle Dove, Ring Dove, Stock Dove, and Rock Dove. To compete in the Insectivorous section: Crested Tit, Woodchat, Shrike, Common Quail, Lapwing, Golden Plover, Kentish Plover, Ringed Plover, Dotterel, Turnstone, Dunlin, Knot, Ruff and Reeve, Sanderling, Common Sandpiper, Greenshank, Redshank, Swallow, House Martin, Sand Martin, Golden Oriole, Hoopoe, and Nutcracker. Mr. Weston placed before the committee an important matter, viz.: Would it not be advisable for this club to run a journal somewhat on the lines of one formerly run. This matter was discussed at some length, but being a late hour, was postponed until next meeting. A hearty vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the meeting.

PLUMBRIDGE AND CARR, Hon. Secs.

LANCASTER AND DIS. C.B.S.

Meeting held July 3rd, when our Nest Feather Show was cancelled altogether for this year. A guarantee card was sent in from outside members as to how many exhibits they could send, and the members who attended the meeting made it known how they would figure. Total quantity thirty young birds, not half the quantity of previous years, the weather gets the blame for the deficiency. It was resolved that Rule 5 in our rule book be more strictly enforced, and subscriptions be paid when due in advance as stated, otherwise members would not be eligible to exhibit at our November Show. Two new members were made. Next meeting, August 3rd, 8 p.m. H. J. BROWN, Sec.

METROPOLITAN A.C.M.H.B.

Meeting held on Thursday last, when Mrs. C. Humphrey, Mrs. A. Sawyer and Mr. J. Williams were elected members. After the prize money and specials had been paid to successful competitors present, our worthy Chairman (Mr. F. J. Martin) kindly gave a few remarks on colour feeding, and by the long discussion which ensued the subject proved to be a very interesting one.—A. J. HEAD, Hon. Sec.

BOLTON AND DIS. O. & R.C.S.

The Bolton and District O. and R. Canary Society had a ramble on Sunday, July 7th, taking the train from Bolton at 10 a.m. to Adlington, from there walked round Anglezarke and Heapey, doing plenty of climbing on the way. We were rather unfortunate in not finding many nests with young in, having left it rather late in the season. We found any quantity of empty nests, and also found young in nests of the Robin, Thrush, Blackbird, Tree Pipit and Chaffinch. We also caught a couple of young Sandpipers running about. We also saw on the wing young and old of the Chaffinch, Whitethroat, Blackbird, Thrush, Redstart, Wren, Wagtail and a Hawk, whilst some of the party had some sprints after rabbits. Making our way to the Bay Horse Hotel, Anderton, by 5.30, tea was served, after which we walked from there to Horwich, where tram was taken back to Bolton. All were agreed upon having had a very enjoyable day in the country, with plenty of walking and climbing, doing very near twenty miles altogether. I dare say more would have made the journey had it been a nice morning. It looked rather gloomy to begin with, but turned out an ideal day for such an outing, and we all hope to live to partake in many similar outings.—JAS. STRINGER, Hon. Sec.

LONDON CAGE BIRD ASSN.

Messrs. R. Halliday will judge Yorkshires, T. J. King Crests, P. F. M Galloway British Insectivorous, and Mr. J. Robson variety not determined. Remainder will be appointed during this week. Notwithstanding the failure of the United Kingdom Cage Bird Championship Competition last year, the L.C.B.A. have determined to again hold this competition at the next Annual Show, and will guarantee the following prizes for not less than ten competing teams:—1st prize £5, and the Association's diploma; 2nd prize £3, and ditto; 3rd prize £2, and ditto; 4th prize, and ditto; entrance fee, 10/- per team. Any number of birds may be entered by any society or association, but only twelve of the highest birds in the cards will be taken, and these must consist of not less than four varieties. Suggestions from any interested society will receive due consideration from the Executive.

JOHN TYSON.

READING AND DIS. C.B.S.

The first annual outing in connection with the above society took place, amid splendid weather, on July 13th, at Aldermaston. A good company of members journeyed thither by train, and by very kind permission of one of the Vice-Presidents (C. E. Keyser, Esq.), very thoroughly enjoyed a ramble through the lovely grounds of his estate. After tea a visit was paid to the church. The beautiful windows and splendid paintings in the interior attracted much attention, and being greatly admired by the company. G. A. CHARLES, Sec.

STIRLING AND DIS. C.S.

Monthly meeting held Wednesday, July 3rd, the President, Mr. Summers, in the chair. The judges are Mr. Campbell (Glasgow) and Mr. McWatt (Bonnybridge) for our show, to be held in the Lesser Public Hall, Albert Place, Stirling, on Saturday, November 16th next. Members' money is to be paid by August 3rd. Fanciers wishing to join can do so by writing JOHN MCLAREN, 69, Wallace Street.

CORRESPONDENCE.

MORE ABOUT FERTILE MULES.

SIR,—I was pleased to find that my note on this topic drew forth some criticism from at least one reader of "C. B." In writing my original note I was well aware of the fact that there are numerous instances of fertility among Mules on record already, and some of them, indeed, of quite a respectable age now. There have been many claimants for the honour of proving that Mules may be fertile among genuinely honest fanciers; but in every instance where the claim has been inquired into, and the birds examined by experienced fanciers, it has failed to be proved. In not a few cases the supposed Mule parent was a Canary pure and simple. On the other hand, it is significant that, although numerous fanciers of experience have essayed the task of breeding Mules from a Mule parent, all have signally failed. The late Dr. Greene, believing that the Greenfinch-Canary Mule was the most likely to prove fertile if any were, experimented with this cross, but with the usual result. Of course, I do not wish this to be a cold douche upon the subject. It is a fascinating subject, and one well worthy of much more extensive experimentation. I will, therefore, point out at once that in all cases where one seems to have come nearest to proving the fertility of Mules, it has been by mating the hen Mule back to the Finch parent, and not vice versa—not necessarily introducing a third cross, as mentioned by the correspondent in last issue. Still, assuming that there was no possible flaw in the case related, it may be well to bear in mind that it gives a certain amount of colour to the theory here suggested. It may be something more than a mere coincidence. By all means let breeders of these curiosities give a fair trial to the suggestion to introduce a third cross, or at least adhere to the second cross with the Finch until that line is exhausted. CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

REDPOLL-BULLFINCH HYBRIDS.

SIR,—It will doubtless be interesting to lovers of Hybrids to hear that I have a Redpoll-Bullfinch Hybrid, hatched June 25th last, and now doing well. By the same parents I had young dead in shell from last year, and the year before that. I have 16 Bullfinch hens for Hybrid breeding, six of which are paired to Redpolls. Three have laid, and others are busy building. I find this a very difficult cross to obtain. I am afraid that this will be a difficult year for testing the various eggs and rearing the young, as the moult may set in before the young Hybrids are able to do for themselves. I have also eggs from the Greenfinch-Hawfinch mating. Have lost many young Canaries. CHAS. J. WARD.

THE WITHINGTON PARROT.

"Owt Moving, Bob?"

SIR,—Just a line to ask your South Manchester readers if they have heard the wonderful Withington Station Parrot? I generally go to town by the 8.27 train, and invariably this remarkable bird—who resides, caged, in a garden near by—calls in very clear tones, "Owt moving, Bob?" This sentence while the train is at a standstill in the station. When the same moves out it lustily shouts, "We're moving now, Bob," with the emphasis on the right words in truly remarkable fashion. But the most extraordinary thing is that it seldom takes notice of any other train, though there are several about that time in the morning. I have spoken to several about it. Some have heard it, others have not—the latter mostly those who travel by other trains. Can any of your readers give some further information?

J. EGERTON.

ANOTHER NEW SOCIETY PROPOSED.

Woolwich and District on the move.

SIR,—Several fanciers having expressed a desire for a cage bird society for the above district, and as I believe there are a large number who would welcome such a society, I should like to hear the opinions of others interested in cage birds. Then, if sufficient support is forthcoming, to call a meeting to make further arrangements. Will all willing to give their support please send a post-card to either W. Pawley (13, Olven Road, Plumstead), or Mr. Meades (68, Griffin Road, Plumstead)?

(Signed) W. PAWLEY.

THE C.B. UNION AND LLANDILO SHOW.

SIR,—In reference to the Llandilo Show, mentioned in CAGE BIRDS last week, I am in the same predicament as your correspondents, in so far as I cannot get a reply from the Llandilo secretary. In addition to writing him over Mr. Roebuck's special, I have since had occasion to write for payment for show rules supplied for the show, but can get no acknowledgment. Anent the eight weeks' dilatoriness, the Llandilo secretary (Mr. Owen Jones) was asked to send the special due to Mr. Roebuck on to him, or let me know if there was any reason why it should not be sent. Not hearing from either Mr. Jones or Mr. Roebuck during this period, one naturally assumed the special had been forwarded.

GEO. W. F. LYTNGOE.

SIR,—I have just heard that the special has been sent to the winner. Thanking you for inserting the letter. J. W. NORRIS.

THE CRESTED CANARY CLUB PATRONAGE.

SIR,—I should be glad if you will kindly favour me with sufficient space to ask all societies desiring the Crested Canary Club's support (who have not already applied) to make application without further delay, so that a full and complete list may be submitted to the committee. The two 10-guinea bowls cannot be competed for this year at either Bristol, Nottingham or the L.C.B.A. Shows. In order to avoid unnecessary correspondence, I may say it is imperative that one of the following gentlemen be appointed to judge (except for the Roberts Cup competition)—viz., Messrs. Heath, Greeves, Robson, Barnett, Rhodes, Scothern, Tyson, Glasscock, Joyce, King, Thomas, and Tope. Affiliated and licensed shows will also receive preference.

JOHN TYSON.

NORWICH P.C. FOR WALES.

SIR,—I am glad to be able to give our fellow fanciers a hearty invitation to attend a meeting on July 24th for the purpose of forming this club. I thank those of my fellow Norwich fanciers in North Wales who have written me offering their support, and I shall be pleased to hear from anyone who would like to join same. I trust that as many as can come will do so. Will those who cannot, send me any suggestions that they may have to make, so that it may help this branch of the Fancy? Meeting will take place at Naish's Royal Stores, the Hayes, Cardiff, at 7 p.m. J. W. DUMMETT.

A NOVICE'S EXPERIENCES AS A MULE BREEDER.

SIR,—I have taken CAGE BIRDS since last January, and find it very handy and full of informing matter for bird fanciers. I tried Mule breeding for the first time this year, with a two-year-old Linnet and Norwich hen. First nest, three eggs, hatched three young on April 10th; second nest, three eggs, again three young; now she has four young ones doing well. I have ten Mules in all; the last four are eight days old; out of four eggs, every egg good. Thanks to your paper for a lot of information on Mule breeding. The young birds left the nest at 15 or 16 days old. Both parents are good feeders; the Linnet has been with hen all the time, and is safe with eggs. WILLIAM HULL.

GATESHEAD C.B.S. & THE C.B.U.

Astonishing Allegations.

SIR,—Meeting held July 10th. Correspondence from Mr. Lythgoe (C.B.U.) having been read in reply to the Secretary's request for particulars of Messrs. Taylor and Sanderson's case, it was greatly deplored that Mr. Lythgoe had been unable to obtain the particulars from No. 1 Committee. Messrs. F. Sanderson and W. Taylor had been summoned specially to the meeting in regard of their membership and their suspension by No. 1 Committee. Mr. Sanderson attended to represent their joint membership, and explained that since he was summoned to attend No. 1 Committee (C.B.U.) meeting held in April, to give his explanation re disqualification, that he had never received the decision of that Committee up to the present, and knew nothing of their suspension more than what he had been told by outsiders. Mr. Lythgoe's reply that he had been unable to get a reply from No. 1. Committee as to the facts of the case, and that he knew nothing of the case, drew forth a good deal of comment and dissatisfaction from the members present. A resolution was passed that the Secretary write Mr. Lythgoe and demand an explanation. Also, as regards the society's vote on Rule 17, which had not been recorded by Mr. Lythgoe, which was sent on May 31st, along with the C.B.U. subscription, for which a receipt had been received, and the letter requesting particulars of above case, which was replied to, saying he was writing for particulars. The case was turned over to the Committee, as nothing further could be done till particulars were forthcoming, and Mr. Sanderson left the meeting in disgust. The classification for our forthcoming Show was next proceeded with. Several classes were added to previous classification, and others were left over for further discussion.

LUCKY LOWESTOFT MAN.

Wrong-Classed Bird Awarded a Special for Best Norwich in Show.

SIR,—Re the report in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, this week on the Lowestoft C.B.A. First Feather Show, I notice you credit Still with 1st Clear Buff. This should read "Steele." I also notice Mr. Low special for Best Young Bird. This was not so, and should read, "Mr. Low special for Best Crest." There is also omitted my winning special for Best Norwich Plainhead in Show. This bird was, unfortunately, wrong-classed by the judge, but at the same time he had no hesitation in awarding him the special for Best Norwich. I should like to mention this bird was bred from a ticked buff cock I bought of Mr. Eckersley last year and a young marked yellow hen bred by myself from a pair I bought of Mr. J. C. Barnes last season. No doubt these gentlemen will be glad to hear of the result I have attained from the stock they sent me. I wrote these gentlemen through their advertisements appearing in your valuable and most interesting paper, CAGE BIRDS. The hints and instructions it contains makes it a boon to the fanciers here in Lowestoft.

A. PARK.

THE C.C.C. AND THE C.B.U.

SIR,—As "A Country Member" considers what I have written exceeds the bounds of fair comment, I shall be most happy to withdraw those portions of my letter to which he takes exception, provided he on his part is willing to satisfy (in confidence, of course) the auditors of the C.C.C. as to his bona-fide membership, and so substantiate his right to the attitude he has adopted in connection with the club joining the C.B.U. I ask this in fairness, as I have already had experience of persons under nom-de-plumes interfering with internal club matters which were entirely outside their province. If "A Country Member" still objects to grant the favour I suggest, the Fancy will be privileged to deduce what inference they please on the salient points raised in my former letter.

R. L. CRISP.

MR. R. J. PRETTY REPLIES TO MR. TYSON.

SIR,—I did not intend entering into any further correspondence on this subject, but I must ask your favour to allow me once more to contradict Mr. Tyson's wilful and malicious mis-statement. I emphatically deny agreeing to guarantee any class or classes for Scotch Fancies; neither has the club or myself ever done so for any show where its patronage has been given. Therefore I must let this "violent, effusive, mature-aged" gentleman (who deems it would be neither wise nor prudent to say all he knows—prodigious!)—and who has only just discovered what has been all along apparent to everyone, "that much of this correspondence is irrelevant"—to wear the mantle of the husband of Sapphira, and I trust in his "old" age he will know better. Mr. Tyson quotes my letters, but I find one in my copy letter book, which gives details he leaves out.

R. J. PRETTY.

CITY OF GLASGOW O.A.

SIR,—The narrow spirit which pervades the officialism of the above society should be stamped out, and we look to the President to do that. The meeting was stormy, but the Norwich section managed to carry their point. Where were the Scotch Fancy men? It is, mid-Saturday does not suit them for a meeting. The McLean cup is to remain with the City.

A FANCIER.

IS IT CRUEL TO CAGE BIRDS?

SIR,—Notwithstanding the enlightening influence of CAGE BIRDS, and the suppression of the wave of sentimentalism that a few years ago threatened to drown this country in tears, I find the superstition that it is cruel to cage birds still prevalent even amongst educated men and women. Only the other day I noticed in our local paper an astonishing letter from a bigoted bird lover on the point. I take the liberty of making the following extract from it. Why cannot some of us form a Bird Lovers' League, with the idea of teaching the public that a bird, when caged and properly looked after, is much better off than when in a wild state? Take the opinion of such a distinguished naturalist as Mr. E. Kay Robinson, for instance. Mr. Robinson holds, and rightly too, that it is only cruel to cage birds and neglect them. It is in the same degree cruel to keep a dog chained in the back yard and deprive it of food. Some cage birds I know are far better treated than I am myself. That eminent cage bird keeper, Sir William Purdie Treloar, Bart., would make an admirable president for such a league.

EMILY BROADBENT.

THE CAGING OF SONG BIRDS A "BRUTAL ACT" INVOLVING "AWFUL CRUELTY."

SIR,—Mr. Ernest Baker most truthfully describes the caging of wild song-birds as a "brutal act" involving "awful cruelty." This vile practice ought to be stamped out, and the first step towards it might be to place a heavy tax on caged birds, to enforce all dealers in these poor little martyrs to purchase a costly licence, and to cause the filthy dens in which they confine their winged prisoners to be subjected to rigorous inspection, including surprise visits. It is amazing that while the necessaries of life and the harmless luxuries of the poor are severely taxed, this shocking barbarity should pass scot-free.

HYBRIDS BRED EASILY.

Are they the first in Essex?

SIR,—I am sending you on my experience of Hybrid breeding, thinking perhaps this might interest some of your many readers. I bought a Bullie hen for a friend and took her home. Not wanting to dirty a cage with her for the few days she was to stay, I put her in with my winning cock Goldie, and left her there ready for the man to take away; but he never came for her, so they were left together. I chanced to be in my bird room one morning early in June. Hearing a noise, and turning round, I saw Mr. Goldie mating with the hen Bullie. Thinking there was a chance for Hybrids, I put a nest pan in bottom of cage and a penny nest-bag in rack. By the next morning she had her nest built, and two days later she laid her first egg. She laid four good eggs out of five, but the hen Canary I gave them to set well for eight days, then broke two, and chilled the others. Having another hen sitting, I transferred them to her, but one was dead; the other died in hatching. The old Bullie went to nest again, and had four more good eggs out of five. I gave them to a Yorkshire hen to set and hatch. She hatched two on the 10th; the other two are dead in shell, I think. The two that hatched are nice strong birds, but the old hen will not feed them, so I am having to feed them myself. They are two days old now, so I may perhaps rear them. I hope I do. The Bullie is mad to go to nest again, but I have no Canaries ready to go to nest, so I am trying to keep her back for a week. I have some young Yorkshire Canaries three weeks old to-day. Their mother is a good feeder, so I hope to get her and the Bullie to go to nest at the same time; then I may rear my Hybrids. I think I am lucky, considering they had no trouble taken with them. I had very bad luck with my first round of Yorkshire Canaries, losing 32 out of 36 young ones; but I am having better luck with my second round. I have eleven feathered and just getting out of the nest on to sticks; and a lot more to hatch this week, so I hope to have better luck before the season closes. I am told by some of our fanciers that my Hybrids are the first bred in Essex.

M. Moss.

THE LUCK OF A NOVICE.

SIR,—I thought I would write and tell you my luck in breeding this season. I have had seven hens and five cocks. I have 70 nice strong young birds, all doing well, and two hens sitting again. During the breeding season I feed on canary, a bit of hemp, and soaked summer rape seed. I give the rape when the young are about three days old, also some green food. The green food I use is dandelion leaves, and nothing else. I gather them fresh every morning, and put them in water as soon as I gather them. For egg-food take one egg, boil it about half-an-hour, let it get cold, then I put two slices of home-made bread and two tablespoonfuls of maw seed, one tablespoonful of castor sugar, and mix them all together in one of Sandiford's egg mills. When my young are about four weeks old I take them away from their parents and put them in a big flight cage. I give them egg-food and soaked rape seed, then I crush my hemp and canary seed. Twice a week I give some milk sop, with a pinch of maw seed spread on the top, and the birds enjoy it very much. When they are about seven weeks old I put them in a larger flight and get them on hard seed as soon as possible. I have only bred Canaries two years, and I think this is very good. I get my advice from CAGE BIRDS, and I find it very useful to me.

HAVE YOU SEEN "THE STOCK BOOK"?
It will surprise and please you.

THE
OF THE YEAR
Part II of 'Cage Birds Annual'
IS NOW READY
And will be sent to any address on receipt of a postal order for 1/-, post free.
No show secretary should be without this invaluable index to exhibitors all over the country. If any section be weak, reference to the Register of Wins will immediately enable a whip up to be sent.
"I have received the ANNUAL (part 2), with thanks. It might well have been called "Cage Birds Directory." There is no doubt it will be very useful in this way, comprising, as it does, the names and addresses of almost every exhibitor of cage birds of any note. It will also be very useful to fanciers when they are purchasing stock. They can see at a glance whether the advertiser has done any winning with his birds, and in this way save the cost of part 2 many times over.—THOS. ROBSON, 41, Shield-st., Newcastle-on-Tyne."
Parts 1 & 2 of "Cage Birds Annual" complete for 1/3, post free. If you have already ordered Part I. from us, send us 9d. and we will post you on Part II.

SEXING CANARIES.

Oranges Good for Birds.

SIR,—I read in your valuable paper, in "Stray Notes about Birds," the piece headed, "How to tell cocks from hens." If that is the way to tell cocks from hens I must say I am very lucky, for I have five young Norwich Canaries, and have noticed four of them resting on the right leg and the other one on the left. I am about sure there are three cocks amongst them. I read this piece on Sunday, so I thought I would take particular notice. My old cock birds all seem to rest on their right legs—so I really think there is a little truth in it. Now I am writing, I will relate another incident. Having lived near a public-house for six or seven years, I see women call and have a drop of gin, and when they drink it they fairly shudder at it, and pull some ugly faces, as if they did not like it. But when asked if they will have another they say "Yes, we will." My birds remind me of this. I was eating an orange about a fortnight ago in my bird room, and my birds were looking at me eating it. So I thought I would give them a piece. The result was they shook their heads and hopped away, then come again and again, till they had nicely tasted it. Now they will leave their seed and egg for it! I have three young Canaries going through the moult, and they have eaten half of a large orange to-day, and are in the best of condition. I think it a real good thing for them. I am sure it is excellent for clearing the throat.

AN ALBINO YELLOWHAMMER.

SIR,—Seeing in CAGE BIRDS a brief narrative of the Albino Robin at Douglas, I thought I would write you of a rare specimen of the Yellowhammer. About a month ago I was walking in the lanes, and I happened to alight upon a nest. There I found this bird—only very young indeed. I brought it home and put it in amongst my Canaries, which have brought it up to be a very nice bird indeed. Its plumage is a very light yellow, and its bill is like that of a Yorkshire Canary. But the rarest and most striking feature of the bird is, it possesses pink eyes. It is open to be seen by anyone, and I have had innumerable bird fanciers from the surrounding districts to see it, and they think it a very rare specimen indeed.

FEEDING GOLDFINCHES.

SIR,—I am sending you a few notes about how I feed and keep my Goldfinches. I have been keeping birds since I was able to feed and look after them, being then in the country, and always kept a lot of them. Goldfinches were my favourites then and are still. Last year being my first year of putting one on the show bench, which I did, and I got 2nd, and v.h.c. at another show with the same bird. Since then I have gathered a lot of good ones together, all from the same place, and hope I may get them through the moult well. The way I get them steady is as follows:—I carry them in my hand from the kitchen every night out to the yard, and hang them low, so that I can talk to them. I give them a dandelion head to pick, and then put them back again in their own place. They soon get to know you and watch for a bit from you. This is how I feed them. First thing, before I go to work, I go around every bird I have—I think 27 or so, and more hatching, being mostly Canaries. I get the drinkers, wash them out, and fill them with clean water; then fill the seed hoppers with seed, whatever the birds eat. If Goldfinches, hemp seed, and Canaries canary seed. Then I get my dandelion heads, of which I gather as many, when they are ready, as does me a good while, and give them a few each every morning and night. If I find my birds doing well on any seed, I always stick to it, no matter what anyone says. I would not change my way of feeding. I would go anywhere to see a good Goldfinch, although I have never shown a bird in my life till last year, and I was lucky to get 2nd in a class of over 28 birds. I am always willing to show my birds to any person who wishes to have a look at them when I am at home.

THE CREST CULT IN WALES.

SIR,—I desire to call the attention of show committees in Wales to the fact that they have overlooked the Crest classes lately at their shows. The variety class includes the Crest; but, as fanciers in Wales have paid more attention to this class of birds lately, I consider it a great loss to exhibitors and societies by not having this special class for them.

A PROLIFIC HEN.

SIR,—It is a rare occurrence, I believe, to have seven young Canaries in one nest. I have got seven. I mated a pair of variegated Norwich birds in March, and the hen made her nest and laid four eggs, and hatched out four young ones. As soon as they were out of the nest she built her second nest and laid six eggs, bringing off five birds, the other egg being clear. Out of those two nests of nine I reared four. Then she went to nest again for the third time, and laid each day for seven days straight off. She has hatched out seven birds, and they are all well and strong, being now three weeks old and out of the nest. These make in all 16 young out of three nests, and 11 alive and well. Now she wants to nest again! I have had several bird fanciers come to see this last nest of seven, as they could not believe it was true.

G. W. BROWN.

A TANTALISING HABIT.

SIR,—I have a stock of two moulted Goldfinches, six unmoulted ones, an unmoulted Linnet, and a Canary. These I had in single cages in three tiers. On going up into the bird room on Monday, July 1st, I noticed an untoward incident had occurred. Two Goldfinches and the Linnet had each lost the whole of their flights in the right wing, and two other birds two or three flights. These birds were in the two top tiers, but the whole of the other five in the bottom row were in perfect order. On the face of it, it appeared as though something had disturbed them during the night—perhaps a thunderstorm, as I never pull the window blind down. The strangest part, though, is that the same wing was affected in each case, which does not lend colour to the idea that the damage was done whilst dashing about the cage. Indeed, it looks more likely that the birds were seized with a sudden impulse to pull their flights out with their beaks, as birds have been seen to do. Perhaps the high condition of the birds may have had something to do with it, and the fact that they are not allowed to breed. For a bird to pluck a wing out in its wild state would, of course, be suicidal. A similar incident has occurred in previous years, but generally earlier. In fact, owing to it occurring so recently, it has compelled me to keep the three birds in cages until they regain their wings, whilst the other birds are enjoying the delights of an aviary to moult in.

F. G. JOHNSON.

A WANTON SLAYING OF SWALLOWS.

SIR,—In the "Bath Herald" for June 23rd, a Mr. John Higson had the following letter:—

"This Sunday morning, as I and friends were walking past the gardens by the river near Carr's Cloth Mills, we saw a painful and degrading sight. A young man, about 20 years old, stood in a gardeu with a heavy forked stick in his hands, the two branches of which were about one foot apart and three feet long, and as the Swallows swooped down in their flight, he struck at them with his weapon. He had killed nine or ten, or partially killed them, and they were lying in a heap close by, some dead, some lamed beyond recovery. There were a great many flying about, offering an easy mark. Watching him were about twenty young people from 12 years upwards, boys and girls, and they laughed when this young savage brought one down. There is something seriously wrong when a crowd of young people will stand by and enjoy the sight of these beautiful and harmless birds being brutally struck down. I wonder who is responsible for the fact that their human feelings are apparently quite dead?"

On the 25th of June, Mr. W. L. Langley, the well-known cage bird enthusiast, of Eastville, Bath, sent this communication to the same journal:—"Respecting your correspondent's letter on the killing of swallows at Twerton, surely this is a case which ought to be investigated by the police, and such wanton cruelty brought to justice. Cannot it be brought before the notice of our Wild Bird Protection Society, or perhaps our Bath Protection of Cruelty to Animals might intercede, and take some steps to protect our British birds, especially one of our most useful and pretty variety of the migrants?"

I am sure all bird lovers will be pleased to peruse the appended police court report, and to know that this wanton slaying of useful birds did not pass unpunished.

George Pease, of 3, Fernley-terrace, Twerton, was summoned for having in his possession certain wild birds, Swifts, which had been recently killed or taken.—Defendant pleaded guilty.—John Higson, of Kingsmead-square, stated that he saw the defendant armed with a thick stick knocking down Swallows at Twerton. Witness saw him kill one, and saw others on the ground. He had no wish to injure the man, but merely wished to prevent the cruelty. Ex-P.S. Holly also gave evidence, and the Bench decided to fine the defendant 10s. and costs.—The Chairman further stated that the Bench desired to express their thanks to Mr. Higson for the action he had taken in the matter.

The Song of the German Canary.

Translated from an article by Albert Flugel in "Kanaria" (Leipsig).

A comparison no longer exists between the song of the present-day Canary and that of its wild ancestor, although the latter formed the basis on which that variety, that desirable fulness, and that melting harmoniousness of sound have now been attained, so pleasantly and delightfully delivered by the modern Canary. As a matter of fact, the song of the wild Canary consists for the greater part of sharp and drawling tours and notes, intermingled with which more agreeable strophes (such as rolls, knorren, gurgling notes, hollow-pipes) were perceivable. The cogitative German was not very long in discovering these euphonious airs in the wild Canary's song; he recognised the dormant imitative talent, and, supported by the hereditary hypothesis, he endeavoured to progressively perfect the singing talents. That such efforts occasioned innumerable initial difficulties, and that the results achieved were frugal, is seen from the fact that the vocal organs could only be gradually improved by crossing, and that means which are now resorted to were then non-existent or only sparsely at disposal.

FUNDAMENTAL NOTES.

But, before arriving at the basis of the tours, an attempt was made to discover which fundamental notes were predominant in the song, and this led to the finding of the vowels u, ü, o, ö, e, a, i, and the consonants r, d, l, t, n, h, s, w and z. Having arrived thus far, it resulted that the vowels u, ü, o, and to some extent i also, formed the most valuable and richest tours of the song when connected with the consonants r, d, l. The combination of the vowel i with the consonant l can only be considered of value when the delivery is a pure metallic, and the consonant l rises in d, and finally quite disappears. The vowels a, e, and partly i also, in connection with the consonants r, d, t and l, invariably produce a flat sound, and the consonant t more or less harsh in all combinations. All vowels combined with the consonants n, s and w are quite valueless, as, moreover, the consonant r in connection with the vowels e and æ. The consonants s, z are lingual, n is the initial sound of nasal tours, and w will sound flat with all vowels, just as r in combination with e and æ. This now furnishes a true basis, which occurs in our tours and the hollow-roll, in which the most valuable vowels and consonants were detected, certainly occupies the foremost place as the highest esteemed tour. The hollow-roll is the chief tour of the Canary's song—its essence and pride; in order that it should be well cultivated, and to place it in the foreground, many a fine tour has, unfortunately, been abandoned.

THE HOLLOW-ROLL FORMATION.

The hollow-roll, of which the vowels u, ü, o, a form the key-notes, is a combination of the consonant r with the vowels just mentioned. As a rule the hollow-roll continuously retains the consonant r, but occasionally rises to h; it is probably of more value when the consonant r is heard throughout, nevertheless it should sound soft and by no means harsh, the vowels produced being distinct, full and hollow. If the hollow-roll is delivered in one and the same strain—i.e., rurururu or rürürürü—and thus continuously, such is described as a distinct hollow-roll; but should the little artist change the tune during the delivery—that is to say, intermingles the strophe with the consonant r in combination with the vowel u, and then changing to the connection of r with ü, and finally even with o—the hollow-roll, to some extent, forms curves. Such are called bent hollow-rolls, especially when the mode of delivery changes from u to ü and then to o, those rising being bent, and those returning from o to u downwards, bent or falling hollow-rolls. When sounding full and clear, in good combination, this is the most beautiful and wonderful tour of the Canary. Should, however, the rising or falling in the tour not roll continuously, but with intermissions, so that before passing to another note a short pause ensues—for instance, rururururu-rürürü-rururu—that is, when ascending, the rising hollow-roll, and vice-versa falling hollow-roll, which is pleasing to the ear when delivered by a bird with soft, melting sweetness, and a certain sad feeling is introduced into the whole delivery. If, now, the consonant r, the best of the hollow-roll (that is, of course, as already mentioned, should it be soft and not harsh), does not occur in the hollow-roll, we get a suppressed hollow-roll, which is less valuable. Hollow-rolls which combine the consonant r with the vowels ö and a are mostly formed with opened beak, and easily degenerate into nasal tours, becoming completely worthless.

THE HOLLOW-KLINGEL.

The hollow-klingel (hollow-bell) is very similar to the hollow-roll; the vowels are likewise u and ü, frequently intermingled with the consonant r, and then continued with l (for instance, rüllüllüllüllül or lullullullul. Should it be delivered in this manner in a somewhat slower measure, and in its deepest form, its whole perfection varies and is charming to the ear, but it is far less beautiful when delivered so tardily that the connecting consonant resounds somewhat inactively between, or the vowels are drawn tediously into one another; we then have a drawling hollow-bell. But when the vowels u and ü are delivered alternately — for instance, rullullüllüllullul lüllüllullullül—the hollow-bell impresses one as being bent; as, however, a bent hollow-bell does not exist, this is styled a rising, or vice-versa from ü to u, a falling hollow-bell. It is difficult to distinguish between the hollow-bell and the hollow-roll, and on this account they are very frequently confounded; but by lending a close ear, a rolling r is invariably heard with the hollow-roll, which is quite wanting in the hollow-bell (occurring only directly after the hollow-roll with r), and is replaced by an l, which is clearly heard as a lingual sound.

THE SCHOCKEL.

The Schockel (shaking) and Hollow-Schockel.—The former, which embraces a somewhat quick measure, is delivered in various falling and rising (in one unbroken strain), as also drawling notes and timbres, having as fundamental notes the vowels u, ü, ö and o, which are clearly audible without consonants. Such notes are not delivered in a flowing and rolling style, but are jerking—for instance, u-u-u-u-ü-ü-ü—which when produced in an unbroken strain resemble the ticking of the pendulum of a clock. Moreover, the Schockel is also subject to modulations, which arise when two different notes are combined. The hollow-schockel is most beautiful and valuable when it chimes in between the hollow-roll and hollow-bell crosses or falls into a deep strain (and possibly changes with u, ü, or o) to a full and clearly expressed u, in which a somewhat melancholy and sustained expression is introduced. With this mode of delivery the individual schockel vibrations are produced somewhat slower and more precise, resembling the regular swinging backwards and forwards of the clapper of a large bell, for immediately the clapper comes in contact with the bell a plain and full sound results, which gradually diminishes until another strike. The schockel is a hollow-tour in itself, but is never a song-tour (such as hollow-roll, hollow-bell) in roll form; for sometimes it rolls and sometimes shakes, so that it is nonsense to talk of hollow schockel-rolls, hollow schockel-bell, and such like.

THE KNORRE.

The knorre (bass-roll) is the bass of the song, and very valuable when delivered appropriately long, and in bends from o to u, or vice-versa, from the full chest and with closed beak. The fundamental note is the vowel o and partly u and a with the consonant r, which should sound soft, but yet to a certain extent as a double consonant (rr), and, like the o or u, must ring plain, full and hollow. If the knorre is produced with the consonants rr and the vowel u, it is a knurre, variously called hollow-knorre also; and why all these adjectives, now-a-days so numerous and misleading to the young fancier, seeing that every knorre must be hollow? Otherwise we should find it necessary to talk of hollow-hollow-roll and the like. Produced in a, it is less valuable, as this vowel usually sounds harsh and flat; this kind, as also that with æ, is invariably delivered with opened beak. The knorre is most difficult to cultivate, and, owing to every good bass Canary producing a more or less strong slip behind the knorre, the best bass birds are found among the bell Canaries.

THE KLINGEL-ROLL.

The klingel-roll (bell-roll) possesses the vowel i and the consonant r, and is to a certain extent a high hollow-roll, in which rolls and klingels occur simultaneously, which, consequently, are intercepted with a klingel, in which the vowel i, however, cannot be produced hollow; for this reason it takes the lowest place even in the hollow tours. It is broken with the consonant r in combination with the vowel i, the consonant l also joining at the end. The delivery is the most beautiful when the characteristic vowel i, in its deepest aspect, more inclines to ü—that is to say, where the highest ü becomes i. It readily degenerates, inasmuch as all connections in direct i become flat and particularly harsh.

THE KLINGEL.

The klingel (bell), which only possesses good qualities when the delivery is a clear metallic, combining a certain fullness of tone (not sharp, harsh or weak) in spite of its simple sound, is intoned with the consonant l, and is retained at the beginning of the tour in connection with the vowel i, which, however, gradually disappears, until finally the vowel i alone is heard. The measure requires to be quick and clear, not drawling and indistinct, or perhaps even connected with the consonants s and z, which is dangerous in the highest degree. Such delightfully soft klingels, with the triple sounding effects, formerly peculiar to the Trute's strain, is no longer to be met with.

THE PIPES.

The pipes.—The fundamental notes are the vowels u, ü and i and the consonants d, t. They are the most valuable when repeated at most four to five times in a deep tone, soft and, as it were, lamentingly in du, du, dü, dü, or tu, tu, tü, tü; with the vowel i they are less beautiful, seeing that they do not sound so soft as the former. But should the vowels a, æ, e, in connection with s, z, or j, be delivered, instead of the vowels u, ü, i, their value is completely lost, as by the combination of s and z with i, they become sharp pipes; those with j (ji, ji), drawn slowly, are Ziehpipes (drawing-pipes); but if the consonant n also becomes inserted, which is quite possible with s, z and j, we have nasal pipes, which depreciates the bird's song.

THE SCHWIRRE.

The schwirre, or schwirr-roll, which is counted among the lingual tours, intonates with the consonants s, r, which must be delivered soft and quickly after one another in combination with the vowel i—for instance, sisisisisi or rirririririri. The connection of r with i, which has added the qualities of a roll to the schwirre, is not to be compared with a high hollow-roll, because the hollow-roll, even at its highest, still possesses a certain fullness of sound which is wanting in the schwirre. It may become of value when produced at the commencement of the song in its sweetest and softest timbre, followed by a middle hollow-roll, from which the bird proceeds to a more deeper one; it is worthless when produced through the nose, further when the consonants s, r, sound sharp or flat, or when the i is more perceivable than e or æ.

THE KOLLER.

The koller is a combination of the consonant l with the vowels o, ö, ü or u, and as a rule is produced with closed beak and well-rounded crop, intoned with the compound consonants bl. This sonorous, deep breast-tour, which likewise is produced with closed beak and well-rounded crop, has unfortunately quite disappeared, probably owing to defective tours, as schnetter, spitz-pipes and the like, which no longer are in harmony with the clearness of song now sought after, chiefly combining themselves with this deep breast-tour, which evidently is difficult to cultivate. Bends from ü to u, and also o, occur in perfect timbres, which must be produced in full clearness; further, it is an exceedingly quick change of two or three sounds one after the other, forming a trill or rare fineness. U is the vowel most seldom occurring, and when heard makes a complete air. It is to be compared with the noise caused by water streaming forth under great pressure from a small opening.

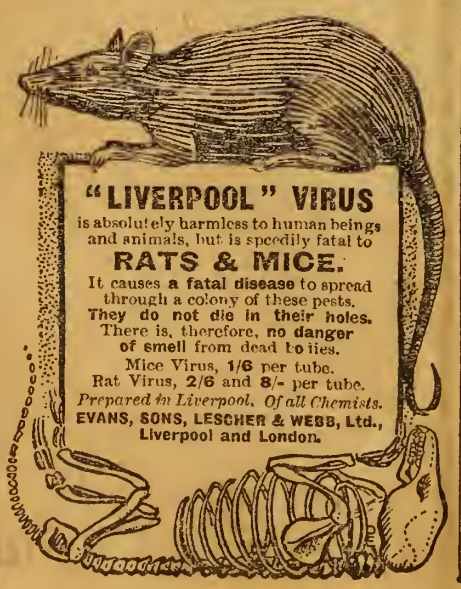
THE GLUCKE.

The glucke and gluck-roll is a tour usually commencing with the consonants gl, the vowels being u, ü. This tour also, which issues from the lowest depths of the breast with closed beak, is easily subject to deterioration, in consequence of which much more attention requires to be paid in the culture of the young cocks as with other strains of Rollers. As a fundamental note a marked u must be heard in the glucke, and at the final a marked but not harsh k. In the gluck-roll the vowels u or ü are combined with the consonant r, and the water-roll, which is almost inseparable from every glucke, is somewhat more perceivable, resulting in the k being softer; should the glucke, however, possess as a fundamental note the ü intermingled with e, it is less valuable.

THE WATER-ROLL.

The water-roll.—Its fundamental notes are most pleasantly centred in ü or u, preceded by the consonants bl and continued at least from l—for instance, blülülülü—becoming all the more perfect the closer the ü approaches the u. If produced flat and with too prominent a rippling sound, it becomes completely worthless. It is not advisable to cultivate it, because the fancier will obtain no pleasure from the progeny, if birds with water-rolls be utilised for breeding or as masters; the result would be the flattest and, partially also, the most unpleasant strophes, which sound far too rippling.

THE LACH.



The lach (laughing) or hengst-roll has the fundamental note a, being less valuable, and intones with the consonant l.

THE SCHNETTER.

The schnetter or schnatter is the most dangerous and, at the same time, most unpleasant tour, being a connection of the vowel i with the consonants sz, in the most favourable case with s—for instance, isziszisisz or isisisis; it is easily hereditary, and for that reason is not to be tolerated under any circumstances.

THE AUFZUG.

The aufzug is a combination of the consonants s and r with the vowels i, e, a, even with tsch; the described connections are generally jerked out in snapping or rattling notes—for instance, rie, sie, ritsch, retsch or rätsch, ratsch. It does not contribute to beatify the song, especially when produced harsh or flat.

THE GLASGOW & WESTERN COUNTIES N.C.M.B. AND F.B.C.

The First Feather Show of the Glasgow and Western Counties Norwich Canary, Mule, British, and Foreign Bird Club was held in the Good Templars' Hall, on July 6th. Considering the disastrous season that the members have experienced the entries were, indeed, very gratifying. The four classes for Norwich Plainheads contained 53 birds, and some very promising youngsters were shown by Messrs. Murray, Malcolmson, McFarlane, Edwards, McKenna, Herbert McInnes, A. Roulstone, J. Roulstone, Connelly, H. Henderson, and others. With a good moult many should be heard of at the winter shows. Mr. Murray (Glengarnock) won the case of pipes presented by Mr. H. Henderson for best bird in show, with a grand buff, possessing all the characteristics of a good Plainhead, type and quality being all there, combined with a nice sweet head. Mr. Jas. Laurie (Govan) made the awards in a very able and painstaking manner, and no remarks were heard.

The Amateur's Aviary of Foreign Birds.

By F. FINN, B.A., F.Z.S.

Now that foreign birds are so very familiar—in many cases more so than a good many British species—it is well to consider the ease with which these exotics can be kept, since many people are deterred from taking them up because they are to them unfamiliar. The present time of the year is a good one to get foreign birds, as they have a chance of getting acclimatised before winter sets in; but if they are wanted for an outdoor aviary it is necessary to get them during the next few weeks, for this very reason.

Many foreign birds—most, indeed, of those commonly seen—will bear our winters well out of doors, and will appear no more distressed by cold weather than our native species; but they must in such caso havo plenty of room for exercise, and must have adequate shelter from wind and wet. It is the damp and cold combined of our climate which make it trying.

The site selected for an outdoor aviary for foreigners should be one sheltered from cold winds, and such as to obtain plenty of sun—especially the winter sunshine, which is so scanty. It is best to have a lean-to structure against a wall, and if another wall can be utilised to form one side so much the better. The height should not be less than six feet, though I have known birds kept successfully in much lower places; but, of course, in a low aviary they are not easy to watch comfortably. A yard should be the minimum depth, and that is none too wide in the case of driving rain; indeed, an aviary less than six feet deep should be provided with glass shutters outside to close in wet weather.

Whether a netted flight is to be part of the aviary will depend on the space available; if there is not room for more than six feet frontage it is best to do without one, and roof over the whole of the top. A wired flight, be it remembered, is rather a luxury than a necessity, and though birds are more likely to breed among natural bushes growing in such a place, this is not much good if a heavy thunderstorm swamps the nest and drows the brood, as may always happen in our variable climate. Whether a flight is built on to the covered portion or not, it is as well to have the two separate, so that the covered house has a solid wall at each side, and is only open in front, thus securing protection from cold winds. A skylight in the roof of the covered portion will tend to make it more cheerful; but this should be wired over on the inside to prevent the birds dashing against the glass.

The flight should always be built lower than the indoor portion, so as to induce the birds to roost in the latter. However hardy birds may be, it is not desirable to have them sleeping out in all weathers, and subject to possible alarms from cats walking on the wirework. Wild birds can choose safe and sheltered roosting places, and even then many fall victims to vermin and bad weather. For facility in driving the birds out of the flight indoors if necessary, the opening by which they gain access to it should be at the top of the partition; it should, of course, have a hinged flap to close it, which can be made to serve as an alighting-board when open by means of a support underneath.

The greatest care should be taken to exclude rats. Unless the birds are as large as pigeons the netting should be half-inch mesh, and particular attention should be paid to the foundations. Either the floor should be bricked or cemented, or the netting carried down a foot underground and then turned outward for a foot, thus, the trench made to contain this downward prolongation of the netting being well filled in. If the whole aviary can be raised a couple of feet off the ground on a masonry foundation it will be all the better, of course, from the point of view of safety, freedom from damp, of facility for observing the inmates; but such construction will come expensive unless a man can be his own bricklayer.

Cats can be kept from climbing up on the aviary by wire netting projecting along the front; and a screen of coarse netting in advance of the real front will stop them grabbing at birds through it—not that I have ever personally lost birds in this way. But bad as grimalkin may be as an enemy to birds, the rat is worse; so look to your foundations and keep him out at any cost. In country districts tawny owls may be a source of disturbance to the birds at night if they are allowed to roost out in the flight; but this is not often a cause of complaint.

With regard to inside fittings, these should all be made moveable, so that the aviary can be thoroughly cleaned out every year. Long, straight perches should be avoided, natural branches being much better, as well as being a more picturesque appearance. They should be put up in such a way that the birds are not likely to foul each other or their food and water.

Nesting-boxes should be hung up securely, so as not to shake; the familiar cocoa-nut husks are good for birds that build in holes, while those which make nests in bushes appreciate the small Hartz-mountain cages in which German Canaries are imported. To prepare these for use the feeding-trough, drinking-pot, perches, and the moveable sticks serving as a door should all be removed. The husks or some covered boxes are needed for many birds to roost as well nest in.

The food vessels should be placed on a one-legged table to protect the supply from mice, which are found to get in occasionally, though the aviarist should see to it that they do not make a long stay. Water may go on the floor in a large flower-pan, with a rough tile placed in it, and leaning against the wall, to graduate the depth for tiny birds. Near this a branch set in a block of wood should be placed, for the birds to alight on when approaching and leaving the bath.

The flight, if you have one, will need to be grassed. You can, if you like, procure turf or grass-seed, as when making a lawn. But if you wish to save this expense go out with a roomy bag and secure large thriving tufts of wayside grass and set these closely in the flight, having previously dug up the surface. Of course, in any case the, the birds must not be let in till the grass is established. Shrubs may also be introduced, preferably in large pots, so that if they begin to look shabby they can be taken out and given a rest to be replaced by others.

PROGRESS OF SCOTTISH HYBRID BREEDERS.

By ST. MUNGO.

Among the young Hybrids one finds a summer's delight. But this season, up to the end of leafy June, the summer has been singular for the absence of sunshine, which affects the breeding of wild birds in confinement. The breeders, however, have persevered, and are still hopeful of doing great things. Exhibitors who go in for the best specimens are already inquiring for probable winners—there is nothing like being in time. Still an outsider can never taste the enjoyment which is to be found in Hybrid breeding. He may listen to what a breeder says, and take notes, and try to buy cheaply, but can never speak so definitely as the practical man, the breeder.

I have had another excursion among the Hybrids, and while I have not seen any young birds, I have examined fertile Greenie-Bullie eggs, and others. They have been nearly all clear, but there were some dark eggs, and the owners were patiently waiting the results of the hatching. They are under proved foster parents.

A pretty Redpoll and a smart average-sized Bullfinch hen are one ideal pair. The hen is building; she has a beautiful nest, and the couple seem thoroughly mated. It is very interesting to watch the lively Poll flying from end to end of the cage and from side to side, every now and then paying attentions to the hen. They are very devoted, and there is all appearance of everything coming right. The owner is a noted enthusiast in all he takes in hand.

The Redpoll seems in evidence everywhere. One fancier who knows his way about has four Redpolls mated to Bullfinch hens, and I shall be mistaken if he fails. Eggs are in process of hatching. The birds seem to be very healthy and strong, and full of vitality. There is a fine collection of the cross in the district—a plucky effort of this kind merits a rich reward.

Goldfinches and Bullfinches are mated in plenty, but there has been great mortality amongst Goldfinches, and so far as the writer has been able to ascertain almost no progress has been made. If the male has kept right, the female has broken down, destroying the budding hopes of the breeders. As there is room for new competitors, it will be a pity if fresh Hybrids of this class are not forthcoming.

Brown and Grey Linnet—Bullfinch couples are to be seen here and there, but of late years this cross has been so put aside on the show bench, that it is not in high favour. It is easily obtained, and a very engaging bird.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

HINTS ON THE CATCHING AND TREATMENT OF GOLDFINCHES.

A Lecture delivered at St. George's School, Hyde, by Mr. Matthewe, on March 22nd.

I have very great pleasure in giving you a little of my experience in the catching and treatment of one of our most popular British birds, the Goldfinch. I am, however, sorry to say I have not had time to go as deeply into it as I should have liked. I think he is one of the best favourites of our British birds. When I go to catch these birds I first find which is the best country where they are unprotected. Having done this, I start looking for what they feed on—not looking for birds, for you will never find birds where there is nothing to feed on. When I have found the food, such as hardheads, dog thistles, groundsel or hurdock, I begin to set my nets. Before I set my nets I find a suitable place in the middle of the feeding ground, then I always see that I have plenty of slack in my nets when setting them; for if you have them tight, like a drum, half of the birds will be nearly killed with being knocked to the ground.

SETTING THE NETS.

Now, with having sufficient slack in your nets, the birds will generally cling to the netting till the nets are over them. I also find that two or three decoy birds are very useful when the birds are flying over the nets, for they generally see the decoy birds moving, as they can be moved at any time by your line. In autumn and winter months we catch these birds in large quantities, and I consider it useless for anyone to catch these birds that does not understand the treatment of them. For without such knowledge far more die than live. They are very easy to catch—these so-called young Greypates; but what I find is wanted in these delicate hill birds is plenty of cage room and water. Far more birds die for want of water than want of food. Dealing with the old birds, I cannot speak too highly of them. Taking the Goldfinch all round, I think he is one of the noblest and most beautiful of our British birds, for he sings well and shows himself off to perfection.

TREATMENT WHEN CAUGHT.

When I have caught as many as I have sufficient room for in my cages I finish. Now, I want you to hear in mind my first care is to teach them how to find their water outside the cage, and I always learn them to do this in the fields before I start for home. The way I teach these birds to start drinking is to get a flat bottle, such as a whiskey bottle, and place it on the top of my cage, right over the water trough. I fill it with water and cut a nick the length of the cork, and this enables the water to be continually dripping into the water trough or on to the wires, just as you place the bottle on top of the cage. You will find that when they see it splashing on the wire out of your troughs they often make for it through the holes. The holes in my deckers are all down the fronts, say about eight holes to an 8 in. water tin. The simpler you can make it for them the better it is, and you find when one or two commence to drink, the others generally follow. In a general way I take with me one or two old birds that are used to it to teach the fresh-caught ones. Now I find this is very beneficial in keeping these birds alive.

FOOD FOR NEWLY-CAUGHT BIRDS.

I also put plenty of crushed seed in for them, such as crushed hemp, white sunflower and teazle. I find this is best for newly-caught birds. When they have fed, if I find any of them looking bad, I liberate them at once, for sometimes the journey home will finish them, as it often happens we have many miles to walk before we get to the station. When I get home I take all the birds out and place them in my long flight cages. If it is night I place them under a good light in a place where it is quiet, so that they may feed and drink after their long journey. Next morning I put a good pinch of Epsom salts in their water. This, I find, proves very beneficial to fresh-caught birds. My staple diet for these birds is as follows:—Two parts hemp, one part teazle, one part white Spanish, also a liberal supply of crushed white sunflower seed. If I find a few of them backward in feeding, I put a supply of thistle-heads in for them, and, generally speaking, I find they will come round when feeding on them. When I have got them well on hard seed I cage them off for a few days, then select those which are likely to make show specimens.

When writing to the judges selected for our Show, I could not find an address. Then I remembered the "Annual"—it gave me what I wanted. CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL is a boon to the Fancy, a credit to its publisher, and no secretary should be without it.—J. S. NAPIER, Sec. Arhroath C.F.C.B.S.

A Promising Outlook.

The Hucknall Torkard fanciers have had a very fair breeding season, and look like turning some grand birds out. The most successful breeders are—Messrs. A. Brown (59, all doing for themselves), R. Winterhottom (50), C. and H. Twine (44), W. Twine (40), F. Jacklin (36), J. Jacklin (30), E. Severns (50), G. Severns (36), J. Faux (40), J. Pepper (30), Mason (25), A. Ashury (16), W. Salis (16), H. Marshall (26), F. Haywood (20), J. Gilbert (20), T. Oliver (6), whilst A. Brown has been very lucky in getting 59 off eight pairs. I think they have done extraordinarily well in a trying season.—A MEMBER OF THE HUCKNALL TORKARD C.B.S.

WILD BIRD NOTES AND QUERIES.

Local Names.

The beautiful little Spotted Flycatcher is known in some districts as the "Beam Bird," in others as the "Cobweb," and in Kent as the "Cherry-sucker." How did a bird that feeds exclusively upon insects get such peculiar names?

There's a Boy Wanted There.

The following announcement recently appeared on the notice board of the Menai Bridge Police Station:—A reward of one pound will be paid for information leading to the detection and punishment of the wicked boy who stole the eggs from the Thrush's nest in the garden of Fir Grove.

Strange Nesting Place.

I heard recently of a Pheasant's nest on an old hay stack, which certainly seemed a queer nesting place for this ground builder; but Yarrell, the great naturalist, mentions a case of a Partridge actually building in a tree, and succeeding in hatching her clutch of 16 eggs, and getting the brood of young ones safely to the ground.

A Bird that Bursts!

Some Waalia Pigeons have been added to the Zoo collection. This Pigeon inhabits the lower parts of Abyssinia, and is the fattest and best of all the Pigeon kind; but the Abyssinians will not taste the flesh, holding it in abhorrence. It is said that in the beginning of the rainy season it emigrates to the south, and is frequently so extremely fat as to burst in falling to the ground.

Bird Life at Kew.

Kew Gardens have always been noted for bird life, both wild and semi-domesticated. An interesting sight is the pair of Storks, which nested last year, and have done so again. One of the young ones of this year's family has been killed by a Goose—a rather unusual death, for one does not associate the unwieldy bird with murderous intentions towards the feathered tribe.

Fatal Bird-nesting Expedition.

A bird-nesting expedition at Fair Oak, near Eastleigh (Hampshire), has had a fatal result. A couple of boys went into a sand pit, and one of them, named Richard Mayo, poked a stick into a Sand Martin's nest, which caused a quantity of sand to fall upon him, covering him up to his head. His companion dragged him out, but the boy died next day at Southampton Hospital, having broken his leg and received internal injuries which set up peritonitis.

Food of Swallows and Swifts.

Swallows and Swifts must have remarkably good eyesight to discern and capture minute insects while travelling at the speed of an express train. Although many of these captures consist of moths and flies of a fair size, there are a quantity quite minute. If a Swallow is shot or captured, one can generally find a hunch of insects in the mouth of the bird, some of which are quite tiny. I have sometimes noticed the Swallows and Martins feeding close to the ground, and the Swift hawking at a great height, as though they each feed upon different food.

The Destructive Tits.

The beautiful little Tits have been accused of damaging fruit by pecking holes in apples and pears. It has been suggested that it would be a good plan to entice the birds away from the fruit by planting rows of sunflowers near the fruit plantations, and then, when the seed was ripe, they would be too busy with them to trouble about the apples and pears. The idea is rather novel, but I am afraid the Greenfinches would secure the bulk of the seed, for these birds quickly flock to country gardens where a few sunflowers are grown, and quickly devour them. The Tits are very fond of the poppy seed, and it appears to me that it would answer the purpose better to sow some of these flowers. When in bloom they would give a bright effect, and the dropped seed would come up annually, thus saving the trouble of sowing.

The House Sparrow Abroad.

The British House Sparrow has been imported into several countries, with more than ordinary success. This interference with Nature has not turned out quite what was expected, for in some countries the bird breeds practically all the year round, and, with his usual pushful methods, he has succeeded in driving away many more desirable species. In America he has become quite a pest, and it is reported that the United States Government is doing its best to keep the species within reasonable limits. For this purpose they are breeding the Acadian Owl, or Saw-whet (so called from its rasping note). This bird is exceedingly fond of Sparrows, and it is hoped he will help to reduce the number by natural means; but the question is, will he confine himself to Sparrows alone, or will he attack other small birds?

"CAGE BIRDS" GREAT
CANARY BREEDING COMPETITION.

TWO SECTIONS: (1) NOVICES, (2) OLD HANDS.

1. Only Novice Breeders are eligible for the Novice Competition, a "Novice" to mean anyone who has never bred Canaries before.
2. The Prizes will be: A, Cup, value £5 (or Cash), First Prize; B, Cash, £3, Second Prize; C, Cash, £2, Third Prize; and D, Five £1 Cash Prizes for the next best in succession.
3. Prizes to go to the "most successful" breeders, meaning those of the competitors who are most successful in satisfactorily rearing the best average of healthy young birds during 1907 Canary breeding season now in progress.
4. The young Canaries must be bred by the competitors on or before July 15th, 1907, next. None bred after that date will be eligible. (Note definition of "successfully reared" given on Declaration Form.)
5. All stock birds used must be the bona fide property of the Competitor.
6. Competitors must have the results of their breeding operations attested to by two responsible officials of any recognised Cage Bird Society; or may swear a declaration attested to by two responsible witnesses. Declaration Forms (see extracts printed below) are now ready, and will be sent any competitor post free on application; a postcard will do.
7. From now till the date of the COMPETITION CLOSING, AUG. 17th, each issue of CAGE BIRDS will contain a Coupon, and when sending in the declaration competitors must enclose the whole series of coupons to show that they have been during the period regular readers of CAGE BIRDS.
8. The Editor's decision shall be final.

FIVE POUNDS Cash, or Cup to full value, at winner's option, is offered for the most successful Canary breeder of any experience. All breeders of one season's experience and upwards eligible. Same conditions as for Novices. The Editor's decision to be final.

NOTE.—All entries must be sent in by August 17th.

EXTRACTS FROM DECLARATION FORMS.
FOR COMPETITORS.

I, the undersigned, having entered for "CAGE BIRDS" 1907 BREEDING COMPETITION, hereby make declaration, according to the terms of the said Competition: (1) That this is the first season I have tried to breed Canaries; (2) That I have used this season .....(state number)..... Cocks and .....(state number)..... Hens, which were and are now bona fide my own property; (3) That I successfully reared* by August 13th, 1907, ...(state number)..... young Canaries entirely from the aforementioned .....(state number)..... stock birds, the said young Canaries being in good health on the said August 13th.

* By "successfully reared" is meant that the young birds are feeding themselves—that is, are requiring no assistance from their parents.

FOR WITNESSES.

We, the undersigned, having read the Declaration of .....(state name)..... of .....(give full address)..... hereby declare that, to the best of our knowledge and belief, the said Declaration is true in substance and in fact, we having seen the above birds and checked the stated particulars concerning them.

A Real Live Question.

IS IT A BIRD YOU WANT?

If so, I will tell you what I am prepared to do. I have a large number of 1907 Birds and the Cocks are not yet in full song, but still I am prepared to guarantee the sex, and should by any chance the Bird not prove to be a Cock I will exchange any time between now and January 1st, 1908.

My Offer means that I will return your cash or send you a satisfactory Bird if the one sent fails to please.

1907 Birds.—Pure prize-bred Yorkshire Cocks, 4/-, 4/6, 5/6, 7/6, and 8/6; Hens, 2/-, 2/6, and 3/6; Pairs (Cock and Hen), 5/6, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, and 10/6. Travelling Cages are charged for, 3d. extra.

All Birds sent out for Cocks bear my stamp, which is my guarantee of sex, and all Birds bearing such stamp will be exchanged any time between now and January 1st, 1908. The above terms are an absolute safeguard against the well-known Hen Trick practised by others.

Yorkshire Cocks for the early shows at reasonable prices. All other Birds on my usual approval terms.

For full detailed Bird Price List send postcard, or on receipt of two penny stamps to cover postage, I will send my 106 page Catalogue, full of useful information, and should be in every birdroom.

* * Humming Birds.

These lovely little beings, which seem more like brilliant-winged insects than birds, are almost as useful in America as Swallows are in England, though the largest kind is no bigger than a Wren. The tiny Humming Bird leads a life as gay as that of a butterfly, yet does much good work in clearing the flowers and plants from small flies, spiders, blight and other creeping things. Humming Birds cannot live on honey alone, though they are very fond of sipping it from the cups of flowers. They must have more solid food as well. Insects which live in flowers, biting the petals or spoiling the seeds, are carefully picked out by these bright little gardeners. The nest of a Humming Bird is only one inch wide and as much in depth, in which she lays two eggs only. This fairy cradle is woven finely with bluish-grey lichens stripped from the trunks of trees. —FRANK HUMPHRIES (age 13), 74, Cedar Street, Bootle, near Liverpool.

* A Curious Nest.

For several years a Tomtit has built its nest in a lamp-post which stands in front of our house. The nest is built about two feet from the top of the post, where no one can interfere with it. One morning I found one of the young birds, which had got out and could not fly. I put it in a cage on the front window-sill, and the old birds came and fed it. When it was able to fly I let it go.—WALTER METCALFE (age 15), 21, Humber Street, Retford.

* "Polly."

"Polly" is a green Amazon Parrot. She is nearly all green, except for red tips and blue feathers in her wings. She is a very good talker and mimic. She cackles, crows, laughs, cries, mews, and barks. She says, "Polly want a little bit of potato," with a peculiar drawl. She also says: "Polly want a bit for Polly." "Polly want a nut," "There goes a man," "What's the matter?" "Look at that!" "There's a knock at the door." These, however, are only a few of her sayings. She comes out of her cage and tries to pull one's hair out. She also tears a book if you happen to be reading one and do not take any notice of her. —Sent by DORA BOWERS, 8, Albert Square, Clapham.

READING AND DIS. C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held July 3rd; good company present. Summer outing fixed for Saturday, July 13th, to Aldermaston, permission having been kindly granted to go over Mr. Keyser's estate thereat. Train leaves Reading Station at 2.58, and Reading West Station at 3.3, arriving Aldermaston 3.22 p.m. Members and all friends invited. There will be no meeting during August, the next being on September 4th. Mr. Maisey read a very interesting paper on "Feeding," for which he was thanked.

BRADFORD EAST O.S.

The Bradford (East) O.S. had another successful ramble on Saturday afternoon to Goitstock, about 30 members and friends taking the opportunity of spending a pleasant outing. The inclement weather was in no way allowed to damp the feelings of the party, and everyone enjoyed themselves, especially when the tea was served out. I don't know what Charles Hustwick thinks of the appetites of our members, but they certainly took a lot of satisfying on Saturday. Who was it said he could eat another plate of beef, after he had kept about six of us busy handing him things over? They are all beginning to like this part of the programme, the ladies as well, and it is already on the books that we shall give them another visit before long, when I hope the large number of members who are in business and tied on a Saturday will have the opportunity to go with us. There was a lot of things to interest us on Saturday, and it was quite evident that the breeding season has been a prolific one as far as the wild birds are concerned in this district. A lot of ideas were mooted while we were having a short chat with each other, which will help to uphold the future welfare of this progressive society, and I hope that all members and friends will make a special effort to attend the next meeting, in order that we might arrange these ideas to suit all, as far as possible.
H. HILL, Sec.

DIPTON AND DIS. C.B.S.

Meeting held on July 8th. A very interesting lecture was given by Mr. Anthony Brown, of Gateshead, on moulting and colour feeding. Many questions were put and answer by him to the satisfaction of all present. Mr. Brown thanked the members for the attention they had given him, and said he would always be pleased to give the best advice that lay in his power to help the Society. He congratulated us on the nice little show we held in January last, and he hoped that we should bench some good ones at the next show, as he had had the honour of being selected to judge it. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Brown brought a pleasant evening to a close. Next meeting, August 5th, at 7.30 p.m., in Council Schools.

BRADFORD AND C. B.B. AND M.C.

Meeting at the Market Tavern, Bradford, on July 20th, Mr. W. A. Cowgill (President) in chair. The following were elected on the committee as outside members—Mr. J. W. Matthews (Castleford), Mr. Dawson (Otley), Mr. C. R. Stephenson (Leeds), Mr. J. S. Clarkson and Mr. Hellewell (Halifax), Mr. Duncan (Harrogate), Mr. C. Shirley (Keighley). It was proposed that a letter of thanks be sent to the National British Bird and Mule Club for the copy of their rules, and also for their good wishes for this club's welfare. The meeting was then adjourned until August 24th, at 7 p.m., as some of us were "going light" for want of "soft food."

SWANSEA.

Held July 17th at Lockyer, Thomas and Co.'s Auction Rooms, a very suitable and well-lighted room. Upwards of 70 birds were staged, and the quality in most cases was far above the average. The judges were: Canaries, Mr. D. Jenkins. Mules, British, etc., Mr. T. Gamage; both gentlemen gave the highest possible satisfaction.

NOR. YELL.: 1, 2, spl, Kirby, a couple of real nice quality youngsters, correct type, brimful of colour; 3, 4, Vyse, the former we liked, rare head properties. BUFF: 1, spl, Gooding, very typical, neat head, nicely feathered, splendid size; 2, Rees, nice short one, correct type; 3, 4, Kirby, two nice exhibits, nicely put down. YORKS. YELL.: 1, spl, Taylor, neat and straight, good length, lovely feather; 2, Ford and Sons, also good position and carriage. BUFF: 1, spl, 2, 3, Taylor, a trio of capital youngsters, plenty of length, good wings and tails, leader excells in condition. BORDER YELL.: 1, spl, Stock, a rare little youngster, extra neat type, splendid carriage, good wings, nicely feathered; 2, 3, Evans, pretty close to leader, put down well; 4, O'Connell, rare stamp, lovely quality of feather. BUFF: 1, spl, Stock, we liked well, staged with good taste, wins well; 2, Hocking, bonny youngster in pink of condition, neatest of wings and tail; 3, Evans, well staged, close in all respects to former. GREEN, ETC.: 1, spl best Border, 3, Hocking, who put down a capital team of greens, will hold their own in any competition; 2, spl, Evans, also a green of exceptional merit, wins special for second best Border; 4, Stainn. A.V. OLD BIRD: 1, Rees, with a grand Norwich, in rare feather for the time of year, splendid type and colour; 2, Hockey, lovely yellow green Border, neat carriage and feathered like glass; 3, 4, Chealy. MULES: 1, Gooding, nice young Goldie Mule. BRIT. HYBRID: 1, 2, spl, Jenkins, pair of Linnet-Greenics, former rare size and colour, shows parents clearly. GOLDFINCH: 1, Nicholas, real good one, nice face, well tanned, good bars and buttons; 2, Hammacott, warm in colouring, neat face, nicely cut; 3, O'Connell, nice sized one, neat face, well buttoned; 3, 4, vhc, Bater, trio of toppers, well balanced throughout. GREENFINCH: 1, spl, Jenkins, good colour and size, put down in best of trim; 2, 3, Taylor, promise to make good 'uns with a moult. LINNET: 1, Nicholas, good sound brown, distinct lacings, plenty of size; 2, spl, Roach, neatest of markings and colour; 3, 4, A. E. and W. R. Taylor, birds with good careers in front of them. REDPOLL: 1, Nicholas, rare colour and size, well known; 2, 3, Jenkins, former extra good, close race with winner. CHAFFINCH, ETC.: 1, A. E. Taylor, nice colour and spangle. A.O.V.: 1, Nicholas, well-known Yellowhammer, looking his best; 2, Jenkins, also Yellowhammer, not quite so distinct in head markings.

GRIMSBY.

Held in the beautiful People's Park on July 18th. The day was a lovely one, and our feather favourites on show were viewed and admired by many hundreds of visitors. Mr. C. Bemrose was manager and Mr. Sam Lee Hon. Secretary, while the birds were chiefly under the care of our old friend Mr. H. E. Stubbs, whose geniality and enthusiasm are infectious. Notwithstanding the drawback to an entry of old birds consequent upon the season at which the show is held, there was a nice entry of 14 old Norwich in one class, and 11 young Norwich put in an appearance in the class given for them. The quality was good, and one or two of the youngsters very promising. British were fair, and Foreign made a capital show. Mr. George Gardner judged.

NOR. (14): 1, Stubbs, shapely, short, correct feathered yellow, shone like silk, in fine nick for time of year; 2, Robinson, nice short wings and tail, good level colour; 3, Harland, nice quality of feather, trifle long in flights; vhc, Harland; hc, Hope; c, Hull. NOR. (1907) (11): 1, 2, Harland, very sweet yellow, not too large but has substance and nice feather; second variegated buff, silky feather, nice type and size; 3, Metcalfe, good shape, scarcely so rich in colour; vhc, Harding; hc, c, Peploe. LINNET (4): 1, Crowder, rich, nutty colour, well shown; 2, Ellender, steady, but not so good in colour and gloss; 3, Drinkall, close to second in point of merit; vhc, Stubbs. BRIT. A.O.V. (8): 1, Cooper, Waxwing, in nice feather, well shown; 2, spl, Peploe, very pretty Siskin; 3, Drinkall, fair Goldfinch; vhc, Stubbs; hc, Harding; c, Miss Watts. FOR., LARGE (5): 1, Cooper, very nice exhibit, blue bonnet Parrakeet, well shown; 2, Mrs. Markham, rich coloured, fine plumaged Grey Parrot; 3, Mrs. Robinson, an Amazon, well shown; vhc, Wilson; hc, Metcalfe. FOR., SMALL (7): 1, Suggitt, lustrous, superb Tanager, won easily; 2, vhc, hc, Sutcliffe, the former a very nice Pintail Nonpareil; 3, Suggitt, Bulbul in nice feather.

HAMILTON CADZOW OAK.

The first Open show of its kind in Scotland was held by the above Society in the Royal Hotel, Hamilton, on July 13th, and proved a great success. Over 100 birds in the six classes provided. There were some very promising youngsters, amongst them, a buff Norwich, shown by Mr. A. Malcomson, which was greatly admired, and some tempting offers were made for it but declined. Messrs. McFarlane, Roulstone, McKenna, and Trew also had grand specimens on view that should be heard of later on. Messrs. Somervill, McLean, Walker, Shearer, Lindsay and Hamilton put down some nice Borders. Norwich were judged by Mr. George Marlin and Borders by Mr. J. Young, and their awards seemed to please, as grumbling was at a minimum.

NOR. YELL.: 1, McFarlane, heavy variegated, built on stout lines, with neat head, in rattling good order; 2, Roulstone, yellow, in good condition; 3, spl, 4, Malcolmson, third should make a grand one after moult, was badly broke, fourth marked on one wing; 5, spl, Trew, showing good colour; 6, McKenna. BUFF: 1, spl, McFarlane, var., nice body, rather browed; 2, Malcolmson, a gem of the first water, clear, great substance, correct style, free from browing; 3, 5, Roulstone, third very nice var., slipped back claw which told against it; 4, 6, McFarlane. BOR. YELL.: 1, spl, Somervill and McLean, both A1 style, sweet head, very compact wings and tails, an easy win; 3, Shearer, grand head, good, jaunty style, a little out of condition, or might have gone up one; 4, 5, Lindsay, fourth far gone in moult, but should do well later; 6, Allan, quite a baby. BUFF: 1, 2, spl, Somervill and McLean, first very promising youngster, feathered like wax, a credit to its owners, second not quite the stamp as winner but still a good one; 3, Walker, another gem, must have pressed winners; 4, 5, Shearer, good stamp, but not in the same condition; 5, spl, Lindsay. VAR., ETC., YELL.: 1, Walker, a gem of a var., slashing style, in rattling order, should take some stopping; 2, 3, spl, Hamilton, second grand Cinnamon, nicely drawn out, perfect carriage, looks like the Glasgow and Western Counties winner; 4, spl, Somervill and McLean; 5, 6, spl, Dick, two very nice ones. BUFF: 1, spl, Somervill and McLean, still another gem; 2, spl, 4, Hamilton, very neat head, splendid carriage, shown in Dannie's best style; 3, Walker, sweet little chap, in faultless condition; 5, Allen, a credit to its owner, should win later on; 6, Dick, still another good one. After the birds were packed a very successful smoking concert was held, with songs and recitations, which brought a very successful event to a close. All present promised to send bumper entries to the annual show.

MIDDLETON.

Young Birds Show of the Middleton O.S., held on July 13th, was a success financially, but the number of entries were not quite up to previous years. Mr. W. Bescoby obtained the most points for the silver challenge cup, and was followed close up by Mr. H. Thomas, the former getting 18 points and the latter 17.

YORKS. YELL.: 1, Thomas; 2, 3, Bescoby; 4, vhc, Wagstaff; hc, Clegg. BUFF: 1, Bescoby; 2, 4, Clegg; 3, Wagstaff. TKD. YELL.: 1, Thomas; 2, Bescoby; 3, 4, Marsden; vhc, Wagstaff. BUFF: 1, Bescoby; 2, Wagstaff; 3, 4, Thomas; vhc, Clegg; hc, Marsden. A.V. (NOVICE): 1, 4, Taylor; 2, vhc, Evans; 3, Ward. NOR. YELL.: 1, 2, Craighill. BUFF: 1, 2, 3, Craighill. TKD. BUFF: 1, 2, 3, Craighill. A.V.: 1, 2, Reynolds. BRIT.: 1, Williamson, Nightingale, in the pink of condition; 2, Thomas; 3, Craighill; 4, Clegg. A.O.V. CAN.: 1, Ward; 2, vhc, hc, Beasley; 3, Collings; 4, Wagstaff.

CANARY MANUAL

Price ONE SHILLING. Post Free 1.2.

Superbly illustrated by the Champion Canary Artist Mr. H. NORMAN. EVERY BIRD DEPICTED IS A VERITABLE MODEL, and shows the breeder what to aim for. Some idea of the popularity of this Practical Manual may be gathered from the fact that under the title of "The British Canary," it has passed its Third Edition, entering upon a Fourth Edition of 5,000 copies under the new title of "HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL." MR. HOUSE has thoroughly revised and brought this work up-to-date and incorporated a chapter on the "Roller or Singing Canary."

BIRKENHEAD.

The Birkenhead Canary F.A. First Feather Show was held at the Co-operative Hall, Catherine-street, on July 20th. Yorkshires and Norwich were given good classification, and especial mention must be made of the Yorkshire Greens, which were a superior lot. Some good young Crests and Crestbreds were shown, by, we understand, a lady novice, and the winning clear buff dark Crest is full of real Norwich type, with abundance of feather lifting very neat to the body, its crest is of very good size, well rounded, with good centre, and well filled in, and with age and luck will make a good one. Mule or Hybrid have not yet been bred here. Some nice Linnets and other Britishers made up a good and neat show, and 70 or 80 birds were staged. Some capital special prizes added interest to the competition, and the winners got grand value for their trouble of showing. Mr. Chas. Henlton judged. Mr. J. T. Harding, the secretary, had the birds well staged, and his supply of special wire carriers, which elevate prize cards above the cages, is worth general adoption.

YORKS. YELL.: 1, Harding, nice size and length, good carriage and position, neat head, well up on legs; 2, Nash, smaller, and more breedy, just going into moult. BUFF: 1, 2, Harding, first very finely drawn, typical carriage and position, pale colour, but good quality, and of good size, second smaller, but a replica of first in all other points; 3, Morton, lovely quality of feather, good level colour, nicely rounded body, neat head, beak, and good legs and feet, minus most of tail feathers or might have been high for first honours; vhc, Nash. TKD. YELL.: 1, Hall, smart youngster, full of quality, capital size and position, neat wings and tail; 2, Harding, also grand quality, stands well. BUFF: 1, vhc, Hall, ticked on head, well up on legs, nicely rounded body, close fitting wings and tail, capital quality; 2, Harris, very long drawn out, ticked head, rare stand and style, just going for the moult; 3, Meadows, heavily variegated body, excellent shape and quality, hardly long enough yet, should develop with age; hc, Harding. CINN. TICK BUFF: 1, Morton, ticked eyes and left wing, grand quality and style, good sides and well up on legs; 2, Hughes, variegated body, fine feather and rare stand, well drawn out; 3, Hall, faint cinn. tick on wing, flowing with quality. YORKS. GREEN, YELL.: 1, Hughes, lovely deep level green throughout, dark beak and legs, good back markings, finely drawn, fair size, well finished; 2, Meadows, looser in feather, good deep colour and well marked back, nice beak and legs, long drawn type; 3, Corbett, grand colour and type, rather light in legs and beak; vhc, Hadwin; hc, c, Hurrell. BUFF: 1, vhc, Hughes, good level colour, excellent type and quality for a buff; 2, 3, c, Hurrell, second grand size and type, sound colour, coarser feather, third smaller, rare colour and type; hc, Meadows. FOUL YELL.: 1, vhc, Harding, foul wing, fine colour, quality and type, sound beak and legs, A1 condition; 2, Meadows, foul tail, nice deep colour, good shape, beaten in fulness and tightness of feather; 3, Corbett, foul tail, bit loose in breast feather, sound colour and deep back markings; hc, Johnstone. FOUL BUFF: 1, 3, vhc, Hurrell, first foul tail, dark beak and legs, grand body colour, rare type, stands well, in fine condition, third variegated body, shape, colour, quality, and condition all there; 2, Hughes, rather heavier body, grand dark colour, foul tail, nice condition; hc, Johnstone. NOR. YELL.: 1, Burns, very fine thick set type, flowing with colour and quality; 2, Hall, smaller, grand type and feather; 3, Dalzell, very compact body, beaten in head and neck. BUFF: 1, Burns, immense size, grand bloom and condition, big enough now, a capital prospective stock bird; 2, Hall, smaller, very mealy, nice shape, good quality; 3, vhc, Dalzell, very pale, grand type, rare quality and condition, like a good hen. CRESTS: 1, 2, 3, Mrs. Cory, very good trio, latter two mottled Crests, first capital clear body, dark, very cobby body, crest of good size and formation, well centred, and droops nicely, just a bit short in front, very good start for a lady; vhc, Barnes. CRESTBRED: 1, 2, Mrs. Cory, very cobby type, first better browed, nicely raised dome skulls, short beaks, nest companions to first prize Crest, we should think; 3, vhc, Barnes, well beaten in type and skull, etc. A.O.V.: 1, 3, Hadwin, foul tail cinnamon, Norwich type, A1 shape and feather, third same breed, but smaller, grand condition; 2, Meadows, fine Cinnamon, Yorkshire type, in best of feather and condition; vhc, Barnes. BRIT. LINNET: 1, Whittington, grand shaped bird, rare markings and colour, fine silky feather, shows well; 2, Nicholls, very large, thick set, grand markings, rather pale colour, just finishing moult, and ought to come up in colour soon; 3, vhc, Richardson, capital colour, nice shape and markings, bit smaller than former, steady and singing grand; hc, Kendall. BRAMBLE, ETC.: 1, 3, Harding, first very good Chaffinch, third rather dark spangled Bramble, in good feather; 2, Richardson, nice neat bird, fair size and nice feather. GREENFINCH: 1, Burns, grand colour, size, shape, and condition; 2, Richardson, large, rather duller in colour, nice feather and steady.

PAIGNTON.

The Torbay O.S. held its First Feather Show on July 17th, in the Lower Public Hall. The entries came up well, considering the poor breeding season some of the members have had. Yorkshires were the feature of the show, some very fine birds being staged by Messrs. Hodge, Mogford, Bastard and Parnell and Son. Grand Norwich were shown by Messrs. Veale, Jeffery, Daw and Bastard. Mr. Redwood judged, and gave great satisfaction.

YORKS. YELL.: 1, Hodge; 2, vhc, Parnell and Son; 3, Bastard; hc, Innis. BUFF: 1, 2, Parnell and Son. TKD. YELL.: 1, 3, Parnell and Son; 2, Hodge; vhc, Innis; hc, Bastard. BUFF: 1, vhc, Parnell and Son; 2, 3, Mogford; hc, Bastard. CINN. MKD. YORKS.: 1, 2, Parnell; 3, vhc, Bastard. NOR. YELL.: 1, 3, Bastard; 2, Daw; vhc, Jeffery. BUFF: 1, Jeffery; 2, Daw; 3, Veale; vhc, Bastard; hc, Hodge. TKD. YELL.: 1, Veale; 2, Jeffery; 3, Daw. BUFF: 1, Daw; 2, Veale; 3, Jeffery. JUNIOR CLASSES, NOR.: 1, Jeffery. YORKS.: 1, Bastard. A.O.V.: 1, Bastard.

WIBSEY.

Second Show of birds in first feather. The entry was not so large as the previous show, owing to a lot of members having rather bad luck with their second round. Mr. J. Hartley judged, and his awards were accepted with general satisfaction.

YELL. YORKS.: 1, 3, vhc, Thornton; 2, Bastow. BUFF: 1, Ellerton; 2, vhc, Chapman and Bateman; 3, c, Bastow; 4, Shaw; hc, Acroyd. TKD. YELL.: 1, Bastow; 2, Chapman and Bateman; 3, vhc, Ellerton. COCKERMOUTH.

Nest Feather Show held in the Bridge-street Rooms on July 20th. There were 63 birds staged, a very creditable number for a small society. Mr. Brunton, of Wythop, late of Keswick, was the judge, and Messrs. Ellwood and Deacon acted as stewards. The quality of birds shown was an all-round improvement on last year, the opinion of the judge and expert visitors of some of the exhibits being a high one.

ALTRINCHAM.

Nest Feather Show, on July 13th, at the Central Cafe. The showroom is an excellent one and very suitable for the purpose. The entry numbered about 140, and considering the season (which has not been one of the best) was a source of satisfaction to the committee. The specimens staged had amongst them some very promising young birds, which will in all probability be heard of again later on in the year. The Norwich were far ahead of anything yet produced, as also were the Yorkshires. The Border classes appear to have got a strong hold in this Society, and some very nice birds were staged. The British and Foreign sections produced some very nice specimens, put down in faultless condition. The Secretary had things well in hand, in his usual style, prize money and prize cards being made and paid soon after judging was finished. Mr. A. Wellings was the adjudicator, and satisfaction appears to have been given all round.

GREENWICH & DEPTFORD C.B.S.

Young Stock Show July 11th, at the Two Brewers, Church-street, Greenwich. Considering the poor breeding season experienced this year, the entry, 110, was a good one. During the evening there was a good attendance of visitors, the room in which the exhibits were staged being tastefully decorated and well adapted to the purpose. Mr. J. Robson judged, and gave the best of satisfaction, afterwards complimenting the members on the advance the society had made, both in members and cultivation of their hobby. Mr. Hill carried out the secretarial duties, assisted by a very able committee. Birds deserving of special comment were Dr. Sidgwick's marked yellow and clear buff Norwich, two very typical ones. Mr. Edwards stood with two firsts in the champion Yorkshire sections, both in splendid condition. Mr. Fishwick's clear yellow was a little thick, or would probably have changed places with the winner in this class. The great feature of the show was the novice support, 32 entries in two Norwich classes and 21 in two Yorkshire classes, among them being some very promising youngsters. Crest and Crestbreds were weak, Mr. Johnson winning with a good Crestbred; we note this exhibitor also staged a trio of good Lizards. The British, 21 entries, were for the time of the year well staged, the winning Linnet being a good one, and in fine condition. This also applies to the first Goldie. Catalogues, with awards, were on sale a few minutes after the judge had placed his awards.

W.C.O.S.

Nest Feather Show held at Plymouth on July 17th. Eighty-two birds were on exhibition. This was the final show in which the six silver challenge cups were offered for competition, and both in numbers and quality of exhibits compared well with the two previous shows held in May and June. In the three shows a grand total of 320 birds have been obtained, which is a very great advance over any previous year of the society, and one that will rank quite in the first flight with any society in the country. The judges for this show were: Yorkshires, Mr. L. S. B. Clark; Norwich, Mr. J. Rowe; Crest and Crestbreds, Mr. C. Hoar; Mules, Mr. C. Harris; British and Foreign, Mr. J. Doyle. The winners of challenge cups who will hold same for this year (cups having to be won twice to become absolute property of winner) are as follows:—Yorkshire cup, W. A. Dyer, 48 points; Norwich, W. Speilman, 34; Crest and Crestbred, J. Ryder, 48; A.O.V. Canary, T. Pope, 33; Mule, A. Rapson, 25; British and Foreign, F. Snell, 82.

YORKS. YELL (8): 1, 2, 3, 4, Dyer, first eye-ticked, stylish bird, with correct position, a trifle larger in beak, with good wing carriage and tail, a thorough win, second almost as good as winner, but a trifle stouter, fails in neck, third good Yorkie, quite large enough, good in neck and wings, well-filled back, fourth neat bird, failing slightly in breast; vhc, c, Bassett; hc, Large. BUFF (10): A hot lot, likely to be heard of again; 1, Bassett, real clinking bird, nice head, splendid neck, good wings and tail, good position; 2, 3, 4, c, Dyer, second another good bird, slightly stouter, but little behind winner, third a good-headed bird, also close up, very little to choose between the first three, fourth heavily variegated, good length and nice head; vhc, Large, in poor feather, or might have been higher; No. 5, unnoticed (Large), too young yet, best head in class. NORWICH YELL. (7): A grand class; 1, Staples, marked both eyes and one wing, grand shape and colour, in fine bloom; 2, 4, Garland, second larger, a good one, only beaten in colour, fourth lovely type, shade small; 3, Baker, good, a very close run; vhc, Dectle; hc, Asher; c, Parrish. BUFF (9): This was the best class of buffs for the three shows; 1, Staples, clear, a gem, just what is wanted in a Plainhead, should with a good moult take a deal of beating; 2, c, Garland, varicgated, another gem, splendid substance, in fine condition, close run with winner; 3, vhc, hc, Baker, ticked neck, lovely quality, rather on small side; 4, Deetle, good bird, only a wee bit long; No. 4, unnoticed (Parrish), looks like a yellow, if so, should do Mr. P. some good. CREST (14): 1, 2, vhc, French, first variegated, a gem, large crest, lovely centre and feather, grand formation, well to tip of beak, a good moult should make this a stormer, second variegated, same stamp as winner, perfect model, not a feather out of place, fails to winner in length of front, a good second; 3, c, Hobbs, heavily-marked hen, nice round crest, lovely feather and droop, a little too far gone, three weeks previously would have won, fourth good all round Crest, longest front in class, a trifle weak at sides or would have been higher; hc, c, Barage. CRESTBRED (16): 1, Ryder, lightly-marked cock, a gem, shown to perfection, lovely cushion skull, extra good entrance, feather beyond tip of beak, well up in size, will take a lot of beating; 2, Ryder, another from same aviary, fails only to winner in feather and entrance, a good second; 3, Hobbs, a green, well up in size, good entrance and feather, fails to winners in shape of skull, well shown; 4, Haskell, extra good in feather, fair size, rather poor in head properties; vhc, Brenton; hc, c, Avent. These were the best classes of Crest and Crestbreds ever seen at W.C.O.S. shows, and speak well for the Crest Fancy in the West. A.O.V. (1) 1, Pope, about the best Cinnamon ever shown at these shows, we hear there is every probability of more fanciers taking up this variety in the near future. MULE (DARK) (4): 1, 2, 3, Rapson, dark Goldfinch-Canary, first excels in size; 4, Wills, also Gold.-Canary. GOLD. AND BULLFINCH (3): 1, Snell, cage moulted Bullfinch, wins for the third time, a grand exhibit; 2, Brenton, Goldfinch, very nice blaze, might be larger. LINNET, ETC. (4): 1, Pridhome, one of the best Linnets in the West of England; 2, Wills; 3, Large. A.O.V. SEEDEATER (5): 1, 2, Snell, former a really grand Chaffinch, in splendid bloom, second Yellow Bunting, remarkably steady; 3, Wills; 4, Pope, two large Greenfinches. SMALL FOR. (1): 1, Snell, pair Java Sparrows.

HEYWOOD.

The first Young Bird Show in connection with the Heywood C.B.S. was held at the Central Dining Rooms, on July 20th, and proved a great success, 70 birds being staged. The committee were congratulated by many leading fanciers from other districts who paid a visit during the afternoon, and, as showing the interest taken in the Fancy by the public of the town, over 300 paid for admission throughout the afternoon. Many splendid birds were shown. Mr. Richard Schofield secured the special for the best bird in the show, bred by the exhibitor with yellow Yorkshire—a splendid bird. Mr. R. Barrass judged, and gave entire satisfaction. LIZARDS: 1, Dewhurst; 2, Livsey. CRESTBRED: 1, 2, Ogden. YELL. YORKS.: 1, 4, spl, Schofield; 2, hc, Pregnall; 3, Taylor; vhc, Livsey. CIVIL SERVICE F.A.

Young Bird Show at Ye Old Bell, Nohle-street, E.C., July 16th. The entries were not large, due, no doubt, to the bad breeding season. On the whole the quality of the exhibits was good. The members wish to tender their best thanks to Mr. J. S. Clarke, who kindly undertook the duties of judge, also to the host who placed the room at their disposal. Mr. Barton exhibited some grand Lizards, one of which claimed the special for best Canary in show. The awards were received with general satisfaction.

CREST OR C.B.: 1, 2, 3, vhc, Dobin, the winner a Crestbred. YORKS.: 1, hc, Russell, a marked buff of excellent shape and feather, nice size; 2, vhc, Smith, the former a wing marked buff of rich quality and close feather, not so large as winner; 3, c, Watson, bit rough, commenced to moult. A.O.V. CANARY: 1, spl for best Canary, 2, Barton, two promising Lizards; 3, vhc, Wheeler, also Lizards. BRIT. GOLDFINCH: 1, spl for best British, Voss; 2, Smith; 3, Slattery. A.O.V.: 1, vhc, Slattery, former a Siskin, latter a Mealy Redpoll; 2, 3, Watson, Lesser Redpolls.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

Members' Nest-Feather Show, held 17th July. Judge, Mr. G. E. Russell. The entries in the Norwich section were not numerous, many of the exhibits, however, being exceptionally good. Mr. Eckersley secured four firsts, also special for best yellow and special for best buff, with a very fine team. Birds of much merit were also shown by Messrs. Broadhurst and Silvers. The Crest class contained some very fine birds, particularly the winner shown by Mr. Harvey, one of the best youngsters seen in this district for some time, heavily marked, with a very large crest drooping from a small, well-placed centre. Mr. A. J. Smith was second with a broken Green possessing a neat, well-shaped crest; the third prize winner, belonging to Mr. Broadhurst, was a very taking evenly-marked bird, with a well-formed crest. Competition was keen in the Crestbred section, Mr. Ingram winning with a saddle-marked bird, very dense and long in head feather; Mr. A. J. Smith came second with a very fine Green; Mr. Harvey third with a bird possessing a large well-formed body, not quite so good, however, in head feather as the leaders. The Yorkshire classes were the best filled in the show, the quality all through being very even and competition very keen. Mr. J. H. Allen secured the special for best yellow with a bird ticked on head, very typical in shape, grand quality, best Yorkshire in the show, the same exhibitor winning in the class for clear yellows with a bird of high merit. Mr. Paddock took the special for best buff with a marked bird of very good position; he also secured first in the clear buff class with an exhibit of grand type and quality of feather. The exhibits of Messrs. Richardson, Sutton, Collier and Burke all deserve special mention, being birds showing good all-round Yorkshire properties. Only one entry was made in the Mule class, a fine dark jonque Goldfinch and Canary exhibited by Mr. Broadhurst. The Novice class mustered three exhibits, Mr. Flint winning with a yellow Cinnamon-marked Yorkshire.

FALMOUTH AND DIS. C.B.A.

First Nest Feather Show, held in the Oddfellows' Hall, Falmouth, on July 19th. There was a capital entry, 11 classes with over 70 birds. Three medals were given for the three best birds. The first went to a clinking buff Norwich, the property of Mr. J. Johnson, and one that should be heard of again after the moult; the second went to a really good buff Cinnamon, bred by Mr. J. T. Trerise, which is a credit to its owner; the other to a beautifully spangled Starling, a well-known winner, the property of Mr. J. Mitchell. The Britishers were a fairly good lot, the winning Bullfinch being a little out of condition, going into moult. The Foreigners were an eye-opener—such a splendid assortment was never staged before in Cornwall. Mr. William Medlin, of Falmouth, judged with his usual ability.

NOR. YELL.: 1, 3, J. T. Trerise; 2, vhc, J. Johnson; vhc, T. Burton; c, Cowan. BUFF: 1, J. Johnson; 2, 3, Burton; vhc, hc, Trerise. VAR., ETC.: 1, 2, Johnson; 3, Burton; vhc, Cowan. CINN. WINDHILL, SHIPLEY & DIS. O.S.

First Feather Show, held at the Blue Bell Hotel, on July 13th. Mr. J. Wilman placed the cards, and gave every satisfaction. Mr. H. H. Tower's winning yellow is a bird of grand length, well on leg, full of quality and no doubt it will be heard of again after the moult; it is a credit to its breeder. Mr. J. Chippendale's buff was a bird of good position and length—keep it up, Joe! The winning ticked yellow and ticked buff belonging to that old veteran, Mr. E. B. Denton, were staged to perfection, and both birds found many admirers. They possess grand length, are well up on leg and full of bloom. We always find this vetcran stage true Yorkies.

PRAZE.

Second annual Show, held in a marquee in the Recreation Ground on July 17th. There was a very fair entry, considering that only three classes were provided. The Society would do well to put one or two more classes on next year. The special for best bird in the show fell to Mr. F. Collins' well-known six-pointed Mule, staged to perfection. The Hon. Sec., Mr. H. T. Edwards, had everything well in hand. Mr. W. C. Rodda was the judge, and his awards gave satisfaction.

CAN., A.V.: 1, res., Hosking, yellow Yorkshire, good colour, neat head, lengthy body, little too stout, res., buff Yorkshire, nice length and carriage, good condition; 2, 3, Collins, yellow Scotch, good style and carries tail well under perch, fair shoulders, third Crestbred, green, plenty of feather, good skull; vhc, Arthur, buff Norwich, good shape, moulting; hc, Edwards; c, Baragwaneth. GOLDFINCH: 1, 3, Hosken, good size, nice blaze and buttons, third nice tanning and shape, flights of one wing gone; 2, Collins, not so large, all there for colour and markings. A.O.V.: 1 spl, 2, Collins, six-point Goldie Mule, splendid markings, size and colour, and Goldie-Bullie, good blaze, rich and bright; 3, Miss Rowe, King Parrot, very bright, in good feather; res, Arthur, Yellow Bunting, good colour and markings.

BEDFORD.

The second Nest Feather Show was held on July 18th. There was not a large number of birds shown, but the quality was of a very high order, the winners especially being very typical and teeming with quality. Mr. J. C. Wilmot judged. YELL. NOR. 1, Keech, charming bird, short in flights and tail, excellent body properties and rich colour; 2, Osborn, nicely made, bit longer; 3, Gentle, another good one, similar to second. BUFF. NOR.: 1, c, Markham, really very fine bird throughout, head, wings, chest, neck and colour all there, only fault a bit wild; 2, Corrie, beaten only in substance of body; 3, Osborn, well made bird; vhc, hc, Keech. MARKED NOR.: 1, vhc, Keech, lovely ticked bird, just the stamp we like, not very big, but rare type and quality; 2, 3, Markham, both marked birds, not much between them, short, cobby, excellent colour and condition, hardly the quality of winner; hc, Osborn; c, Gentle. VARIETY (1): 1, Osborn, bonny buff Mule, if moulted right should be heard of again.

LEYTON.

Formed only some six months ago, the Leyton C.B.A. has jumped right into the front rank of Metropolitan societies, and its show on July 20th was the largest held in the London suburbs this season, whilst the attendance was splendid. Never before have we seen such a large proportion of ladies amongst the visitors to a Metropolitan cage bird show. The society now musters sixty-five members, and possesses an executive which seems keenly alive to the possibilities of a strong up-to-date society in North-East London, and is determined to push it for all it is worth. Mr. F. Williamson is the chairman, Mr. C. Carr the vice-chairman, and they are supported by a committee which include such ornithological enthusiasts as Messrs. A. J. Marley, C. H. Cooper, A. B. Forse, R. Mien, J. A. Bartlett, A. Morris, F. R. Handscombe, and E. Morris. The Treasurer is Mr. H. Ovenden, whilst Mr. B. F. Forse, with the assistance of Mr. H. W. Burbidge attends to the secretarial duties. The Leyton C.B.A. is indeed well manned and thoroughly equipped for a long and, we hope, most successful voyage. The first show was indeed an eye-opener to those who saw it. The entries numbered just over 150, the highest total attained by any suburban show this season, whilst the quality was well in keeping with the numbers. In the champion section Mr. C. Carr captured the special for the best Norwich with a grandly shaped, close feathered yellow, a bird that should come out well after the moult. Mr. Cooper also put down a grand team of Norwich, and his wiuning buff was a bird of nice character. In Yorksbires Mr. A. B. Forse repeated his Walthamstow successes, and with a nice racy lot of birds. Mr. Forse likes to see a bit of breed in his birds; he is no lover of the thick necked 'uns one so often sees down south. In the novices evidently lies the strength of the association at present, for both in numbers and merit was the novice section superior to the champion. In the four Norwich classes over sixty exhibits were staged, and amougst them many that would not disgrace any show. The most successful exhibitor was Mr. A. J. Marley, who strongly followed up his North London and Walthamstow successes with a team of most typical birds, all excelling in the three great essentials of a good Norwich—type, quality, and colour—whilst the manner in which every member of the team was staged reflects the highest credit upon their owner. In clear yellows Mr. Roberts came second and third to Mr. Marley with two big bouncing birds, but not quite so short behind as the leader. In buffs Mr. Marley was first and second, but we much fancied Mr. Mein's third, the Walthamstow winner of the previous week, a most charming exhibit all round, and with rather a better shaped skull than the leaders. Mr. Williamson's second variegated yellow is a very pretty bird. It carries nice wing marking, but is a bit blotchy on the eyes. Mr. Vincent's third was not quite so stout, but a grandly feathered bird. In variegated buffs Mr. Handscombe got home with a rather heavily marked bird possessing plenty of size and colour, but it was not quite so neat in shape as Mr. Marley's dark tailed bird, which was admired so much at Walthamstow the week previous. A bird we liked very much indeed was Mr. Griffin's third in this class. It was indeed a most bonny little fellow, so neat and smart. In the Yorkshires the Forses were a force, and although they did not capture all the spoil, and missed the chief award, they staged some very smart birds. Mr. F. A. Forse's yellow, which came second, and his eye and neck marked bird, which was third, are two of the best Yorkshires we have seen at a London show this season. They are Yorkshires in shape and feather, and possess plenty of style and swagger. The special for the best Yorkshire and best novice exhibit fell to a very long clear yellow of Mr. Burbidge's, but we are afraid it will not repeat its success, it being a bit too heavy in body. It should, however, for its length and style alone, make a most valuable stock bird. In the buffs Mr. Cobley won with a lovely feathered bird, of nice style and type, but had Mr. Smith's second been in little better fettle the awards might have been reversed. Mr. B. F. Forse made a clean sweep of the variegated class with a splendid team. Mr. Dickenson put down a very useful variegated Crestbred and a clear bodied dark Crest, whilst Mr. Marley wound up his successes in this section by going "nap" with three very smart Greenfinch-Canary Mules. Some very nice exhibits were staged in the British section, in which Mr. Marley followed up his recent successes with a team of capital birds, put down in rare fettle. Messrs. Cooper, Taylor, Carr, Ovenden, Vincent, Williamson, and Leclair also staged birds of much merit. The arrangements were splendid. Mr. Forse and his committee carried out their duties in first-class style. Mr. J. Robson judged, and his awards were generally well received.

BURTON-ON-TRENT.

The above Society held its First Nest Feather Show and British birds on July 13th. There were 55 entries; considering that the Society has only been formed a little over a month, and the very bad breeding season we have experienced, this was considered very satisfactory. Mr. J. H. Drakeley, of Derby, judged, and his awards gave every satisfaction.

OXFORD.

The First Summer Show was held on July 18th, when nearly 100 cage birds put in an appearance, consequently competition was very keen. Mr. Stephen Salter, F.R.I.B.A., judged.

NOR.: 1, spl, 2, Lewin, good all round buff leading, carries exquisite bloom, 2nd, close up; 3, Lees, ticked yellow, extra good colour, not enough substance. YORKS.: 1, Lewin, very rich coloured yellow, slim and upstanding, has tendeney to cross tips of wings at times; 2, Hawes, ticked buff, not quite as clean as he might have been, shade coarse, but good carriage; 3, Yeltow, not so good in feather or quality, fancy has Belgian blood in him. A.O.V. CAN. OR LIGHT MULE: A good class; 1, spl, 2, Lees, slightly marked head and wing Goldie Mules, very rich in colour, and good Goldfinch character, second fails in colour; 3, Levett, rich coloured youngster, head and one wing marked, should greatly improve. A.V. CAN. (1907): 1, 2, Benthin, large baby Norwich winning, will make a good bird, followed by a splendid quality wing marked bird, would have beeu first, but at time of judgiug was thick; 3, Lewin, good stamp, may make up later. DARK MULE: A strong class; 1, 2, spl, Levett, a very fine specimen of Linnet-Bullie, good enough to win anywhere, second good Goldie-Greenfinch, splendid colour and Goldfinch character; 3, White, another Greenie-Goldfinch, good condition, but insipid colour. BRIT. GOLDFINCH: 1, Levett, large bird, square blaze and plenty of it, going well back; 2, White, perfect quality, but smaller; 3, Levett, almost equally good. BULLFINCH: 1, White, in perfect condition, more shape, good colour, wins easily; 2, 3, Levett, in equal condition, but smaller. CHAFFINCH, ETC.: 1, 2, 3, Levett, Bramble in beautiful feather, a Palace winner I think, second good steady yellow Greenfinch, sleek and waxlike condition, third grand steady Chaffinch. A.O.V. HARDBILL: 1, 2, Levett, splendid Hawfinch, would have had special but tail not quite grown, second Yellowhammer, wonderfully tame, superb colour and plumage; 3, White, good Siskin. FOR. 1, Holliday, grand Blue-fronted Amazon, lovely condition; 2, Wilson, an exceptionally beautiful pair of Waxbills; 3, another Amazon Parrot, but, I fancy, a hen.

WALLSEND.

Nest Feather Show, held in the Station Hotel, July 20th. There were about 70 entries, which were nicely staged in a comfortable room, admirably suited for the purpose. Secretary Evans had all in order, and the awards were promptly put up. Mr. T. Robson judged.

NOR. YELL.: 1, McGuin, good colour and shape, nice wing carriage; 2, Taylor, not so cobby, nice quality; 3, Ronald, good bird, close up. BUFF: 1, Ronald, good body, tight feather, nice size; 2, Taylor, very typical, smaller; 3, McGuin, larger bird, close up; vhc, No. 8, might have been higher, but was unsteady when judging. MKD.: 1, Ronald, large capped yellow, nice quality and colour; 2, Harking, buff marked nice short bird, loses head; 3, Hopkinson, capped yellow, good colour and condition, feather nips in back of skull. YORKS. YELL.: 1, Cockburn, nice length and quality, well braced wings, 2, Heddon, stylish exhibit, close up; 3, Taylor. BUFF: 1, Crawhall, nice style, well braced wings; 2, Heddon, stylish exhibit, close up; good wings, pipe tail; 3, Taylor, larger, not so shapely. MKD.: 1, Heddon, nice slim bird, good wings and tail; 2, Cockburn, not so tight in feather; 3, Taylor, heavier build, rather loose in feather. BOR. YELL.: 1, Ronald, smart little bird, jaunty; 2, Johnson, larger, nice style, good wings and tail; 3, Simpson, good bird, plucked. BUFF: 1, 2, Ronald, both neat and stylish; 3, Hopkinson, larger bird, head a bit long. MKD.: 1, Simpson, even marked wings, very neat; 2, McGuin, better wing carriage, close up; 3, Johnson, not quite so smart. CREST: 1, Macdonald, very niee youngster. CREST-BRED: 1, 2, Crawhall, very promising. CINN.: 1, Crawhall, very large bird, rather loose in feather; 2, 3, Appleby, second nice yellow, rather small, but A1 quality, third nice buff. A.O.V.: 1, Heslop, very good Silver Lizard, nice cap and spangle. MULE: 1, Evans, yellow Greenfinch-Canary, grand rich colour, good size, will make a good one; 2, Craig, crested Goldie-Canary; 3, Taylor, large Linnet-Canary, very nice Mule, but wild at present. The cup was won by Mr. W. Ronald.

CHOPPINGTON.

First Nest Feather Show, held at Railway Hotel, Choppington, on July 20th, when some very promising youngsters were staged. Mr. Thomas Dixon judged, and his awards gave general satisfaction.

NOR. YELL.: 1, 2, Woollett; 3, Baker. BUFF: 1, Woollett; 2, Baker; 3, Seely. BOR. YELL.: 1, 2, Smith and Beveridge. BUFF: 1, Baker; 2, Peel. A.O.V.: 1, Woollett, nice Cinnamon; 2, Storey, good even marked Border; 3, Suty, Yorkshire.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when liens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

PAISLEY.

Paisley and District Norwich, Mule, British, and Foreign Bird Club held their First Feather Show on July 13th in Painters' Halls. There was a good turn out of birds. The judges were Mr. J. Sinclair for Norwich and Borders; Mr. T. McCulloch, Crests; Mr. P. Wylie, Mules.

CREST: 1, spl, Skonce, fine, big bird, plenty of head feather; 2, McLerie, not in quite such good order; 3, W. Elliott. CREST HEN: 1, Bonnar, grand bird, should be heard of soon; 2, Skonce; 3, W. Elliott. C.B. COCK: 1, Bonnar, good entrance; 2, Cowan; 3, Wylie. C.B. HEN: 1, spl best bird in hall, Skonce, grand bird, should take a lot of beating at open shows; 2, Bonnar; 3, Hutchison. NOR. BUFF: 1, Cowan, fine chubby bird; 2, O'Hare; 3, Skonce. HEN: 1, Potts, good substance, should do its owner some good later on; 2, O'Hare; 3, McLerie. YELL.: 1, Skonce; 2, Laidlaw; 3, Guthrie. YELL. HEN: 1, Potts; 2, Laidlaw; 3, Duff. BORDERS: 1, 2, Hutchinson; 3, McNair. MULES: 1, 3, A. Elliott, the first bird should moult a good one; 2, Tees, must have given the judge some trouble to find the first. D. O'Hare won the novice special.

CLAPHAM AND DIS. C.B.A.

The first annual Young Bird Show was held at headquarters, the Alexandra Hotel, Clapham Common, on July 17th, and proved a most gratifying success. The Association has a very comfortable and suitable room in which to hold its fixtures, and the exhibits were tastefully arranged therein, and greatly admired by the numerous gathering of members and bird-loving friends assembled to give this, the latest of London's societies, a rousing send-off for its shows. The great success of the affair reflects much credit on the hon. secretary, Mr. S. Baker, a courteous and able official, in whose possession the Association has cause for self-congratulation, it being evident that under his care the prosperity of the society, now rapidly growing, is assured. He is fortunate in being backed up by many enthusiastic fanciers, among those who rendered invaluable assistance on this occasion being that "old warhorse," Mr. W. H. Vale, and Messrs. Berkshire, Cutting, Honeysett, and Francis. We understand an autumn show is under contemplation, and the Clapham C.B.A. should succeed in making it a thorough success, in view of the go-ahead methods adopted by the executive. The quality in the Canary section was excellent, some clinking young Norwich Plainheads being staged by Messrs. Hathaway, Berkshire, and Vale (champions), Tutty, Willis Browne, Morris and Baker and Gooch (novice). The special for best Canary in the show fell to Mr. Hathaway's winning clear, a bonny bird, quickly claimed at catalogue price. Some very fair novice Yorks. were staged by Messrs. Lucas, Clark, and Cutting, a small, yet typical buff (which we took to be a hen), shown by the first-named exhibitor, capturing the section special. Mr. Honeysett had out a few pleasing Border Fancies. The great feature of the show, however, was the British and Foreign bird section, a fact which will be readily appreciated when we state that such noted names as Maxwell, Frostick, Vale, Francis, and Hathaway were to be found in the catalogue. A Linnet shown by Mr. Maxwell secured the rare distinction (for this species) of special for best Britisher, and we were not inclined to quarrel with the decision, it being a bird of remarkable colour and polish, with both size and wealth of pencilling, and lovely shape and style. The Finches throughout were a hot lot, in splendid form considering the season of the year. Mr. Cutting's winning Twite is a rare good one, albeit inclined to carry overmuch fat. Mr. Francis was very successful in the A.O.V. Finch class, taking the three leading cards. The insectivorous class was headed by a remarkably steady Nightingale, a good all-round specimen owned by Mr. Beard. In the Foreign class, Mr. Maxwell put down a trio of beautiful exhibits, pairs of Varied Tanagers, Blue-breasted Waxbills, and a Fire Finch. The judges were Messrs. F. Easterling (Canaries), and A. Silver (the remainder), and their awards seemed to give entire satisfaction. The special winners were Messrs. Browne, Hathaway, Lucas, Honeysett, Sexton, Maxwell (5), Beard (2), Cutting, Francis, and Berkshire.

GWENNAP.

The Gwennap Horticultural Society held its Annual Show on July 18th in the beautiful grounds of "Trevince," a splendid place for a show, kindly lent by R. B. Beauchamp, Esq. An excellent entry turned up, and there were some good birds staged, considering the moulting season is so close at hand. The exhibits were staged to the best advantage, and made a grand display. The winning yellow Norwich, full of quality and type, found many admirers, and with a good moult should be heard of again. The group class, for birds bred 1907, contained some typical birds, the winners being a good lot of Crests and Crestbreds, closely followed by a splendid lot of Norwich of grand type and feather. The Yorks. were very neat, being of nice feather and position. The yellow taking the special for best Yorks. was in good trim, and had lovely quality of feather. The Mule classes were good, the same as we commented on at Redruth. The British were very good, some lovely Goldies being staged. The Foreign classes contained some fine specimens, a splendid white Cockatoo and a Gou'dian Finch, each first in its own class, being in rare fettle. The special for most points was won by Mr. F. Collins, with 85 points. Mr. R. T. Richards, the able and obliging secretary, did everything possible to ensure the success of the show, and he received splendid assistance from the excellent committee in Messrs. Bailey, Woolcock, Rickard, Jackson, Carbis, and Hooper. Mr. W. Medlyn, Falmouth, judged, and his awards gave every satisfaction. NOR. YELL. (5): 1, spl, Lawry, splendid type, colour and quality, in fine form; 2, Trevena, warm and level in colour, nicely polished, good type; 3, Rickard, good colour and feather, shade longer; vhc, Davies, good colour and carriage; hc, Collins. TKD. YELL. (2): 1, Trevena, ticked neck, good shape, full of quality, nicely mealed; 2, Lawry, marked neck, wings and eye; good condition. BUFF (6): 1, Trevena, good type, lovely head and neck, good quality of feather; 2, Davies, good colour and quality, might be a little stouter; 3, hc, Sherman, good shape, patchy in colour; vhc, Ferrill, splendid type and quality, we made worth second. BUFF TICK (5): 1, 3, Ferrill, grizzled head, nice head and neck, good type, third marked head, good shape, badly in moult; 2, Rickard, marked eye and wings, good shape and quality, wants tightening up. CREST and C.B. (3): 1, spl, Davies, marked head and wings, good skull and lashing; 2, 3, Collins, dark crest, well centred, good droop, third green C.B., fair skull and lashing, in rare fettle. CINNAMON (3): 1, Trerise, good yell., pure colour, well burnished, good shape; 2, Burton, larger yell., but a bit rough; 3, Rickard, good buff, not so large, but good shape and quality. GROUP BRED 1907 (5): 1, Collins, Crests and Crestbreds, plenty of feather and size, with nice Crests and good skulls, will make good birds; 2, Rickard, Nor., good type and size, nice quality of feather, some good ones; 3, Sherman, Nor., fair type; vhc, Ferrill, very neat lot of Nor., with a good moult will be heard of again; hc, Carbis. YORK. YELL. TICK. (8): 1, spl, Webb, clear, in grand trim, good style and position, grand colour; 2, Boak, variegated, very nice, typical bird, stands well; 3, c, Wills, neat bird, fine length well drawn; vhc, Oatey, good wing carriage and condition; hc, Lobb, neat bird. HARROGATE C.B.S.

First Feather Show on July 20th. The entries totalled about 90, and averaged slightly over eight per class, which was considered very favourable. The quality throughout was excellent. The clear buff and yellow ticked shown by Mr. A. Veitch were splendid youngsters, teeming with quality, the best of position, were a credit to their owner, and with a good moult should be heard of again. The yellow Cinnamon marked shown by Mr. W. E. Fergusson, marked head and both wings, was a bird full of merit, teeming with quality, well up on leg, showing the true character of a Yorkshire; it should moult out well. The British class had some very fine specimens in it. The winner was the noted Greenfinch, shown to perfection, closely followed by a fine Goldie. Mr. J. W. Barrett judged, and his awards were very well received. No grumbling was heard, which speaks well.

HORFIELD 18th Annual Show of POULTRY, PIGEONS Rabbits, Cats, Cavies, and Cage Birds.

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 7th, 1907,

Judges: Poultry, G. Doble; Show Homers, W. Austin; Workers, H. J. Taylor; remainder, A. Leith; Fur, T. J. Ambrose; Cage Birds, C. P. Telling. Nearly 100 Specials and £10 10s. Challenge Cup for Show Homers. ENTRIES CLOSE JULY 27th.

Schedules and Entry Forms from C. Shipp, Hon. Sec., 55, Berkeley Road, Bishopton, Bristol.

Entries for Brislington have been extended till Monday next, July 29th.

Carlisle C.B.A. and the Seaham Harbour C.B.B.A. have both decided to join the C.B.U.

In report of Mansfield Woodhouse you credit C. L. Hare with 1st and 2nd in Canary bred in 1907. I took 2nd and reserve.—J. MORRIS.

Thanks for Annual, Part II. It's what I expected from CAGE BIRDS—good.—J. M. NICHOLSON, Hon. Sec. Seaham Harbour C.B.B.A.

All prize money has now been paid in connection with the Queen's Park and Dis. C.B.A. First Feather Show, which was a great success financially.—J. C. BIRCH, Hon. Sec.

Will you please state that all communications for the Baildon Original Cage Bird Fanciers' Association should be addressed to me?—S. HAITHWAITE, 2, Binswell Fold, Baildon, near Shipley.

The date of the Show of the Kent County Cage Bird Association (confined to the County of Kent) has been altered from October 2nd and 3rd to the 30th and 31st. Mr. Geo. Gardner will judge.—GEO. SANDERSON, Hon. Sec.

It is now time to put birds on colour food, so that their blood may become fully charged with colour before they moult. To obtain the best results at a minimum cost use Ramsden's pure peppers—the best on the market; fully guaranteed when sold in Ramsden's canisters. —ADVT.

Churchdown Show is under C.B.U. rules, and our worthy friend Mr. J. H. Payne is the judge. This was omitted by the Secretary in the advertisement. There are six classes for Canaries and four for British birds. I am doing all I can to get a good show.—S. W. BIRCHLEY.

Congratulations to our energetic confrere, Mr. J. B. Waterman, of Dulwich, upon winning a first for Yorkshires at Dulwich and Deptford Young Bird Shows. How this gentleman finds time, as a member of the staff of the Press Association, to look after his birds is a mystery to us.

Fanciers should make a point of attending the next meeting of the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S., on August 1st, when that successful breeder and exhibitor of Norwich, Mr. W. Morris, will lecture on "Colour Feeding." This ought to be specially interesting at this season of the year.

The Wolverhampton and District C.B.S. have engaged the Co-operative Hall for their open show on October 30th and 31st, writes Mr. F. Howes, the Hon. Sec., without a doubt the finest hall in the Midlands, being well lighted, free from draughts, and with a splendid system of heating if necessary. Visitors can be provided with teas, etc., on the premises.

The judges for the Scotch Fancy National Derby O.A. Show, on September 21st, are Messrs. Clark (Rutherglen), Hamilton (Caldercruix), Nisbet (Galston), and Paterson (Edinburgh). We are pleased to announce there is every prospect of an unprecedentedly successful show of young Scotch Canaries of the finest quality.—THOS. SMITH, Secretary.

We understand, in connection with Headington Show, that Mr. T. C. Levett (Oxford) went to a lot of trouble to get the prize money raised and to obtain the C.B.U. licence. "This Show comes on Bank Holiday, and," says Mr. Levett, "exhibitors need not be afraid to send, as, if they will drop me a post-card, I will meet birds at station with one of my vans and give them every attention Sunday, and see they are properly staged Monday. I make this offer as I should like to see a lot of cage birds turn up. Our prize money is 10s., 5s., 2s. 6d. We have a class for Norwich Plainhead, A.O.V. Canary or Mule, British Goldfinch, Bullfinch, A.O.V. Hardbill. A.V. Softbill." Mr. T. C. Levett's address is No. 69, The Market, High Street End, Oxford.

Wrens Ousted by Mice.

Out for a walk on the outskirts of the town the other evening (writes a Blackburn correspondent), I saw a mouse in a bank, and on making close examination found it was peeping out of a Wren's nest. Inside were five young mice, and on the ground as many Wren's eggs. The mice had clearly taken possession of the nest and turned out the eggs. Is not this "out of the common"?

Colour Food.

Messrs. Wrigglesworth and Son, the well-known avicultural specialists of York, have sent us a sample of the colour feed which they are sending out this season. From a careful scrutiny of the same, we may say that it is a capital preparation, being very rich, bright, and deep in colour, sweet to the taste, free from injurious matters, and should give much satisfaction to Messrs. Wrigglesworth's customers. It is a matter of much importance to users that the colour food should be the selection of a firm well versed in the requirements of the Fancy, and this qualification Messrs. Wrigglesworth most certainly possess, and those who entrust their orders to the well-known Yorkshire firm will, we think, receive the greatest satisfaction.

The many friends of that well-known South London fancier, Mr. Cordery, will regret to hear that at the present moment he is an inmate of St. Thomas's Hospital, suffering from an affection of the throat. We wish him a speedy recovery.

I see in report of Macclesfield Show Ticked Norwich Yellow reads: 1st, Cundiff; which should be Freeman, as I am the breeder and exhibitor of the bird. I cannot make out how it is Mr. Cundiff keeps getting the honour of my birds.—H. FREEMAN.

IMPORTANT.—All known diseases are overcome and further trouble avoided by frequently washing cages and inmates with diluted "Sanatene," post free 1s. (making 40 gallons), of manufacturers—Marine and General Oil and Chemical Co., Newcastle.—ADVT.

The Cambridge Bank Holiday Show is shockingly short of entries. At this fixture the cage birds have a tent all to themselves, a special set of stewards, good prize money, birds have only to be at the Show a few hours, and Mr. Jacob Mackley is to judge, so nothing will be wanting in that direction. Entries will be accepted up to Monday next.

"Bird Notes" for July is an interesting issue and well maintains the high standard which has been attained. The coloured plate of the Green-hilled Toucan is in Mr. Goodchild's best style, and is one of his happiest efforts. Some capital photographs of a Chaffinch, Wild Duck, and Song Thrush are also given; whilst the articles will afford pleasure and instruction to all privileged to scan them.

Remarkable Offer to Canary Fanciers.—1,000 cwts. of Canary grit to be given away to every purchaser of 1 cwt. of canary seed during July and August. We will give 1 cwt. of our celebrated Health Grit, absolutely free. Giant Spanish canary, 24s. per cwt.; No. 2 ditto, 22s.; Turkish, 14s.; all treble screened and free from dust. Sample on application, carriage paid; cash with order.—JOHN DIBB, seed importer, 31 and 33, White Abbey Road, Bradford. Telephone, 247x.—ADVT.

The breeding season has been very good about Newcastle district, with a few exceptions, and great enthusiasm prevails. I expect the Newcastle Society will be one of the best in the North—if not this season, before long. So writes Mr. Thos. Robson, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

Mr. F. Gordon writes us that the Sunderland C.B.S. First Feather Show was a big success, and that the prize money paid out averaged 5s. per class. Messrs. G. C. Russell and A. G. Cameron have been elected to judge the Annual Show on November 22nd and 23rd.

Mr. E. Taylor, of Leeds and Bradford, the well-known northern bird specialist, has gone in extensively of late years for dog appliances, combs, collars, etc., and his goods seem to have found great favour in doggy circles. Mr. Taylor makes a practice of visiting all the important agricultural shows in his district, and has special tents erected, where he does a good trade. On a visit to Bradford the other day, we were shown by Mr. Taylor over his up-to-date, commodious shop and bird rooms, and found everything in spick and span order. Though the stock of birds was not, naturally, at this time of year a very large one, some good specimens were still awaiting purchasers.

Messrs. Cooper Bros. (London, W.) write:—Thank you for the honour done us by depicting our young Buff Norwich (winner of silver cup for Best Bird in the Show at the City and Suburban Young Bird Show), on the front page of CAGE BIRDS. We consider the drawing to be a splendid representation of the bird in question, and great credit is due to your artist in his sketching of same. The bird itself was one of a nest of three, all of which are show birds, one of them taking 3rd prize in the A.O.V. class at the same show; but both the others improved during the following week. They took 1st and 2nd at the West London Young Bird Show the following Saturday, the 13th inst. We regret to say that the cup winner went queer after the City and Suburban Show, and is still in a critical condition; but we hope we shall not be unlucky enough to lose him.

English and Welsh Border Fancy Canary Club.

Election of Officers.

President, Mr. Parker Robinson, 17; Secretary and Treasurer, Mr. S. Hadwin, 23; auditors, Mr. J. S. Wilson, 17, Mr. W. J. Ferguson, 14. Committee—Liverpool District, Messrs. Clineh (5), Hadwin (1), Metcalfe (1), Jones (1). Messrs. Clinch and Hadwin, holding other offices, vacate Committee. Manchester—Drinkwater (3); Tweedmouth, Smart (1), Hay (1); Brecon, Morecambe, Carlisle and Gateshead, no vote; London, Brownlie (2); Sheffield, Robertson (1); Workington, Wilson (6), Lewthwaite (1), Pearson (1); Mr. Wilson, being auditor, vacates Committee. Barrow, Wagstaff (1); Swansea, D. Jenkins (2). Division—For, 16; against, 6. 24 papers received, one spoilt by votes being given for committee in each district.—F. CARL, Scrutineer.

(Secretaries desiring the initials of their Judges inserted, should forward same on at once.)

Messrs. J. Alexander Dobbie and Co. are well known to our readers as caterers for cage bird fanciers' specialities, but we gather from a couple of catalogues which have reached us from the enterprising Leith firm, that they do an enormous trade in poultry requisites. A glance through these catalogues has convinced us that Messrs. Dobbie and Co. are able to fit up a complete poultry plant installation and at a most reasonable price. Those of our readers who are interested in poultry should certainly send to Messrs. Dobbie for copies of their catalogues, Nos. 1 and 2, dealing, the former with incubators, rearers, houses, feeding utensils, etc., and the latter with grits, foods, and medicines, etc. The articles described in each are of the highest quality, and the prices most moderate.

OUR SPORTING OFFER.

Brockley, S.E.

See page 37.

C.B.U. Secretary Resigns.

We hear on good authority that Mr. G. W. F. Lythgoe has resigned the secretaryship of the Cage Bird Union, but are unable to verify same before going to press.

Thrush-Blackbird Hybrids.

According to the "Cheltenham Echo" of June 29th date, a male Thrush has paired with a Blackbird in the village of Harwood, near Bolton, and their nest contains four eggs, which are of the Blackbird type, with the ground colour a little paler blue. The authorities of Chadwick's Museum are said to be taking precautions to have the nest protected. The male bird watches over the eggs in the day, and the female in the night.

Another New British Bird.

At the last meeting of the British Ornithologists' Club, Dr. C. B. Ticehurst exhibited a fine male specimen of the Sardinian Warbler (Sylvia melanocephala), which had been shot on June 3rd of this year in a country lane near Hastings. Though this is the first time this species—which is common along the Mediterranean—has been obtained in Great Britain, the present record causes no surprise among ornithologists, since it is a common species in the South of France and the Peninsula. So long ago as 1899, indeed, Mr. Howard Saunders, in the second edition of his "Manual of British Birds," remarked that there was "not the least improbability of this bird occurring in the British Isles."

A Hunter of Birds of Paradise.

Mr. Walter Goodfellow, the well-known ornithologist and zoological explorer, has recently returned to this country with a fine collection of birds from New Guinea. After his explorations in Central Formosa, Mr. Goodfellow proceeded to Humboldt's Bay, on the north coast of New Guinea, mainly with the object of obtaining living examples of Birds of Paradise. The natives, however, proved to be but poor bird-catchers, and were not very friendly. After leaving North-west New Guinea, he visited the Aru Islands, and remained there four months, during which time he procured many living pairs of the King Bird of Paradise, a species which is being rapidly exterminated.

A Tasty Beverage.

A sample packet of "Eiffel Tower Lemonade" has reached us from the proprietors, and been duly tested. We have no hesitation in describing it as a thoroughly suitable and delectable beverage, especially grateful as a thirst-quencher during the summer months. Considering that the purity of the ingredients is guaranteed by the manufacturers, it is remarkably cheap, a 4½d. packet making two gallons of delicious lemonade, this low figure being possible only as the result of the large sale its merits have brought it. Readers desiring an agreeable temperance drink should certainly give "Eiffel Tower Lemonade" a trial, and they will be well pleased. It is also sold in 1s. size (containing three times the quantity) and 2s. 6d. size (eight times the quantity), and may be had from all grocers, etc. Sample 1d. packets can also be obtained from all retailers.

An Alleged Infringement.

On page 587 of CAGE BIRDS, July 6th last, appeared an illustrated idea, No. 116. About this we hear as follows from Mr. W. Rudd, of Norwich:—"If ever there was a piece of impertinent copying this is one. The door, you will see, is absolutely my patent. It is inconceivable that the sender of this idea, for which you have presumably paid 2s. 6d., has never seen the bold illustrations that have appeared in CAGE BIRDS of my patent breeding cage." We have written to the sender and asked him for an explanation, and will defer comment till we hear from him.

Since penning the above we have received Mr. Watson's reply, which is as follows:—In reply to yours of 15th, I have to state that I was quite unaware of how Rudd's cage worked, not having seen one. All I saw was a small illustration of a cage in a catalogue of Rudd's, but it showed nothing of the working arrangements; so that if my idea is similar to Rudd's it must be a mere coincidence.

FORTUNES IN BIRDS.

ENGLISHMEN WANTED.

Do the Germans hold the American Trade?

Fabulous Profits to be Made.

The other morning Mr. Hanslmair, of Chicago, gave CAGE BIRDS a call, and in the course of conversation with him we found that the bird Fancy, as we know it, has practically no existence in the United States. There are hundreds of thousands of bird lovers, said Mr. Hanslmair, but of fancying there is none. This, we gathered from our informant, is due, he thinks, not so much because our American cousins are not so fond of birds as Englishmen, but to the fact that, being a more hustling, bustling race, Americans know not the meaning of home and home pets as do Englishmen. Some readers of CAGE BIRDS will learn with surprise that in many of the States it is an offence to keep any wild bird, and that the birds which are kept are imported, and often their owners are called upon by the authorities to produce their receipts from the dealers to show that the birds they own are imported, and not home-bred, and even then sometimes the authorities open the cages and let them all fly.

The birds which are most largely imported are German Canaries, Pek'n Robins, Java Sparrows, English Goldfinches, Linnets and Siskins, which are imported in thousands, one consignment of 10,000 Goldfinches having only gone to New York a few days since. Bullfinches are not very popular, except trained birds, which cost about 25 dollars each; untrained ones cost about 12 dollars per dozen wholesale. The wholesale selling price of Goldfinches is five dollars each, Linnets three dollars, and Siskins the same.

So far as Canaries are concerned, the Germans hold the fort, and Rollers cost from five dollars up, ordinary Germans—known there as Hartz Mountain Canaries—are sold for three dollars upwards. Few English Canaries are imported, and only once in San Francisco has Mr. Hanslmair seen them; and there a pair of Lizards sold for 100 dollars (£20 16s. 8d.). Mr. Hanslmair is of opinion that, if some enterprising Englishman would enter into the trade, English Canaries could be made popular in America, although thus far it is for song and not appearances that Americans love Canaries. Those who keep them spend fabulous sums on cages for their pets. Our visitor told us that in England we had no conception of the elaborately beautiful and expensively palatial cages which are seen in the States.

Many people indulge in the hobby of bird-keeping in an extensive manner by keeping birds in large aviaries, especially in California, which State, in his opinion, contains a larger number of aviculturists than any other. In the other States bird-keeping is at a discount.

One gentleman, a doctor, known to Mr. Hanslmair, had imported £3,000 worth of English Goldfinches, Siskins and Linnets into Oregon, and when they arrived gave them their liberty, with the idea of increasing the bird life of the State.

America, according to Mr. Hanslmair, is not rich in bird life, except in the South and California, the principal birds being the Red Bird (known to us as the Virginian Nightingale), the Wild Canary (which is really more like our English Siskin), the Mocking Bird, and the Linnet.

One remark which fell from the lips of our visitor interested, astonished, and yet pleased us at one and the same time. In America, he told us, the trade in birds is confined almost exclusively to Germans. In New York there is only one Englishman engaged in the trade, and he is the only English bird dealer Mr. Hanslmair has met with in any of the States. But the fame of that Englishman is great, and he worthily upholds the British character for honest trading, for he is known to bird lovers throughout the States as "the Honest Bird Man," and so great is his reputation that people will take his word or recommendation without the slightest hesitation. If "the Honest Bird Man" has said so and so, that is good enough, and his word is never questioned.

Mr. Hanslmair gave it to us as his opinion that if an enterprising Englishman, with a practical knowledge of the trade and desire to please his patrons, opened up business in New York, he could make a fortune in a very little time. The Americans make their money easily and spend it freely. When an American is interested in any hobby, he does not stop to think of the cost, but gratifies and satisfies his desire at any price. As an instance, Mr. Hanslmair told us of 150 dollars (£31) being given for a Nightingale, which died soon after; and the owner immediately went and bought another at an increased price, simply because he would have a Nightingale better than anyone else.

One thing Mr. Hanslmair cannot understand, and that is why English people, who are so fond of birds, should also be so devoted to cats. Bird lovers in America hate the name of cat, and he has been greatly astonished to find cats and birds dwelling in the same house in England.

I have had 19 eggs out of three rounds with one pair of Norwich, and the hen has hatched 13 young; nine on the perches are doing well, and three are still in the nest.—J. W. POWLEY (Grangetown.)

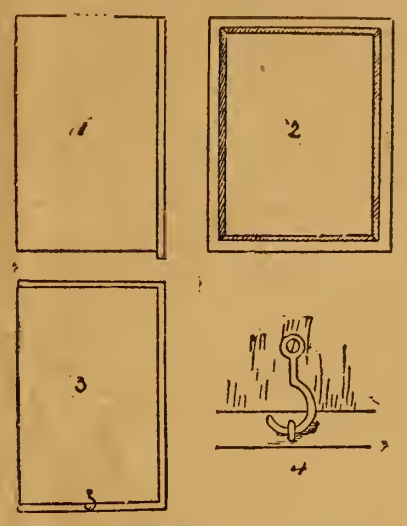
ILLUSTRATED IDEAS



Under this heading we shall illustrate weekly some idea useful to the bird-keeper. Readers are invited to send us particulars of any novel and practical appliance of use in our hobby, either in cage, bird-room or aviary, with a rough sketch of same where possible. Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

REMOVABLE BOTTOMS FOR CAGES.

Sent by G. A. Semple, Millerfield Place, Hamilton.

I am sending a sketch of how I make removable bottoms for my cages. I find them very useful and handy, and very simple. When you are making your cages let the back of them be a little longer at the bottom (the thickness of the wood), as in Fig. 1. Fit in the bottom and put a small eye in the centre at each end, corresponding with a small hook at each end of the cage, as seen in Figs. 2 and 4. These small hooks and eyes do not cost much. When you have got the bottom clasped on get strips of wood about ¼ in square and fit them inside the cage, close up to the back, front and ends, nail them to the bottom, and it is finished; see Fig. 3. The sketches will explain what I mean I find them very useful at this time of the year, as you can clean the cages out without any disturbance at all, for the whole cage can be lifted right off the bottom. I hope this idea may be useful to some of the fanciers who read your valuable journal.—GEORGE A. SEMPLE.

A USEFUL CLIP.

Sent by E. J. Fogarty, Ballycastle, Co. Antrim.

I enclose sketches of a little article I have found useful in the bird-room. It is a small clip, made of strong tin, or, better still, spring steel. But tin, if of strong quality, will do well enough. It is made about 1¼ in. long, and has for a back a piece of board 2¼ in. by 1¼ in., with a flat hook at top (also of tin), the exact breadth of the cage wires, to make it sit steady The cost is trifling—twopence would buy tin to make nearly two dozen. Any handy fancier can make half-a-dozen of an evening. I have sketched mode of making clip, to make my description of it clearer, and hope this idea of mine may be accepted. It is very useful for holding cuttlefish bone, old lime, pieces of apple or sprigs of green food, and saves the wires being bent by bird-keepers sticking things between them, thereby straining the front wires and spoiling the cages.—E. J. FOGARTY.

3. Front view. 4. How to make the clip.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions or advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be pasted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence to pay postage expenses, &c., otherwise their letters will not receive attention.

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

NOTE.—Readers are requested to carefully study past numbers and current issue before submitting questions. By doing so they may save trouble and unnecessary repetition.

CANARIES.

NORWICH PLAINHEADS.

Answered by J. H. PAYNE.

Flighted and Unflighted.

D.C.H.—A "flighted" bird means one that has had its flights drawn out when a young bird, so that when colour fed they might match the body (as young Canaries only throw their body feathers in the first moult). Or the term may mean a bird that has had its second moult and has got its second flights. An "unflighted" bird means, of course, one that has not had its flights drawn, or had its second moult. You would enter your birds that would, as you say, be "colour fed all over except the tail and flights" in the unflighted classes.

A Matter of Law.

Herbell.—I have had the opinion of my friend, who says as far as he can see by the facts which I gave him your chance of getting a verdict is about equal to your losing. His advice is that you had better make the best of a bad bargain, and not throw good money after bad, as the man you purchased the bird from is probably only a man of straw. I certainly think myself he has about hit the mark.

On Colour-Feeding.

Mid Bucks.—In the first place I may tell you that the sample of colour food you sent is not strong enough in colouring matter to successfully moult Norwich on for the show bench. I should recommend you to procure at once some of the tasteless or sweet pepper advertised in this paper, and use it according to the directions given by the seller. I do not think you will have any difficulty in getting them to eat this, but should they not eat it freely then take the seed away from them at night time and do not return it until middle day. Keep them covered over, as strong light will kill the colour.

"Gone to Pieces."

New Reader.—Give your hen in the drinking water, fresh daily, ten drops each of syrup of squills, ipecacuanha wine and glycerine, and continue for a fortnight or three weeks. You may also put a piece of fresh mutton suet between the bars of the cage for her to peck at. No, a little egg food twice or three times a week will not do any harm during the moult—quite the reverse.

An Outdoor Room.

F. G.—I should advise you to build a house at least 8 feet long and 6 feet wide. But if you can manage another foot or two in length and another one in width so much the better, as you will want cage room and a flight for your young birds, and the probability is that your eight pairs may increase another year, especially if you get a good first season. Let the height be 8 feet at the back and slope to 6 feet at the front, and have a good overlap to the roof, so that the rain will not run down the sides and front. I should advise you to case it in with match boards, say three or four inches from the outer boards, and fill in with fine sawdust. This will make it much warmer in the winter. Have the floor six or eight inches from the ground; this will not only keep it dry but will leave plenty of room for a cat to run under and thus keep away any mice. I think you will find one window enough if you have a good sized one. Make it to open so that in the heat of the summer you can admit plenty of air. You will want a wooden frame made to fit the window opening, over which tack some half-inch mesh wire. Cover the roof with felt, which should be tarred. In the heat of the summer if you whitewash the top of the roof this will make several degrees difference to the temperature inside the room. When mixing your whitewash put in some sifted sawdust. I should advise you to have one of the many excellent revolving ventilators now on the market and fix in the roof. To make a good job of it I should make a lobby where you will enter at the end of the house, so that should any kind be out it will not escape when you open the inner door. Of course, you must not forget to close the outer door as soon as you have entered. You would find this lobby very handy for storing your show cages, seed, sand, etc., in. Be sure that the timber you use is thoroughly well seasoned.

YORKSHIRES.

Answered by H. W. BATTYE.

To Nest, or Not.

No Name.—It would be very unwise to again pair up your hen this season. A hen that hatched five young ones on March 14th, has had three nests since, and laid altogether 21 eggs, has done more than any hen ought to do in one season, especially is she is to be of any use next year. Many hens that should last three or four years are used up the first year by being overworked. Three nests are as many as I care to take from one hen. Your best plan would be to place her in a good big flight, and let her get moulted as soon as possible. This will give her a chance to be some use either to you or some one else next year.

Moulting and Egg Food.

T. C.—Your bird will probably come round and get into full song again when he has got through the moult. Having already begun, you must keep him free from all draughts, and in as even a temperature as you can give him. A little egg food two or three times a week, and on the days you do not give the egg food give him half a teaspoonful of maw seed. Give fresh water to drink every day. Read the notes on moulting in this week's CAGE BIRDS. (2) A little egg food is beneficial for young birds right through the moult, though not absolutely necessary.

CRESTS AND CRESTBREDS.

Answered by W. E. GREEVES.

Colour Feeding.

Red.—No, it is not necessary to colour feed either Crests or Crestbreds, neither is there any advantage to be gained by doing it. When your young Norwich are six weeks old you may commence to give colour food, a small quantity at first, gradually increasing it as the birds get used to the food. What is necessary to obtain a deep colour is to get the colouring matter well into the bird's system before it commences to moult. The tasteless pepper you mention is very good, and in past years many winners have been fed on it; still, equally good are many other colouring agents advertised in this paper.

ROLLERS.

Answered by "SCHOOLMASTER."

Feathers Coming Off.

Anxious.—There is nothing to be anxious over, so far as I can see. The bird is no doubt just starting to moult, like many other Canaries. Many Rollers go bare at the back of the neck and about the head during the breeding season, but this is nothing to worry over, providing the bird shows no signs of real illness. As your own bird has just finished off rearing five young, and eats well and seems spirited, there can't be much the matter with him. His plumage is sure to come right with the moult. The breeding season is a bad time for the plumage of both cocks and hens. I should keep the bird in a cosy place, out of draughts, and feed him on good canary and summer rape seed. Every other day give him a small teaspoonful of egg bread (or a good maker's canary food). On the days you are not giving the egg bread let him have a small teaspoonful of maw seed. Give a pinch of linseed twice a week, and in his drinking water twice a week stir about half a teaspoonful of Parrish's Chemical Food.

"Nostrils Seem to be Full."

W. Williams.—The fault lays in you not continuing the treatment long enough. It is not sufficient to give just one dose of coal tar (or any other remedy) and then expect a bird to be cured. I can't understand what you wanted to have this hen for; birds suffering from asthma are dear at any price as a rule, for they are seldom any good to breed from. It has probably come through (or been made worse by) her moulting out of season with the party who had her before you. I advise you to continue with the coal tar for a week to twelve days, and see whether it brings about any improvement, and, if so, to continue with it until the hen is cured. If she seems no better then try the glycerine, paregoric and ipecacuanha mixture. Keep her in a warm, cosy room, and throw a light cover over her cage at night. Give her every day a small teaspoonful of egg bread (or some good maker's canary cake), and when you stop giving the other medicine mix among it four to six drops of Parrish's chemical food for a fortnight. This treatment should set her up again if anything will.

Teaching the Young.

J. Walker.—I have heard many men who have been proficient on the ordinary cheap bird flute, and could produce very nice and pleasing rolls and tours from it. But for the ordinary Roller breeder a mechanical bird organ, such as the one you mention (Queck's) is undoubtedly the best, as it can be wound up and left for half an hour or so, producing all the time good rolls and tours, which instruct young birds and help the old birds after the moult is over. I agree with you that it is not always possible to keep an old cock bird on one side as a schoolmaster for the young cocks, yet the education of the latter must commence when they are ready to feed themselves, and this is where a good automatic song machine comes in useful. The young, however, must always have the chance of hearing a good singing old bird as often as possible.

MISCELLANEOUS CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by "OLD JUDGE."

Soft Moult.

For three months my Canary has lost feathers; at present he seems better, but he has a difficulty in singing; he does try, but he has no voice. Will you kindly tell me what to give him?—E. J. GOOVER.

E. J. Goover.—Let your bird have as its staple food the best German summer rape seed. Every morning give it a little egg food, with a pinch of maw seed sprinkled on the top of it. In the way of green food, give it flowering groundsel, chickweed, dandelion flowers, or thistle heads. Put a piece of raw fat bacon between the wires of the cage twice or thrice a week, and in its drinking water mix 10 drops each of whisky and glycerine, fresh each morning. Try this treatment for a month, and then write again if there is no improvement.

Birds Gaping, etc.

F. Nash.—(1) It is really impossible to answer this question satisfactorily. You give me no idea as to how the birds are kept, neither do you say if they are old or young birds, nor if they make any noise when gaping. (2) This also is obscure. I cannot understand what you mean by down on the wing. All young birds have a quantity of down on their bodies, the more down there is the stronger the bird as a rule. (3) If your birds are simply singing birds the mixture you mention should answer all right, but I prefer to give birds canary seed as their regular diet in the seed hopper, and two or three times a week give them some other seed in a separate tin by way of a change, one day German summer rape, another maw, another niga, or hemp, and so on. If you will write again, giving me more particulars, I shall be delighted to answer you more fully.

Young Birds Puffy.

Tim.—You say that since the youngsters left their parents you have not given them any green food. In my opinion this is the cause of the trouble. You have been feeding on a highly stimulating diet, and their livers have become congested. The value of green food is that it keeps the liver working freely, and thus digestive troubles are avoided. Now that they are wrong I should advise you to stop the egg food and crushed hemp. In place thereof give them arrowroot biscuits soaked in boiled milk, fresh twice daily, also some soaked seed also twice daily. This is prepared by mixing in equal quantities, canary, summer rape, and hemp seed, soaking it in cold water for 24 hours, stirring and rinsing well in fresh water, and straining off at least twice during the day; when giving the seed rinse it well in fresh water, strain off and give to the birds. The drinking water should be coloured a rich rosy pink by the addition of Parrish's chemical food twice daily. Don't give any green food now; wait until the birds are better. Continue the treatment given for a week, then resume the egg food, but not the crushed hemp.

Selling Age.

Plumtree.—(1) Your question is rather vague, but I take it you wish to know at what age you may safely sell young Canaries without risk of their dying. If I have grasped your meaning correctly I should say any time after they are well on seed—say six or seven weeks. (2) It is not usual for breeders to sell cages with birds, but if your birds are song birds, and you wish to supply birds and cages to your customers, the best cage is that known as "the waggon cage," which is about 14 inches long by 10 wide, with an oval top like an ordinary waggon cover.

An Indoor Aviary.

Ravenscraig.—As I pointed out the week before last, in reply to "Gwendolyn," although all-wire aviaries are the nicest looking, and probably the most convenient to have in the average drawing or living room, they have their drawbacks. One of these is the lack of protection they afford from any draughts there may be in the room at any time. Neither Foreign nor British birds will thrive for long, and especially at the moulting season, if they are subjected to draughts. If the aviary is placed in a window, as is usually the case, then it is difficult to avoid a draught. But if you can fix it up in a nicely-lighted corner of the room (or in a fire-side recess) then this objection is largely overcome, and it is like to be cosy enough. The latter situation also does away to a great extent with its unsuitableness for British birds. The latter are very unsteady—unless well-domesticated specimens are obtained—in all-wire cages and aviaries, and won't stand to be looked at and admired, which is generally what their owner and friends desire them to do. All things considered, I should advise you to let your collection comprise mainly Waxbills and other small Foreign seed-eaters, providing the aviary is made of half-inch mesh wire. It would hold 12 to 18 of them comfortably. If you put in the former number, a Goldfinch, Bullfinch, Linnet, and Siskin might be included, and would no doubt agree well with them. If you desire details of their feeding, address a query to our Mr. Page. With plenty of white and spray millet in addition, they would thrive on the seeds given the British birds.

Enamelling and Quarrelling.

Nancy.—The quarrelling of the birds is one of the worst troubles the aviarist who goes in for Britishers has to endure. When the males are well fed and attended to they will persist in squabbling and fighting, especially during the breeding season, and one can do nothing to stop them, particularly so when, as in your case, they have only the space afforded by a Crystal Palace aviary to manœuvre in and avoid one another. Even in the largest outdoor aviary one bird may "get a down on" another (as the Yankees say), and when this comes about the stronger will pursue the weaker with a blood-thirsty persistency worthy of a Corsican engaged in a vendetta. The only remedy is to remove one or other of the troublesome individuals—until the moult breaks out at any rate, for then birdy passions seem to subside, till the following spring wakes them again. Two cock Goldies kept together in a small aviary are practically always certain to fight during the summer months. The only way to minimise the risk of squabbling is to keep only one cock of each species in the same compartment. As you do not tell me the size of your aviary I can't possibly tell you how many birds it will accommodate. You can safely enamel the outside woodwork of the aviary, and the inside also providing you allow it four or five days to get thoroughly hard before returning the birds to it. Don't on any account enamel the perches; keep them well scrubbed and they'll look nice enough.

Concerning an Outdoor Aviary.

Bombados.—Of what species are the birds which failed to rear their young? If Canary hens, and you gave them a supply of egg food, the proper seeds, and some suitable green food, their failure is hard to understand. It is usual to blame the weather this year (and it unquestionably has been shocking) but that seems scarcely sufficient explanation of wholesale failure such as yours. Did you interfere with the birds over much? It is a fatal error beginners often fall into. As regards your aviary. The size, 8ft. long, 4ft. wide, 6ft. high at back and 5ft. at front, is a very nice one, but it is far from large enough to turn a mixed lot of birds in with the expectation of satisfactory breeding results. In fact I cannot in any case recommend this method of breeding to anyone anxious to produce young birds; cages offer by far the best and surest means of accomplishing the latter end. In an aviary one has not the birds properly under control, and one has to contend against all sorts of untoward possibilities, such as the cocks fighting for the same mates, and sometimes the hens too, though usually the latter confine their squabbling to disagreements over nesting sites. Then many birds are mischievous, and maul the nests, etc., of other couples about. A pretty safe collection to make a commencement with would be a pair each of Bullfinches, Goldfinches, Linnets and Redpolls, with five or six hen Canaries and three cocks. The latter would be sure to breed, while some (possibly all) of the former might do so.

Concerning Several Hybrids.

(1) I have two Goldfinch-Linnet Hybrids. Kindly say whether they must be colour fed. (2) Will they stand any chance of a prize when shown in Hybrid classes against Bullfinch Hybrids? (3) Is a Redpoll-Linnet of any value? (4) Does Redpoll-Canary require colour food?—A.J.

A.J.—As I have mentioned in another reply, I hesitate to say that Hybrids "must" be colour fed. I am naturally of a most inoffensive disposition, and as we have those amongst us who are "again colour food," I will merely state that I think most of the owners of exhibition Hybrids endeavour to get their birds to eat pepper, and that practically all the winning specimens are colour fed. At that I leave you to steer your own course. You should be able to make up your own mind as to whether non-fed Hybrids are likely to be handicapped in the race for prizes when competing against colour-fed specimens. (2) This is very difficult to answer, so much depending on the number of different Bullfinch crosses in the class, and their quality, and on the quality of your Goldie-Linnets. Generally speaking, however, a really good cock bird of the latter cross is certain of recognition in any Hybrid class; it would need very hot competition to knock him right out of it. (3) A Redpoll-Linnet is not of much value, though a good example of the cross is worth its place in any team of Hybrids one is exhibiting, as it is always likely to score a point or two in the cards. It is a sombre-coloured and unattractive Hybrid compared with Goldie-Linnet or Goldie-Siskin—so far as looks go, that is. (4) You must read my reply to this in the answer given you to question No. I.

Rearing Linnet Mules.

Jack.—Most Mules reared by Canary hens are brought up in very much the same way as young Canaries—that is, on similar food and treatment generally. Therefore you gave your own birds the correct treatment—or correct enough, at any rate, as is proved by your rearing them successfully. Now they are commencing to feed themselves offer (in addition to soft food and soaked rape) maw seed, lightly cracked canary and hemp seeds, groats, or coarse oatmeal, shelled and broken up sunflower seed; also seeding heads of chickweed, shepherd's purse and groundsel, and thistles in season. Don't, at the same time, forget grit and cuttlefish, likewise old, crushed mortar. Steep the summer rape seed in cold water, which thoroughly change every day. It will soon begin to germinate (burst), and is then ready for use, dabbing it as dry as possible in a towel before offering it to the birds. All crushed seed must be prepared fresh daily. I should wean them off egg food as soon as possible, substituting for it home-made egg cake moistened, if necessary, with a spot or two of milk; or a little stale sponge cake, or crusbed sweet biscuit (maizena wafer, tea or Osborne) also moistened with milk. Don't make the mistake, when dropping egg, of leaving off soft food entirely. The best cages for general use are the box pattern ones known as Finch stock cages (any of the large cage makers advertising in our columns will supply them). They are about 16 by 10 by 8 inches, wired in front only, doors at front and side, seed box inside, running from front to back, two perches about on a level with top of seed trough, water vessel outside. In CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL for 1906 this style of cage is depicted and described. You could moult the Mules, of course, in small flight cages, about 3 feet or 4 feet long—say double breeders with centre partition removed. See they are perfectly clean and free from red mite.

Treatment of Greypates.

Willie.—If you take my advice you won't invest your money in Greypates yet awhile. Wait until the end of September—give them a chance to grow and get strong in a state of nature ere you try to break them in to caged life. Any practical fancier will tell you that the close season for Goldfinches might well be extended until October 1st, at the earliest. When you get them, you cannot improve on the feeding and management advised "A New Reader" in this week's issue. The kind of cage most suited for putting newly-caught Greypates in is that therein advised—a long, low one, wired in front only, and with the top made of strong canvas, if possible—very like, in fact, a catcher's store cage. Both seed and water should be placed inside the cage, and on a level with the perches—right under their noses, so to speak. If you have a steady old hen Canary you can pop in amongst them, so much the better; she will show them the ins and outs of things. A steady hen Goldfinch will often answer the same purpose well, but many of them I found inclined to "chivy" the young Goldies about. Put the seeds in hoppers running from front to back of cage (inside), at each end. You can hang a water tin outside after a time, when the birds have settled down, and they will readily follow the lead of the old bird and drink out of it. If Greypates will eat a little of a high-grade insectivorous mixture, or even ants' eggs alone, or ants' eggs and crumbled egg-cake, I am strongly in favour of giving it them during the moult—old Goldfinches, too.

Management of Fresh-caught Goldfinches and Linnets.

Kindly tell me the best way to bring fresh-caught Goldfinches on to hard seed, and Linnets the same. They generally turn puffy in a few days and die. Can you tell me the reason for this? I feed Goldies on crushed hemp, German rape and canary seed, and Linnets on boiled rape and canary.—A NEW READER.

A New Reader.—Of course, a percentage of losses cannot be avoided where newly-caught birds are concerned. But given intelligent treatment, it ought always to be small with Linnets and Goldfinches. Fresh-caught specimens should always be kept in cages with inside seed troughs and water vessels, so that their food is directly under their noses, so to speak. It is well to have the water inside, but if this cannot be managed, then be absolutely certain they get at it. I prefer to give them a week or so in a cage resembling a catcher's store cage, with canvas top; such is very useful to get them well on to seed, and over the first stages of captivity. The great mistake most fanciers make when buying fresh-caught Finches is to condemn them at once to a diet of dry, hard seed. In the wild state from which they have just been taken, their food is, broadly put, of a more or less soft nature, and the sudden and complete change on to dry seed is unquestionably responsible for much, if not all, of the "indigestion" or "stomach trouble" which carries so many fresh caught Finches to that land whence none return. And, of course, if the birds have been any length of time in a shop awaiting sale, the "upsetting" may have commenced before you yourself lay hands on them. I think mixed seed very wasteful for these birds; most of them shaw a preference for one kind, perhaps two, and the others get knocked about the cage floor as a result of their searching for the favoured seed or seeds. For fresh caught Goldfinches, I should put in a pot each of cracked hemp (not crushed), teazle, and niga seeds, and a pot of mixed maw, linseed, and canary; some advocate coarse oatmeal as well. In addition, of course, I would offer ample sunflower and summer rape, which had been soaked in cold water until it burst, or had just commenced to sprout, dabbing it as dry as possible with a cloth before offering it. Then there are the wild seeding weeds and grasses, thistles, hardheads, plantains, and the like, not forgetting flowering groundsel tops (not the coarse leaves). With the help of these latter foods (of which the Goldfinch fancier should always have a little store), the change on to the ordinary dry seeds can be made gradually, and without harm accruing. Should they seem to go a little "soft," the drinking water should at once have some sulphate of soda dissolved in it (as much as will just lie on a shilling to every two tablespoonfuls). A gentle dose of saline, if given in time, is, in my experience, the best medicine; in fact, I never found anything else of much use. Linnets will thrive on the same treatment, but must have charlock and summer rape in addition; also seeding shepherd's purse and chickweed in plenty. They must be gradually weaned off the niger (and it need not be given so freely as with Goldies), and hemp. Let them have linseed freely. Your own food bill reads wretchedly; rape is useless for Goldfinches. How much of it do you find them eat?

A Chaffinch-Canary Hybrid.

Bristolian.—Am glad to note you say "if" I had a Chaffinch-Canary Hybrid. It shows you are prepared to concede there is some doubt about the youngster being rightly entitled to that name. Still, I shall be considerably more glad should the nestling turn out to be a genuine example of the above mating. I hope it will, and that it may show the cross (as it should) in unmistakable manner. To come to the point, however: "If" I had a young Chaffinch-Canary Hybrid in a nest with two young Canaries, and being reared by the hen Canary on egg food, hemp, scalded rape, maw and shepherd's purse ad. lib., I should not worry any further over its diet. If the hen Canary is going to rear it at all she can do so quite easily on the foods in this list. Personally, I should add some best quality ants' eggs to the soft food. But they are not strictly necessary, and some hen Canaries look upon them with suspicion, unless accustomed to eating them. I don't use scalded rape personally (for various reasons which need not be gone into here), preferring to soak it in several changes of cold water until it begins to germinate (burst), then to dab it dry in a cloth, and give it to the birds. The hen might eat a few small mealworms; try her and see. Or you could cut up one or two and lay them just on top of the egg food.

Outdoor Flight and House.

G. L.—If your sole desire is to breed young birds, I cannot recommend turning out a large number of pairs into an outdoor aviary in order to accomplish it. This method reads (and no doubt seems) like the simple and short cut to success, but I can assure you it doesn't pan out so. If you will look up the last few issues of this paper you will find the reasons this is so set out at some length. Your aviary should be a capital place, though, to house birds in, and certainly a fair sprinkling of young birds ought to put in an appearance, providing you avoid overcrowding, and rely mainly on Canary hens. Hen British birds can never be depended on to rear their young successfully in captivity, though, at the same time, many do so. I should not use the house solely for the Canaries; they will not hurt out in the open all the year round if of a hardy variety, for they will have the house to retire into, and the British birds certainly need this latter privilege as well. You could turn in a pair or two each of Goldfinches, Bullfinches, Greenfinches, Linnets, Siskins and Redpolls, and a score or more Canary hens, with, say, ten or twelve cocks. Your place will very comfortably hold fifty birds for breeding purposes.

Half-a-dozen Weeds.

E. Baker.—I am afraid you have mistaken the mission of this column, which is to afford assistance, wherever possible, to keepers of British birds. The identification of wild plants is a matter for a gardening paper. I make no pretence, personally, to other than the scantiest knowledge of plant life. To be worried with shepherd's purse is bad enough—but save me from having the whole British flora fired at me! No. 1 looks like just common meadow grass; No. 2 is the grass with which I while away dull hours when "bird-stalking," playing the game known to me as "soldier, sailor, tinker, tailor, rich man, poor-man, beggar-man, thief." It is a beautiful pastime; the consistent way in which it forecasts my future as a "rich man" never fails to cheer me up, notwithstanding the chronic emptiness of my right-hand trouser pocket. I believe rye-grass is the correct name. No. 3 I know as "barley grass," but whether this is strictly correct I cannot say. No. 4 looks and smells like common chamomile; No. 5 is shepherd's purse; No. 6 is one of the small thistles, probably the very common creeping plume-thistle—specimen sent is too dried up to render exact identification easy. It is good for birds.

Queer in the Moult.

W.C.P.—I do not see that you can well do anything more for the Linnet. The moult is always a trying time, and one is very apt to lose birds then. Don't hang him in too warm a place, and let it be a well-ventilated, though not draughty, one. Give him plenty of maw seed to eat. Add a part of teazle and a little charlock to the stock mixture. Give only ripe plantain, shepherd's purse and chickweed as green food. If the tail has not yet moulted, pulling out two or three of the feathers might help. Add a little saffron to the drinking water—enough to just distinctly colour it.

An "Almost Broken" Wing.

A. Yeomans.—I am unable to gather what you mean when you say your Skylark's wing is "almost broken." I can't conceive any half-way house, so to speak, between a sound and a broken wing. Couldn't you manage to give me a little more explicit account of whatever may be the matter with the bird's wing, and explain why you think (or use the expression) that it is only "almost broken"? If the bird has bruised its wing in knocking about, and thus carries it hanging down at its side, the carriage will probably come all right again as the place heals. A supporting bandage is often useful, though in the case of a broken wing it needs putting on immediately after the fracture occurs. I have myself used with success a piece of tape of suitable width (about half-inch), passed between, say, the third and fourth flight feathers of each wing, and carried round the body. When the two wings have been placed in position, join the ends of the tape over the bird's back by a few stitches from a needle and thread, leaving it just sufficiently tight to "brace" the wings in their proper place. You need the help of a friend of course, to carry this through properly, but to one used to handling birds it is not a difficult operation, with ordinary care, and especially when the patient is of a biggish species.

Some Obstruction.

W. Handy.—It is difficult to see what else you can do. Some affection (or obstruction) of the passage may have developed which is beyond the power of medicine to deal with. I should prefer giving an occasional dose of dandelion juice, rather than to keep on with the salts. Plenty of shepherd's purse, plantain, groundsel tops and chickweed should also be offered. Let the Linnet have, too, a goodly proportion of linseed in its stock mixture, and a feed of maw seed daily. I don't know whether you are familiar with birds and bird-keeping or not, so it may be well to state that the vent of a cock bird, when he is in high condition, is much more prominent than at other period of the year. You don't want to make any mistake, and imagine the vent (and near) to be swollen, when the appearances are simply natural. If the bird is suffering from inflammation of any kind, he will soon evidence the fact by puffing out his feathers, squatting on the perch, with stomach pressed close to it, and by looking "sleepy" about the eyes. I take it your bird does none of these things, or you would have mentioned the fact.

A Weed; and Aviary-Hatched Bramblefinches.

Novice.—The weed you send is penny-cress—a near relation to shepherd's purse, but very much less common. It is quite suitable to give to British birds, when in a ripe state. Why didn't you give me a little more information about the "young Bramblefinches hatched in an aviary"—how old are they, for instance, and which is feeding them, a Canary hen or a hen Bramble? I can't very well answer questions if those who ask them do not trouble to give all possible helpful details. If a hen Canary is fostering the young Bramblefinches, then she will rear them, if she is going to do so at all, on the same food she would rear young Canaries on. You could try to get her to eat a sprinkling of finest quality ants' eggs, stirred amongst the egg food, and among the latter you could squeeze out some mealworms, or chop them up, and mix with it. Start with small quantities, and she will soon get to relish them, I feel sure. The hen Bramble (if she is mothering them) should be given a first-class insectivorous mixture, with plenty of cut-up mealworms amongst it; or if there are no other likely mealworm-eaters in the aviary, the latter can be given in a glazed dish (alive, of course). Unless this be the case, whatever live food you try to supply to her is sure to get more or less looted. Give the ordinary seeds in addition, and a plentiful supply of freshly-gathered grass and weed seeds, as so often recommended in this column.

Can it be a Joke?

A. Hudson.—Frankly, I cannot make head nor tail of your communication. Are you endeavouring to drive me mad by trying to work off some stupid joke? If so, may every hair on your head wither. Your opening smacks of the humorous, where you say the "about fourteen-day old" nestling "carries heavy feathers on the head, inclining towards the back, also feathers under the chin, forming a sort of beard." Evidently a precocious sort of freak. Then you drop into quasi-scientific jargon, and tell me "the toes, four in number, are opposed, two by two, the anterior toes united at their base by a small membrane, the hinder two completely separated." Now, such a formation of foot could only belong to the Wryneck or a Woodpecker—as it seems to me you must have known, or you would hardly be likely to describe it in the words you do. After this you proceed to say you found the youngster in a nest situate in a hedge, the said nest being a "little larger than a Greenie's, and composed of dried grass and moss." This, of course, is funny, seeing that the Wryneck and the Woodpeckers breed in holes in trees, and practically use no nesting materials. I don't want to do you an injustice, but it seems to me that you are either trying to "pull my leg," or someone has been violently pulling your own.

A Varied Lot.

Avis.—(1) The only bird that occurs to me as answering your description is the Starling. I don't see what else it could be, for apparently you know a Blackbird when you see one. (2) For food of Bullfinch, kindly refer to answers given "W. Berry" and "Herbell" in last week's issue, which fully answer this question. (3) Probably your Blackbird will not sing again until after he has moulted. As a tonic, and one of service during the moult, I can recommend you nothing better than Allen and Hanbury's Byno-phosphates. Mix a small teaspoonful into two tablespoonfuls of drinking water, fresh daily for three days, then on alternate days only (plain water in between), over a period of three weeks—or until the moult is well over, if it seems advisable.

A Trio.

W.L.M.—(1) Any light feathers among the plumage of a Thrush are a bar to the bird's success on the show bench. No judge who knew his business would be likely to award a prize to a specimen so marked. Possibly the light wing feather may moult out normal in colour; there is always that chance, though a slight one. Of course, these remarks are not intended to apply to pied birds shown in the albino (or rare-feathered) class—their proper place. (2) I think I had better not answer your question as to whether it is "advisable" to colour feed a Thrush for exhibition purposes. I shall only get my nose pulled by some anti-colourfoodite or other if I say "yes." So I will merely state that I feel convinced most of the winning Song Thrushes find sweet tasteless pepper an ingredient of their food during the moulting period. Red feed, not yellow, is the best. (3) The time when the full moult of practically all birds that are kept as cage pets takes place is somewhere from the middle of July to the middle of September—there is no definite time, however, for either the beginning or the finish, that depending somewhat on the species and on the individual bird, too. I have, for instance, seen caught Goldfinches still in their nestling plumage when the year has been much nearer Christmas than September.

Concerning Weeds and Thistles.

Chorister.—No. 1 is shepherd's purse and No. 3 is groundsel; but specimen No. 2 did not reach me, so I cannot say what it was. It could not be chickweed, however, if bearing, as you say, a yellow flower. Chickweed carries a tiny white flower—like a tiny white star. All three can be safely given birds at any stage of growth, though they may be said to be at their best when arrived at the seeding stage. What fanciers need to avoid is the giving of old, coarse growths—big, stringy leaves should always be stripped off. Thistles should be gathered only when quite ripe (the heads, that is). It is only the ripe seed they contain that attracts Finches. But I must not forget the "maggots" which many heads (and especially rotten, or decayed, heads) contain, for these are very valuable indeed, and greedily devoured by all Finches. I know of no more valuable help in moulting a Goldfinch than a free supply of them. Many thistles, too, swarm with plant lice of various kinds, and these should always be cut down and given the birds to pick over.

Brieflets.

Shepherd's Purse (J.L., Wallace, P.O., X.).—Sample sprays of shepherd's purse have been forwarded you.

Good King Henry (J.W.P.).—By all means send a sample when seeds are ripe (leaf as well), when I will try to name it. Send a sample of Good King Henry as well; I suppose you grow it for table purposes, as spinach?

Mouse Ear and Shepherd's Purse (J.McN.).—I do not know whether you intend me to understand that mouse ear is taken for shepherd's purse in your district. I presume so, however, as the specimen you now label shepherd's purse is the same that you previously said was not shepherd's purse. Mouse ear is a name applied to the genus myosotis, the plants comprising which are all popularly known as forget-me-nots. Your mouse ear is in reality the field scorpion grass, a common plant. The seeds of all the genus are favoured by the wild birds.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S.

What Bird?

(1) They are of small size, greyish underneath and on their heads, brown backs, bright red beaks and orange cheeks. Can you tell me their name? (2) One is bald and not very lively. Is it moulting? (3) Can you tell me how to tame and feed them?—M.E.M.V.

M.E.M.V.—(1) It is the Orange-cheeked Waxbill (Sporœginthus melpodus), a freely imported West African species. (2) These, and many other species, when kept in at all confined quarters, frequently occupy up their time in picking one another's heads bare; the question is, is this the cause, or is it debility? You can ascertain this by observation. If you observe the other birds pecking their bald companion, you must cage it up separately (not in a little prison) in a cage with plenty of perches; let it have a daily bath and also a little slightly moistened sponge cake and ants' eggs, which have been lightly dusted with flour or flowers of sulphur; also lightly colour its drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. The staple diet for these birds is canary, white, French and spray millet, with green food, grit, cuttlefish, and water for drinking and bathing. If these birds are kept in an all-wire cage in a window, which is often opened for airing the room, they will soon "shuffle off." No birds ought to be kept in such a position that the wind (even a slight breeze) can blow through the cage. The most hardy of birds cannot endure draught, hence box-type cages are generally recommended as giving the best protection against draught. If the bare skin is very hard and dry, lightly rub in a little clean vaseline.

Foreign Birds for Profit.

I am building an aviary with inner and outer portions, each 10 by 6 by 7½ ft. high. What mesh wire netting must I use? What birds can I have that would breed and make me some return for outlay?—KELMORE.

Kelmore.—To cover annual expenses or more it is necessary to confine yourself to one or two species, and secure at the commencement only the best procurable of the species you elect to keep. Personally, I never made anything out of my birds; on the contrary, the upkeep of the aviary costs me a good annual sum, apart from new purchases. But others have made it pay by confining themselves to one or two species. Get three pairs of yellow Budgerigars, unrelated pairs, and each pair from a different source. These should commence breeding as soon as they get accustomed to their quarters. Pairs each of Cockateels, Red Rosellas, and Blossom-headed Parrakeets. If you procure adult pairs, all these should breed next year if paired now. But excepting the Budgerigars, but few species of Parrakeets breed during the first year of their occupancy of the aviary. I should most certainly use ½-in. mesh netting; it will be safer against cats, etc. I know of several fanciers who have made their aviaries more than pay their way with the above birds after they (the birds) were once established in their quarters. Your shed, or inner portion, certainly ought to have a window; all such shelters should be well-lighted or the birds will use them but little.

Dieting Blue-fronted Amazon.

I have a bird, it has been fed on Parrot Mixture and bread and butter. I have only had the bird a week, and am feeding on mixture advised in "C.B.," with sand, cuttlefish, and water twice daily. It eats well, but has periods of moping, gaping, and sitting with ruffled feathers. These do not last long, and then it is quite lively. How must I treat?—NOVICE.

Novice.—I do not think the change of diet is responsible for the bird's indisposition, but that its former diet and the after effects of the voyage to this country are the cause. Continue the seed mixture, and give twice a week a little boiled maize (this only keeps fresh one day), and so long as the bird's bowels do not become watery loose put half a teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia over same. It would also be advisable to well colour its drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food for the next month or longer. Also give ripe fruit, green food, cuttlefish, plain biscuit (dry), and a little boiled potato, not altogether, but so as to vary the diet. Do not give slops, sops, or any kind of animal food. I do not think there is much the matter, and am of the opinion that the bird will gradually recover tone.

Foreign Birds for Indoor Aviary.

The aviary is 9 by 6 by 8 ft. high, and contains sixteen British Finches. What Foreign Finches would agree with them? What diet and treatment would they require? Would the same diet answer for both Britishers and Foreigners?—PAINTER.

Painter.—You could keep with the Britishers, Mannikins in variety, Grey and Green Singing Finches, Alario, Zebra, Ribbon, Saffron, and Diamond Rufus-tailed and Gouldian Finches, Common and Green Avadavats, Grey, St. Helena, Zebra and Orange-cheek Waxbills, and almost any Foreign Finches not larger than the Goldfinches. As to diet and treatment this is very simple. Keep clean, and supply in addition to the menu of the Britishers, canary, white, French, and spray millet; you can supply the first three mixed, the latter, of course, you will hang up. I am assuming you are supplying for the other birds green food, grit, cuttlefish, and water ad lib for drinking and bathing; if not, you must do so. A few ants' eggs scattered on the ground are appreciated by many of the species. They will take no harm if they eat of one another's diet.

Keeping Parrot with Jays, etc.

My aviary is 5 by 5 by 6 ft. high, and contains Jackdaws and Jays. Would a Parrot live and agree with them during the summer months?—NEW SUBSCRIBER.

New Subscriber.—I am of the opinion that both the Parrot, Jays, etc., would be able to look after themselves; in fact, in a large aviary it has been successfully done, but the experiment is a doubtful one in an aviary of the size of yours. Another thing is the animal food you give the Jackdaws, etc., would certainly be bad for the Parrot, and altogether I cannot advise you to make the experiment. There are many species of Parrots and Parrakeets that can be kept out of doors all the year round. If you decide on making the experiment, try a pair of Rosellas or an Indian Ring-necked Parrakeet, but remember all your interior woodwork must be protected with either netting or zinc or they will soon cut their way out. The wire netting, if you try a Ring-neck, should be of thicker gauge wire than that ordinarily sold by ironmongers and stores.

How to Treat Aurora Finches.

Please tell me how to feed and treat these birds. Will they breed, and what is their value?—POPE DAY.

Pope Day.—They must have a roomy cage, and when they have got accustomed to their quarters and owners, they will probably settle down to reproduce their kind. These are delightful birds, both as to appearance and demeanour; they love the sun, and to see them disporting themselves in same is a sight to be remembered. Diet: Canary, white, French, and spray millet, some good soft food mixture, an occasional mealworm or other insect, green food, cuttlefish, and water for drinking and bathing. If you send to the editor for CAGE BIRDS Annual, Part I., for this year, you will find on page 31 of same a full description, with fuller notes on demeanour and treatment than can be given in this reply. Note, the cage should be so placed that at some time during the day it is half in full sunlight and half in the shade; while they love the sun, it must not be allowed to shine full upon them without a shady corner for retirement.

Young Amazon Parrot.

I have just purchased the bird; it had been fed on sop and boiled maize, but I have stopped this, and am giving the seed mixture advised in "C.B.," which it eats, but does so with some difficulty. How must I feed and treat the bird?—BABY AMAZON.

Baby Amazon.—Do not give the sop, but for a time you must give boiled maize (this only keeps fresh one day) daily, as well as the seed diet you are giving. When you find it eating the seed mixture freely and without difficulty, then only give the boiled maize twice a week. Twice a week put half a teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia over its boiled maize, so long as its bowels do not become watery loose; also put half a teaspoonful of Parrish's Chemical Food in its drinking water for a time; that is, till you find it getting stronger. You must also supply ripe fruit, etc., as advised at end of reply to "Novice" in this issue. Yours is a newly-imported bird, and it is impossible to say whether it is merely a passing indisposition or some serious complaint contracted during importation. But from your details I think the bird will gradually improve and gain strength and condition. It must, of course, be kept quite free from draught; at the same time, it ought to have plenty of fresh air.

Budgerigar Killing Young.

One of my Budgerigars hatched out three young, and all went well till they were about a month old, when she entered the nest and killed one. I removed the others to save their lives. What is the cause of this? How can it be prevented? Was it desire to lay again that prompted her action? Will the young be able to feed themselves, they have bread crumbs, sop, and seed?—DISMAYED.

Dismayed.—I am afraid I can give you but little help. From your details I cannot even give the reason. With all the Budgerigars I have reared I have never had such a case, though several similar cases have come to my notice this year. Unnatural parents occur in the avian world as well as among genus homo—try her with another brood, and if such unnatural conduct is repeated, give her liberty, and let her take her chance among our native Sparrows, etc.; this is far better than inflicting her on anyone else. I am afraid this reply will reach you too late to save the young; if they still live they should be all right, but if they have become weak put the male in with them, and he should bring them up, but watch him at first as he has been separated from them for some days. I have never had a case in my aviary of the desire to nest again cause them to throw out young. I have had eggs laid among the young and wasted, but nothing further. I presume sexes are equal among your birds, if not, remedy this at once.

Feeding Singing Finches.

What is the proper diet for Grey and Green Singing Finches, so as to keep them in song and health? How can I tell their sex? Which is the best songster among Foreign Finches?—A NEW READER.

A New Reader.—In both these birds the sexes are almost identical as to plumage, but in comparing adult birds I have always found the plumage of the female to lack the fine lustre which is characteristic of this sex in practically all species of Finches. The male Grey Singing Finch may be distinguished by a small patch of white on the throat; this is not visible when the bird is at rest, but when singing, or the neck is stretched upwards, or if it is taken in the hand, the feathers blown apart, it can then be plainly seen. The female Green Singing Finch is slightly smaller than the male, her plumage is browner on the upper surface, and the throat is slightly washed with whitish. However, it must be noted that such distinctions only hold good with mature birds. I certainly have possessed undoubted females whose plumage was but little, if any, less bright than that of the male. Song is the main test as to sex in these birds. Diet: Canary, white, French, and spray millet, green food, grit, cuttlefish, and water ad lib for drinking and bathing. A few good ants' eggs are also greedily eaten, as are also any small insects you can capture for them. I should not care to attempt to say which is the best seed-eating songster. What some would prefer, very probably I might term a noisy shrieking thing, and others vice versa. But, providing you get a good one, the Grey Singing Finch is hard to beat. The following are all good:—Yellow-rumped Serin, Grey-necked Serin, Cape Canary, St. Helena Seed Eater, and Alario Finches.

What Parrot?

I am giving you a description of my Parrot, and shall be glad if you can tell its name. I am told it is rare. What part does it come from? What is the approximate value?—F. GEORGE.

F. George.—It is very difficult to name any species from a written description, and yours is somewhat incomplete; but I am of the opinion that your bird is a Yellow-fronted Amazon; if so, it is not rare, and its value, as an untrained, yet partially acclimatised specimen, about 30s. All the Amazons make fair talkers and good mimics, but take a lot of teaching as a rule. Occasionally an unteachable individual turns up, but they are rather uncommon. Most of them will pick up words and short phrases if kept in the ordinary living room, where they will hear plenty of conversation.

LEGAL.

Answered by a BARRISTER.

Crathorne.—Three cottages were left to A (a boy) and B and C (girls). A married and died intestate, leaving his widow D and four sons. Can the eldest of the four sons claim two-thirds of the property?—No. When a man dies intestate, leaving a widow with children, the widow takes one-third and the remaining two-thirds are divided equally among the children. The eldest son, who is about 21, has no more rights than the youngest. D's claim to the property, as well as that of her sons, are subject to the joint interests of B and C in the property.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for a reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post-mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Canary (J. Style).—Inflammation of lungs, liver, and spleen, ending up with apoplexy, all indicative of "Bird Fever."

German Canary (H. H. Shaw)—This young bird, and possibly your others, died of Canary Fever. Run your other birds into clean cages, and disinfect everything possible with burning sulphur.

Foreign Birds (W. T. Henning).—Death was caused by acute pneumonia, and the liver was in an inflamed condition. One would think they had too much food and insufficient exercise. Do you confine them in a cage?

GENERAL.

PORTH AND CYMMER.

The First Feather Show of the above society was held at Danix Rooms on July 13th. Considering it is a young society, a very fair number was staged, Yorks and British being strong classes. The Secretary, Mr. J. Challenger, had details well in hand. Mr. T. H. Melhuish judged. NOR. (6): 1, 2, 3, Llewellyn, first yellow, cobby, good head, nice chest and back, very level feather, strong bird, second paler, not so close feathered and soiled, younger bird, third smaller, nice shape; 4, vhc, hc, Williams. YORKS. (13): 1, spl best bird, 3, vhc, hc, Wilkins, leader yellow, nice quality, stands like a Guardsman, sweetly drawn, promising youngster, third buff, again true Yorkie, nice level jacket, slightly thicker in chest and waist and showing moult; 2, 4, Nash, second yellow, nice feather, full of quality and sheen, grand length, loses in position, fourth marked buff, nice shape; hc, Challenger, nice quality and shape, much younger. MULES (5): 1, 2, 3, Metcalf, all dark medium Mules; 4, Arnold. BRIT. (11): Real good class; 1, 3, 4, Norton, a grand Bullie leading, in lovely show condition, third again a Bullie, equally as good in all but cap feathers missing; 2, Gilbert, Linnet, very taking bird, steady, and shows for all he is worth, little light in pencilling; c, Thomas.

PRESTON.

The First Feather Show promoted by the Preston Ornithological Society was held in the Temperance Hall, Preston, on July 20th. There was an excellent classification, and the entries numbered over 100. The judge was Mr. J. Hopkins. The arrangements were excellent, and reflected great credit on the committee and Mr. Cleminson, the hon. secretary.

CORRESPONDENCE.

PROPOSED NEW SOCIETY AT WOOLWICH.

SIR,—Although it was only in last week's issue that the idea of starting the society was brought forward, it has already received sufficient support to warrant a meeting being called. I have, therefore, arranged for one on Thursday next, August 1st, at 8 p.m., at the Queen's Arms, Burrage Road. This room is only two minutes' walk from Woolwich Arsenal Station, and, being central, I hope to see a large muster. All lovers of cage birds are heartily welcome. I might say that the society is not being started in opposition to other societies, but simply to encourage and help the Fancy in every possible way. Any suggestions thankfully received.

IS IT CRUEL TO CAGE BIRDS?

SIR,—While admitting that wild birds, properly treated, are, taking the year all round, better off in cages than they would be if they were in their wild state, I can quite understand some people thinking otherwise. I don't think I am wrong in saying that a good percentage of wild birds are not properly treated. Thousands are placed by their respective owners to eke out a miserable existence in small box cages, with hardly room enough for them to turn round, and I am afraid that these little creatures require a bath never enters the heads of many of these so-called bird lovers. I have a friend who has a Canary and a Linnet; the Canary he keeps in a roomy cage in the window, and the Linnet in a box cage in a corner of the room. It is for such things as these that a great many people call the caging of wild birds brutal. There is plenty of room for a Bird Lovers' League. I remember reading in CAGE BIRDS some time ago that, of the Goldfinches caught in August, 90 per cent.—I believe that was the number the writer gave—in his opinion, died before the next August. If that is so, I think bird lovers might try to stop this slaughter by getting the close season extended until the breeding operations of these birds are completed. The above figures I am taking from memory. J. CAMBURN.

SIZE IN SCOTCH FANCIES.

A Protest against "Faked Monsters."

SIR,—I would like to combat an old theory which has been revived, that it is no use breeding Scotch Fancy Canaries unless they are big. Men of experience know that is pure nonsense. There is no logic like the logic of facts, and I will give your readers a few out of many. 1907.—A fancier who is great on size mated a giant pair; they have been fruitful, but the young are of little value, being a complete failure in size and quality. So much for a big, big pair, at a fabulous cost. Another fancier, imbued with same notion, has also got a downcome. Take the other side: A pair of Scotch Fancy Canaries, if anything under the ordinary size, have produced handsome young birds; they are right for size, being large, and full of quality. Your readers have but to recall winners to prove that it is not necessary to rush upon big birds to be successful. The largest buff cock that ever stood upon perch had ordinary-sized parents; the second largest buff cock, a notable winner, was the product of tiny yellow cock bred by the renowned Mr. Hart, of Paisley, and an ordinary-sized hen; they were a cheap pair to the purchaser, and afforded a splendid profit. The biggest Green cock that ever won a cup had an ordinary mother and a diminutive father. I can mention others, but these will suffice in the meantime to prove the folly of pinning faith in big Canaries. The Scotch Fancy Canary is a bird of position, and intending purchasers ought to keep that in mind in buying. Size is good in a way, but a big bird can seldom grip the perch in the way a medium or small bird of quality can. An exhibition bird must take a firm grip of the perch, and show off everything it possesses. A very popular judge, who would never be at home on a Saturday were he accepting all the demands upon his services, once, in my hearing, listened to a company of fanciers great on size. Knowing the judge well, I could see he was disgusted. After they all had their say, he told them they were entirely wrong, and rushed fact upon fact upon them, and ended by telling them that the big birds were coarse and could not be kept clean. I entirely agreed with him. The Scotch Fancy Canary is a difficult exhibit to keep in show condition—in fact, none more so. A big feathery bird, if it is to win, has to be dressed and faked, and that has to be kept up. I would like a nice big bird, but I think far too much is made of size, and that it sickens fanciers, who might succeed were they to ignore the silly twaddle that is uttered without knowledge or regard to fact. A stand will have to be made against the monster, that has to be faked every other week; and the Scotch Fancy Canary which can be produced in its natural condition, put in its proper position—namely, 1st, cup, and special. In other words—"Honour to whom honour is due."

A FANCIER.

PARTNERSHIPS AND EXHIBITING

SIR,—How should two partners' points count in case of showing? Should they be divided, and, if so, how should they be split? Should one have half the points, and the other have half; or should one count nothing? I should like to know, as there is a dispute about this matter, and if there is anyone among your readers who can throw some light on the matter, I should be much indebted to him.

J. W.

[Some societies have a rule dealing specially with this matter. We believe that, generally speaking, the points of a firm count the same as those of an individual exhibitor. On the other hand, some societies say in their rules, "Points won by a partnership will be divided according to the number of members in such partnership." We do not know that there is any settled ruling on this question.—EDITOR.]

THE BREEDING COMPETITION.

SIR,—I may say this is the first year I have tried to breed birds, and all I have is two pairs of birds; but from them, up to date, I have had 13 birds out of 15 eggs. Nine of the birds are feeding themselves, and four are in the nest with the mother. I think this a very good start for my first time of trying. With only having four stock birds I did not think I should stand a chance in the competition, as some will be in with about a dozen pairs. Shall I stand a chance with those? Next year I hope to be able to breed with a larger number. Will I be barred from the competition if I join a bird club before the competition closes, as I am going to join one next month?—J. A. URSELL.

[You have indeed done well. The number of pairs you keep will not hinder your chance of a prize, because the results will be judged according to number of pairs kept. I am pleased to know you intend joining a society next month. The fact that you are not now a member will not affect your chance in the competition. By joining a society you will much improve your knowledge of Canary matters, and it should help you greatly.—ED.]

WILD HYBRIDS.

Mating of Thrush and a Blackbird.

SIR,—A month ago I knew that a hen Blackbird and cock Thrush had mated and gone to nest at Harwood, but I was beaten to-night when I read the enclosed cutting in the "Bolton Evening News":—

"The pair of birds, Blackbird and Thrush, recorded as nesting together at Harwood, have brought out their young brood of four quite safely. They are now fully feathered and flying about. I examined them last week and found that one bird is a Thrush, one a Blackbird, and two nondescripts, or Hybrids pure and simple. These latter have black backs and partly speckled breasts, the speckles or spots not being clearly formed, but a sort of mingling of black and brown together into a sort of smudge, without any clear characteristic about it. While investigating this matter I find that another pair of Blackbird and Thrush have this last three seasons nested together at Elton, so it begins to look as if this was not an uncommon occurrence in our district."

What say ye, Hybrid breeders, to one Thrush, one Blackbird, and two nondescripts, or Hybrids, all in one nest, and all from the eggs of the hen Blackbird? Is this not extra?

W. WHITTAKER.

CITY OF GLASGOW O.A. AND THE McLEAN CUP.

SIR,—I notice in last week's CAGE BIRDS a letter bearing the signature of "A Fancier," wherein it says: "The narrow spirit which pervades the officialism of the above society should be stamped out, and we look to the President to do that," and goes on to say: "The meeting was stormy, but the Norwich section managed to carry their point, and that the McLean Cup is to remain with the City." "A Fancier" ought to have finished his story and explained the cause of the storm; but, seeing he has omitted this, for reasons best known to himself, I will enlighten the public on this matter. Prior to 1897 a certain club ran an open show and offered for competition a cup known as the "McLean Challenge Cup," for best bird in hall, to be won twice in succession, or three times not necessarily in succession, before becoming the property of any one exhibitor. Several fanciers managed to have one win on this cup, but misfortune befel this club and swamped their funds, causing the club to give up the thought of ever running another open show, and leaving them dead to the world. The members of that club, seeing their cup lay dormant, arranged to hand it over to the City of Glasgow Show for competition on the original conditions, and all previous wins to stand good. Fanciers well know this cup has been competed for at the City for the past five or six years, and has caused several exciting contests. But the latest is: A few members of a certain club have arranged to hold an open show, have taken a liking to the McLean Cup, and asked that it be handed over to them to be competed for at their show. They turned up in strong force at the City of Glasgow meeting for the object of taking the cup away with them, but were severely sat upon. Hence the cause of the storm. As to their threats as to what they will and will not do to the City Show remains to be seen, and I hope will be taken note of by fanciers at large. The City Show has stood good for over 50 years; it is likely to remain a show in spite of all threats. I consider "A Fancior's" remarks re City officialism quite out of place. FAIRPLAY.

HEN NOT SITTING.

SIR,—I have not had very good results from breeding Canaries, having only reared two from five nests, and nothing but clear eggs from Goldfinch, Greenfinch, Redpoll and Canary hen crosses. A friend of mine is doing well with Goldfinch Mules, having 11 young on the perches and a few more in nests. It is a strange thing to me that the hen he has paired with the Finch will lay all these eggs, but she won't sit. WILLIAM HINCHCLIFFE.

THE CREST CULT IN WALES.

SIR,—I was pleased to see the letter from J. F. R. in CAGE BIRDS, and hope it will awaken the interest of Crest fanciers in Wales. I should like to see a Welsh committee formed with the object of obtaining a better classification and larger entry in all the Welsh shows. I should like to hear from all the Crest fanciers in Wales who would like to make a move, as numbers mean strength.

F. P. DYMOND.

BRISTOL BREEDERS BUSY.

SIR,—From what I can gather, Bristol fanciers' breeding results are not very rosy. Our members are having varied luck. Some are doing very well, especially the novices; others are faring very bad indeed. Two of our novice members, from three pairs of birds each, have over 20 youngsters each. Personally, I am doing very well. From 11 pairs of Norwich I have 59 youngsters (50 on the sticks and nine in the nest), and six more hens on eggs.

C. E. BROWN.

THE SCOTCH FANCY MODEL.

SIR,—"Advocate of Model," by his closing remarks, fully confirms my statement regarding the letter objecting to the supposed model. He admits this slip of the tongue was correct. I don't suppose I shall hear many more slips in Greenock. I don't carry two faces under one hat, and am never afraid of speaking my opinion. Regarding my not having bred S.F., let me inform "Advocate of Model" I have already won a good ticket in a large open class with S.F. bred by myself in 1907. I admit I have bred many varieties, which has given me knowledge, which I require for breeding S.F. For the want of such, few birds appear to be bred in your town, "Advocate of Model." You are evidently a busybody, minding other people's business. I have written privately to all my friends in Greenock when I am coming your way. You object to me beating about the bush as to a certain Derby, do you? Well, if you are fit to advocate a model, I have said enough about the matter personally, and through the press, for any ordinary person to find out my meaning in the town where it occurred. In Scotland, last year, two fanciers were brought before meeting after meeting till it was a crying shame, and now another case of the same kind has occurred. Mark, I do not name the town, or Derby, and I will give you no further information until you have the courage to sign your name, and then will only give such information on condition, with the Editor's consent, it is duly published in CAGE BIRDS. Now, "Advocate of Model," you appear to be very funny in your opening remarks. Don't be like "'Umpty Dumpty"—have a great fall. I can assure you that a fall is certain, only time wanted. J. HARRISON.

SIR,—In CAGE BIRDS for July 13th I notice a reply from "Advocate for Model," wherein he indulges in writing a lot of irrelevant matter, having no direct bearing on the subject whatever at issue. My aim and object on this question of a Scotch Fancy model has all along been perfectly plain, and I do not intend going back over ground I have already passed. As a member of the committee on the Scotch Fancy model, the thanks of those interested in the subject are due to Mr. Harrison, as the only one of that famous committee who has had the courage to defend his position as a member of that committee, and in doing so has given us some idea of the mode of procedure adopted in arriving at a standard to suit themselves. I need hardly say that much more was expected, and much disappointment has been experienced by those who have given their time and artistic knowledge with a view of assisting and bringing the question of a model to a satisfactory conclusion. The question will have to be re-opened again, and gentlemen appointed who will have no other aim or object but the good of the Scotch Fancy. As matters stand at present, there is no standard for Scotch Fancies. Each judge holds his own opinion and acts accordingly. It is well known how unsatisfactory such judging is. In a lecture delivered recently by that well-known fancier Mr. E. G. Wright, of Edinburgh, he says: "I am strongly of opinion if a standard is to be set up, that an effort should be made to convene a meeting, and that meeting must be representative of all our societies and clubs in Scotland. We will not, and rightly so, be dominated by any particular club, no matter by what name. We must have representation." Now, I can only endorse what Mr. Wright here suggests, and on no other lines can any satisfactory results be obtained. "Advocate for Model" would do well to give this subject some little study. By so doing, the results may not only be a revelation to himself, but, what is more important, he might be able to give some reasonable counsel or advice on the subject to further the object in view. The position the Scotch Fancy stands in at present as to a standard is nil. Do Scotch Fancy breeders in general favour the tight-feather model, or do they favour the loose-feather variety? I would be glad to hear from your many readers, through CAGE BIRDS, which is correct?

PIEBALD.

THE DISQUALIFIED GREENS AT THE LATE PALACE SHOW.

SIR,—In your issue of July 13th Mr. Clayton boldly states that his appeal to the C.B.U. was carried unanimously, and that it was generally understood by the Executive that prize money would follow automatically on the quashing of the disqualification. I regret to have to differ with Mr. Clayton. If his statement is correct, why on earth did not the Council show their courage by boldly stating that the appeal was allowed, and the disqualification quashed? Then both Mr. Clayton and myself would have known where we were. Mr. Lythgoe, in sending me the result of the meeting and a copy of the resolution passed (writing to me as Show Manager), remarks—on April 28th and 29th:—"This (the resolution) took a lot of drafting and settling, so as to let the judge down gently. . . . The general opinion seemed to be that, if the feathers were cut, they had not been done with the cognizance of the exhibitors. . . . The resolution is very vague and non-committal." Now, Sir, as I could not understand this very vague and non-committal resolution, I immediately applied to Mr. Tweed, Hon. Solicitor to the C.B.U., for his advice, and Mr. Tweed replied that in his view "the resolution passed by the ex-Council of the C.B.U. merely exonerates the exhibitors from any imputation of fraud, but does not over-rule the disqualification of the birds." My committee took the same view as Mr. Tweed, and, after further legal advice, decided not to pay Mr. Clayton, but to promote the birds standing under him and pay prize money accordingly. That the decision of the C.B.U. was an unsatisfactory one I freely admit, and on this point Mr. Clayton has my sympathy. I have a mass of correspondence relative to this case, which, if published, would astonish your readers; but as most of it was received by me in my capacity of a councillor of the C.B.U., I doubt if I should be justified in publishing it. Mr. Hadwin, on being written to re judges at the next Palace Show, replies:—"I am sorry to inform you that Messrs. Mundell and Heath are not eligible to judge the Greens this year." I should like to know why these gentlemen are not eligible. For the honour of the G.C.A. I hope it is not because they did their duty and disqualified birds they honestly believed to have been trimmed.

J. W. RAMSDEN.

THE C.B.U. AND LLANDILO SHOW.

SIR,—Through your columns I should like to thank the chairman of the Llandilo Society for the very prompt manner in which he acted as regards the special, which was sent off the same day as my letter appeared, thus proving once more the value of the Press.

With regard to Mr. Lythgoe's letter anent the eight weeks' "dilatoriness," I still maintain it, and he gives a poor excuse. One would have thought that he would have written to Mr. Roehuck saying that he had written to the Llandilo Secretary, and, in the event of Mr. Roebuck not getting the special, he was to write and let him know. As Mr. Lythgoe did not write to Mr. Roebuck, I fail to see how he could naturally assume that the special had been forwarded. If he did not think so, why did he not return the prize cards, etc.? Also in his letter Mr. Lythgoe gives us further proof of his dilatoriness—"six months" this time—for we find that he has not received the money for the show rules he supplied last January. One would naturally think that Mr. Lythgoe, being a business man, that he would have received the money first before he sent the rules out, and I would suggest to him that in future he does so, which would save his valuable time and the C.B.U. postage. Without casting any reflection on anyone, I should like to ask the following question:—How is it that the C.B.U. have no treasurer?

J. W. NORRIS.

SIR,—The special at Llandilo Show which Mr. Lythgoe, of the C.B.U., and Mr. Norris, of the Roller Club, have been writing about is the fault of the Secretary, Mr. D. O. Jones, and the Chairman, Mr. Hopkins. All letters that the Secretary has received since the last show have not been shown to any of the committee. The special that was won by Mr. Roehuck was given by Mr. Edwards, Railway Tavern Hotel, who took the special to the Chairman a few days after the show, as the Chairman had undertaken to send all specials away, and he is the only one to blame for not sending same away. Re Mr. Lythgoe's letter in CAGE BIRDS of July 20th, that he has not yet received payment for C.B.U. Rules, I may say that the matter will be looked into at once, as we intend calling a meeting on Monday, July 22nd, to see if we can work the show better another year. Up to now we have not seen the balance-sheet. Hoping Mr. Lythgoe will look over the delay, as there is no fault on the committee.

H. GRIFFITHS.

THE CAGE BIRD UNION.

District No. 12.

SIR,—The result of the voting for election of a representative to the Executive Council for this district, rendered vacant by Messrs. Crabb and Hodson not accepting office, is as follows:—Mr. Vale, two votes; Messrs. Colman, Hazell, Martin, Maddison, and Warr, one each. For Chairman and Secretary for No. 12 District Committee Mr. Vale is elected with three votes; Mr. Maddison received two, and Messrs. Hodson and Spowage one each. Mr. Martin is re-elected Secretary unanimously. Seven voting papers were returned in each case.

COAL TAR AS A CURE FOR ASTHMA IN CAGE BIRDS.

SIR,—I have been a reader of CAGE BIRDS for the last three years, and it is amusing to read some of the correspondence at times. As regards the coal tar question, I can say that coal tar is a sure cure. I had a bird come out of the moult last September with asthma, and I tried all the tips that were published until the coal tar was first mentioned, but with no good result. I got some oil of coal tar from a chemist, thinking it would be what was meant in the first letter; but it did no good. I read Miss Bushnell's first letter, and I went in a hurry to the chemist's with CAGE BIRDS in my hand to let him see what was wanted. He reached a bottle off a shelf and put a few drops in some water. There was no mistake about the milky-white colour. I got three pennyworth, and treated the bird for a fortnight with it—five drops a day in two tablespoonfuls of water—and he is singing good now. If S. H. George will get the coal tar and try it in water, he will see where the milky-white colour comes in.

W. CARRINGTON.

SIR,—Seeing several enquiries lately in CAGE BIRDS re tar for asthma in cage birds, I thought a few notes might be of use to your correspondents. The coal tar which turns milky on adding to water is solution of coal tar, and is used mostly in skin diseases, eczema, etc. The ordinary tar of commerce is prepared by destructive distillation of different species of pine woods, and is called Stockholm tar. What I generally use myself is syrup of tar, 20 drops, and one drop of the solution of tar; mix and add to the drinking water. Shall be very pleased to give any further information to any of your contributors.

S. CROOK.

SIR,—In answer to Mr. George re Dutch Drops, I may say I have used them for years, with most satisfactory results. They are not only good for asthma, but several other complaints, such as liver trouble, inflammation, chills, etc. We have imported them from Rotterdam for the last ten years, and when I say we run through something like 500 dozen per annum, you can form an idea how extensively they are used; in fact, they will cure anything but a broken leg. I am herewith sending you, Mr. Editor, a sample of this world-renowned remedy.

THOS. BURTON.

SIR,—I have read with interest the various letters re solution of coal tar (Liq. Reci Carbona B.P., 1898) in your columns. I know from experience a lot of chemists don't keep same, especially in country places. I may say the wholesale price of solution of coal tar is 4s. per lb., and any of your readers should be able to buy same at 4d. an ounce from any chemist who keeps it.

A. ROTHWELL.

SIR,—I think asthma, and in fact all kindred ailments, is a question of germs and air. Birds, like everything else, must have pure air and clean bodies, and I shall be glad to forward address of a firm who have a preparation of a tarry nature which, for washing out the cages and their inmates, has no superior. A shilling bottle of their preparation makes about 50 gallons, and, being absolutely non-poisonous and good, it should be tried. I don't want to be an advertising medium, but your readers can have it by sending ½d. stamp.

GETTING BRITISH BIRDS ON TO SEED.

SIR,—Now that the catching season will soon be upon us again, a few hints on how to get British birds on to seed may be useful to your readers. When first caged, get a piece of their favourite food, such as groundsel, shepherd's purse, etc. Now dip this in water, and then amongst your canary, teasel and other seeds, and put it into the cage; also be sure they are getting at the drinking water. Even though one puts the drinking vessel inside the cage, many of the birds don't know how to get at it. If after a time they look a bit dumpy, catch them gently and dip their bills into the drinking dish, when you will be surprised how greedily most of them will take it.

BORDER COUNTIES NORWICH AND CINNAMON CLUB.

SIR,—I beg to acknowledge receipt of 5s. from our President, Mr. Macdonald, Wallsend. Will Show Secretaries see to their judge being a member at once? A full list of shows receiving our patronage appeared in CAGE BIRDS, April 13th, yet some Secretaries have not found time to make arrangements with me re conditions. Any show not having complied with rules by end of August, patronage will not be given, but will be given to shows willing to comply with rules. Anyone wishing to join must do so at once; fee, 2s. 6d. The novice gold medal is to be valued at over one guinea. Dr. O. Neill (Sunderland) and Mr. R. F. Rennison (Alnwick) have been elected auditors for ensuing year, in place of Mr. J. Patterson (Chirnside) and myself.

MOULTING BRITISH BIRDS IN CAPTIVITY.

SIR,—This question will soon be a momentous one. How to preserve the full beauty of the colour is the point which interests everyone, whether the birds are merely kept for one's own pleasure, or to enter the lists and strive for laurels in the world of exhibition. Provided only that the birds were fed and kept as near as possible to natural conditions, there should be no reason whatever why the birds should not retain their colour to the fullest degree. That it is possible has been proved over and over again by the exhibits of a select few clever and skilful bird-keepers. Good food, pure water, fresh air, plenty of light—i.e., diffused light, and not direct sun rays—is the best possible colour food for British birds. If the birds cannot be turned into an outdoor aviary to moult, they may at this time of the year have their cages hung out in the open air, out of the direct rays of the sun, for the greater part of the day, and will gain much in tone and vigour thereby. Kept under such conditions, I never found such a vast loss of colour in caged British birds as is often said to be the case, though it is easy to understand how such loss would occur in birds kept in small miserable cages, and with the blood impoverished by improper feeding. There are plenty of advocates in favour of the practice of colour-feeding British birds intended for show. The opponents of the practice are likewise a goodly host. Where the camp is so divided, the exhibiting fancier who hopes to make the most of his opportunities can only do so by a careful study of birds, awards and judges, so that he may gather some reliable knowledge as to which type of bird individual judges seem to favour. Then, when he wishes to exhibit at a show, he will be able to know which type of bird is most likely to score a win under the judge who is advertised to officiate. Personally, I do not approve of the practice at all, and consider it a pity that one should attempt to improve or alter the natural tones of British birds at all. A pity, because in the great majority of cases the effect is anything but an improvement. It is, indeed, in but very few cases that any improvement is effected, and in others the result is little less than a caricature of the real natural tone of colour. Still, when one will, one will, I suppose; therefore let them use a moderate amount of pure red feed only to carry out their purpose.

A PROLIFIC LAYER.

SIR,—In answer to Mr. G. S. Culpeck, re a good layer, I have a small Norwich Crested hen and a medium size Plainhead cock, both about four years old, paired this year, with the following results:—First round, five eggs; five hatched. Second round, seven eggs; five hatched and two dead in shells. Third round, six eggs; six hatched. Fourth round, six eggs; six hatched, now a few days old. This same hen and cock last year:—First round, five eggs; five hatched. Second round, four eggs; four hatched. Third round, seven eggs; six hatched (one egg got broken). Fourth round, four eggs; four hatched. This same hen, before she came into my possession, was the mother of about 12. Sorry to say seven of last year's birds died when about five weeks old, through my own fault, not knowing then there was such a valuable weekly in existence as CAGE BIRDS, that would have taught me better. It speaks wonders. It has been the means of saving old and young this year. I have recommended "C. B." to my friends with good results. My birds are practically cold-room bred, and old and young, when season finished, are transferred to an aviary in a cold conservatory, where they remain all through the winter.

W. A. CLARK.

CRAMP IN YOUNG SKYLARKS.

SIR,—The fancier of British birds who makes a point of rearing and training his own stock of Skylarks invariably finds this the greatest trouble he has to combat. His young birds may grow, thrive and fledge with the utmost satisfaction, but one day, sooner or later—and generally it is very soon—after they begin to run about and leave the nest, they will be found squatting on the floor, with leaden, helpless and stiffened legs and claws—pathetic and helpless objects, yet withal, apparently, as healthy and bright as ever. Freshly-caught old Skylarks are also more or less liable to be attacked until they get accustomed to cage life. Many theories have been promulgated to account for this cramping. A popular theory regarding young birds is that it is caused by giving too much water or food too moist whilst in the nest—a theory which would appear to be negatived by the freshly-caught old birds being similarly affected. Then it is said to be due to the absence of a turf or bed of earth to sit upon, as in a state of nature; but here, again, the trouble will be found to occur among birds with all these privileges. That which would seem most feasible is that lack of space in which to exercise and develop the leg power is mainly responsible for the trouble, which may doubtless be aggravated by resting continually on bare boards or sand. Acting on these theories, the remedy is fairly obvious. When the young are ready to leave the nest place them in a good large runner cage, wherein they may make good use of their legs, and cover a third part of the floor with turf, another third with soil, and leave the remainder bare. In this way the birds will gradually become accustomed to the usual condition of cage life by the time they are ready to be caged off singly.

CONCERNING CANARY-BULLFINCH HYBRIDS.

SIR,—I notice in this week's CAGE BIRDS a correspondent states that he has three fine Canary-Bullfinch Hybrids doing well, and asks your Mr. Weston if it is necessary to colour-feed them for show. The answer given by Mr. Weston makes one smile. Fancy seeing strong competition in a Canary-Bullfinch class! I have attended a good few shows in my time, and have seen one or two of these so-called Hybrids (?); but the Canary part of them certainly wants some finding. My advice to the breeder of those three birds is, put them on the bench as Nature has made them, and, if genuine Canary-Bullfinch Hybrids, they will get in the money without colour feeding.

W. DUGMORE.

[Our correspondent apparently overlooks the fact that there was a strong Canary-Bullfinch class at the last Crystal Palace Show. The reply Mr. Weston gave did not touch this point, however; it said "strong competition," meaning against Hybrids of all varieties. The question of colour feeding and the genuineness of these Hybrids are matters of personal opinion, and, of course, our correspondent is quite entitled to express his views.—EDITOR.]

A Few Hints on the Moulting Season.

By H. W. BATTYE.

As the moulting season is now just commencing, perhaps a few hints may be of service to those who have only recently joined the Fancy. Most of the old hands have some way of managing of their own, and these will not need advice from me. We will deal with the old birds first. Those that have any pretensions to show form should now be placed in single cages—especially the cocks, as they will be liable to start dropping feathers almost any day; and those who intend to be in the running next show season in the various competitions throughout the country cannot afford to give anything away owing to neglect or carelessness. It is far better to begin giving colour food a few weeks too early than to be even one week too late.

ONE BIRD, ONE CAGE.

Start off each old bird in a perfectly clean cage. Where the cages are on shelves or in a rack, buy some cheap muslin, get the wife or some lady friend to sew sufficient of the widths together to reach from end to end of the cages, then turn about one inch down at the top and hem it, so that it will leave room enough to run a length of strong twine through. Fasten the ends of this twine to each side of your room, and allow the curtain to hang about a foot or so from the cage fronts. Let it remain right through the moult, except when you are feeding and watering the birds, when you can draw the curtain till finished, disturbing the birds as little as possible. I don't care to clean out my cages till the birds have got rid of most of their old feathers. If the birds are accustomed to run into a show cage this should be done, and the bird be put into a quiet corner till you have cleaned out the cage. A better plan still is to have a duplicate cage cleaned ready, and run the bird straight into it. Never alter the position of any of your birds during the moult. Whatever position in your room you start a bird in the moult, let it finish there, if at all possible. Many a good bird has gone amiss owing to being removed from its usual place, especially if removed into another room, or even to the opposite side of the same room. Keep your room at as even a temperature as you can—say from 60 to 70 degrees. Be sure and avoid all draughts getting on to the birds. Give them regular attention in regard to food and water.

WHEN TO USE THE BATH.

Do not give the bath until you see new feathers showing down each side of the breast, when you need not fear to let them bathe freely. On nice, bright, sunny days put the bath on for half-an-hour, and if the bird has not had a dip by then, take it away till the next day, and the bird will quickly learn to take its dip as soon as you hang on the bath. If any particular bird does not take to the ordinary bath, put a shallow pot—such as an empty shrimp pot—inside the bath, fill it with water, and drop a small piece of green food into the water. This will often tempt a shy bird to go into the water, and when once a bird begins there is seldom much trouble about it bathing afterwards. The above remarks refer to birds that are expected to moult out show birds. The general stock may be moulted in twos or threes in good sized cages, or in batches in large flights; but birds moulted in this manner are apt to get damaged through some of the other birds being of a mischievous or quarrelsome disposition; some of them never seeming content unless plucking the feathers out of their cage mates. Further, when birds are moulted in batches, you cannot always be sure whether one bird is getting a double share of colour food and another none at all. Birds that have given fair promise of being above the ordinary I much prefer moulting singly, as far as it is possible to do so; but when cage room is limited this cannot be done. When a bird has a cage to itself there is a far better chance to get it steady during the latter part of the moult, so that when finished it is at once ready for the show bench. Young birds I like to keep in batches of from three to six, until they are from eight to twelve weeks old, getting them well on to colour food before breaking them for moulting. When about the latter age I select those that seem likely to make show birds and put them in couples if they agree, and if not I let them have a cage to themselves, leaving those that are not so promising to moult in batches. In this way there is far less trouble to those who have to attend to their wants. Keep a sharp eye on them, and should there happen to be one of the mischievous or quarrelsome sort among them, this must be caged by itself.

HOW TO TREAT QUARRELSOME BIRDS.

If there are a couple of this sort, it sometimes answers well to put them together, when they are nothing above the ordinary. When it is necessary to mix two or more nests of young ones together, a good plan is to use rings, or to clip a notch out of the inside of some of the flight feathers, making a note of the fact at the time for future reference, in case you may forget which is which. See that the birds have a good supply of clean, sharp, gritty sand given fresh two or three times a week. As to food and drink during moult, many men have many minds, and some are, or pretend to be, very secretive, and seem to think there is only one way to do the trick, and that their own. There are many ways that lead to the same, or nearly the same, end, which is to moult out birds smooth and tight in feather, and as even and rich in colour as possible. I will first deal with the drinking water. Some attach far more importance to this than there is any necessity for doing, as, owing to the very small quantity of liquid a healthy bird drinks during a period of 24 hours, whatever is put into the water can have very little influence on the bird from a colouring point of view. I don't care to, nor do I think it necessary to, use anything besides clean water, when a bird is in good health, for drinking purposes, unless I happen to have a bird that develops a big thirst, and begins to drink far more than is good for him. When I have one of this kind, I find a few drops of brandy, whisky or rum, say eight or ten drops in two tablespoonfuls of water, is often the means of checking this bad habit of drinking too much water. At the same time, the spirit has a stimulating effect on the bird. This also answers well with young birds of from six to ten weeks old that contract this habit, as many of them do at this age. As to the food during moult, in the first place let them be well supplied with good clean, sound canary seed as their staple food. At the time when they should be falling into the moult let them have a liberal supply of maw seed as well, given separately—say half a teaspoonful per bird every other day, in addition to their colour food, until they have begun to cast their feathers.

WHAT PEPPER?

There are several good brands of well-tried hot and cold peppers on the market. Some say you can get as good, or even better colour, by using the cold pepper without the addition of any hot; but I have found that by adding one part of hot to four parts cold the colour is far more lasting, and of a brighter and more finished appearance. I have tried both ways to test the point. One season I fed all my birds on cold (or tasteless) pepper, and got some very hot-coloured birds, but they gradually faded in their colour until they were ordinary colour. Certain oils are used by many in addition to the hot pepper, along with the tasteless or cold pepper. Some say one kind is best, and others swear by another. The safest and one of the best is sublime or pure olive oil, blended as follows:—4 lbs. tasteless pepper, 1 lb. hot Natal pepper, and 6 oz. of olive oil. When mixing your egg-food add to it one teaspoonful of sugar and two teaspoonfuls of colour food to half-a-pint of egg-food, well mixing together, and allowing one teaspoonful to each bird fresh once a day, or half a teaspoonful twice a day. I have not much fear of you being satisfied with the results when your birds are through the moult—that is, providing you give them regular attention, and do not think you are at liberty to let them be without colour food one day, and fancy it will not matter if you give them a double dose the next. When the birds are approaching the end of the moult, mix a little fresh-ground linseed with the colour food—not a lot, say about one teaspoonful to half-a-pint of egg-food. Twice or thrice a week place a slice of boiled carrot between the wires of the cage. These two things will greatly assist in putting a gloss on, and in tightening up the feathers. If the novices, for whom these few notes are written, will follow the directions laid down, they need not trouble about the supposed secrets said to be held so tight by the old hands, as I think I can promise them as good a colour as the average, at any rate.

Birds I have Kept.

By J. JONES (Dudley).

A Lecture delivered before the City of Birmingham C.B.S.

It has given me great pleasure to come before you to-night and try to explain in as simple a manner as possible how I feed and manage my different kinds of British Birds. As many of you are well aware, it has only been the last few years that I have taken up seriously the keeping of British birds, and during that time I have taken leading honours at all the principal shows in the country, and this last show season I have been just as successful, as the following winnings will show to you:—First and special, Dawley; 1st and special, Cannock; 1, 2, 3, Kidderminster; 1st, special, 3rd, Netherton; 1, 2, 3, Bromsgrove; 1st and special, Dulwich and Peckham; 2, 3, Bristol; 1, 2, 3, and special, Lye; two 1sts, 2, 3, Stourbridge; 1, 3, and special, Madeley; 2, 3, Dudley; 1st and special, Birmingham "members," 1, Nottingham; 3, Cardiff; 1, special, 3, Weston-super-Mare; two firsts, two seconds, 3rd and special, Cheadle; 3rd, Worcester; etc.

Before I took such a keen interest in British, I was for a great number of years a very keen and successful fancier in the Canary and Mule sections, my fancy at that time being the Belgian, Scotch Fancy, Crest, Norwich, Linnet-Bully, Goldy-Bully, Goldfinch-Greenfinch, and every variety of light Goldfinch and Linnet Mule, of which I have bred a great many the last few years, but I am running away from the subject for which your worthy secretary invited me here, and I will at once return to "Birds I Have Kept." I may as well tell you at the commencement of this short article, I do not profess to know any more than you have already seen written so many times in the papers devoted to our great hobby. First of all, I shall deal with one of my favourite birds, and one I have been very successful with on the show bench, viz.,

THE NIGHTINGALE.

The Nightingale, as most of you well know, is not a very taking bird to look at, in its somewhat sombre brown coat, but still, at the same time, one in good condition and plumage is well worth all the attention that has to be bestowed on it. For we know they are not so easy to keep as some of the common seed eaters are. We cannot give them a good feed one day, and then miss the next, for if we do they soon begin to puff up and look very thick. The "'Gale," as a general rule, takes very easily to cage life, and also is very easily tamed. I know of no bird that takes such a liking to those who feed and look after it than does "the king of all the songsters." The Nightingales always expect some little "bit-bit" when you enter their room, in the shape of a good fat spider, a nice clean gentle, or a fat mealworm. All seem to come alike to them. With regard to their feeding, I do not put much faith in any of the so-called prepared foods we see advertised so much. I like to make my food myself fresh every day. The way I prepare it is as follows:—Hard boiled egg, dried flies, ant's eggs, made crumbly moist with a grated carrot, or a mashed potato, and for a change, in place of the carrot, an apple minced up very fine is good. Once a week, when grinding the egg, add a small piece of cuttle fish bone, and grind up very fine with it.

NEVER OMIT THE EGG.

Now, take my advice, and whatever you decide to omit from their daily fare, do not omit the egg. If you do you will soon be in want of another "'Gale." I have tried my very best to keep them without it, but find I cannot do so. Now, with regard to live foods. The mealworm is the most generally used by fanciers, as you can get them very cheap, and they are very easy to breed. After that comes gentles, wasp grub, live ants, and their eggs. Always make a practice of keeping a good stock of live ants by you, and then if your Nightingale goes off his feed you can get nothing finer than these to pull him round. Some fanciers' advice, as soon as he goes off his feed, is to give him as many mealworms as he will eat. This is why we lose nearly all our "'Gales." As most of you are aware, they will eat mealworms till you cannot get them to eat anything else, and then they get fat and puffed up, which, no doubt, tends to throw them into fits and causes them to pine slowly away. If you have a good supply of live ants by you, as I advise, two or three spoonsful a day will soon pull them round again, and at the same time, will not purge them like the mealworms do, for we know mealworms are purging.

COLLECT THE WASPS' NESTS.

Always make a point of getting as many wasps' nests as you can when they are in season, and then, with a good supply of gentles, you will be able to put the mealworms away till the winter comes round, when there is not so much live food to be had. I will tell you the way I keep my ants. I keep them in tin cans, and once a week I sprinkle a little sugar over them, and anything green they seem to thrive well on. You will find a spoonful of these every day will work wonders with your bird.

With regards to green foods. I find the best to be lettuce, chopped up very fine, and mixed with the other food. A small spray of watercress, hung in the wires they relish very much indeed. I have tried them with groundsel, but they do not seem to care very much for it. I think you all know how very good the common spider is as a live food for them. Always try to give them one every day. I think that is all I need tell you how to feed.

A NOTE OF WARNING.

One note of warning before I tell you how to cage them. Always be very careful with whom you deal when buying such birds as Nightingales, Blackcaps, Wrynecks, etc., and make a strong point of asking them how they are feeding them. I know full well, and to my great cost, that some men never meat any of their birds off while they are in their possession, but feed them on nothing else but wasp grub and live gentles as long as they are in their possession, and then never give them any water at all. Now as soon as we buy them we give them water the first thing, and if they do not drink to our liking we try our best to make them, and as they have not been used to it, it does more harm than good. They tell you to feed on plenty of wasp grub and gentles. You try and put them on prepared food. They throw it all over the cage bottom, then you think they have eaten it all up, and very often fanciers do not notice this at the time, but as soon as you stop giving them the wasp grub and gentles, they begin to get thin, fall away, and we soon lose them; for having not been properly meated off, they do not know anything of the so-called prepared foods, and they die through nothing else but starvation, although being fed on nothing else but wasp grub. I may say they will live and get very fat on this, for a very long time, for they never seem to tire of eating it. Young fanciers never find this out till they have lost all their birds. Another note of warning, never keep "'Gales" in a very warm place, for they will do very well in a cold room all the year round. I never have any fire in my rooms at all, and my birds are as hard and healthy as any you ever see on the show bench. The one I have here to-night has won upwards of fifty prizes this last five years, and whilst in the possession of Mr. Hingley, of Quarry Bank, it stood outside all the winter, exposed to all sorts of weather, and many a time was snowed up, but still be survived it all, and, as you all can now see, he is looking as well as ever he did, and is now clean moulted thus early in the season.

MOULTING THE "'GALES."

I always try, and I generally succeed, to moult all my "'Gales" as soon as the show season is over, and that is about the last week in January. For this purpose only I bring them out of the cold room into my bar, where there is a fire and gas always burning, and I find in the course of a very few days they start to cast their feathers, and by the second week in April I have them clean moulted and in full song again. The one I have brought here to-night has sung all through his moult, but this is the exception and not the rule. Give as much live food as you can while moulting. I think I have told you all I know with regards to feeding and moulting.

CAGES FOR "'GALES."

I will now describe their cages. Always have them as large as you can. Mine are as follows:—Length, 30 in.; height, 18 in.; depth, 11 in.; canvas tops, loose fronts, sand tray to draw out at front of cage 1½ in. deep, food and water tins inside of cage, doors at each end, and one door at front of cage large enough for a bath to hang on. I always keep the bath on cage, winter and summer, as all "'Gales" are very fond of bathing. Take my advice, and never hand wash a "'Gale," if you can avoid it, as their feathers are so very tender and easily get broken. Another thing, never attempt to pull a "'Gale's" tail feathers out whilst the show season is on, as it will take quite four months to grow them again. I have known fanciers do this when the tails have been broken, and then have not been able to show them all the season, through this one fault. For the cage bottom I use sawdust as a rule, changing same twice a week. You can in place of the sawdust use garden soil every now and then with very good results.

And will be sent to any address on receipt of a postal order for 1/-, post free.

No show secretary should be without this invaluable index to exhibitors all over the country. If any section be weak, reference to the Register of Wins will immediately enable a whip up to be sent.

"I have received the ANNUAL (part 2), with thanks. It might well have been called "Cage Birds Directory." There is no doubt it will be very useful in this way, comprising, as it does, the names and addresses of almost every exhibitor of cage birds of any note. It will also be very useful to fanciers when they are purchasing stock. They can see at a glance whether the advertiser has done any winning with his birds, and in this way save the cost of part 2 many times over.—THOS. ROBSON, 41, Shield-st., Newcastle-on-Tyne."

Unionism in Yorkshire.

An Interview with Mr. Fred. Hammond, Hon. Sec. of the Yorkshire Union of C.B.S.

Many is the kingdom which has been strengthened and firmly established by a revolution, and what applies to institutions of great moment applies with equal force to smaller ones. It is only a few years since the cage bird Fancy was riven by a revolt which caused much heart-burning and the breaking of many friendly ties which had bound together fanciers of the county of broad acres. When the trouble first began it was like the cloud in the sky—only a little thing; but from small causes do great issues spring. So it was in the revolt which occurred in the Yorkshire Union. Insignificant and of little moment, it nevertheless grew until it had lashed the Fancy into a ferment and strained the ties of fellowship not only to breaking point, but something beyond. Yet out of the evil hath good come, and to-day the Yorkshire Union of Cage Bird Societies is a sounder, stronger, firmer organisation than either of the two bodies which immediately preceded it. I am not going into the causes of the revolt. To do so would be to stir up matter which is better left to the oblivion to which it has been condemned. It belongs to the past—to a past which had best be forgotten. No good can come from the recalling of those incidents which caused the snapping of old ties and old associations, but it is rather with things of a more pleasurable character that I would deal—harmony and unity, as opposed to discord and warfare. The revolt divided Yorkshiremen into two sections, and each with that pertinacity and doggedness which is so characteristic of our northern brethren considered themselves in the right; and for a time, whilst hot-headed passion held them, neither could do right in the sight of the other. But passion quickly cooled, as it was bound to do amongst the sons of such a sporting county as Yorkshire. In a little while passion began to slumber, and then to sleep; whilst there arose a feeling in the breasts of many that the good old days, after all, contained much that they fain would have and which they most greatly missed. If there is one thing above all others for which Yorkshiremen are famed, it is their comradeship and sporting spirit. This spirit it was which caused many of them to regret the events which had riven asunder old friendships, and with that regret came a feeling that it would be good could they once more show to the world the united front which had existed for so many years. Friendship asserted itself. The heart spoke louder than the head, and stronger and stronger grew the desire to rest in the same camp. With Yorkshiremen to think is to act, and in a little while reunion was brought about, and that without the loss of self-respect or the breaking down of principles dear to either party.

A STRONG MAN.

I did not, however, take up my pen to voice my own opinion about the men of Yorkshire, but to place before the readers of Cage Birds a few interesting facts culled in an interview with Mr. Fred. Hammond, the man who had much to do with the bringing together of the divided legions of Yorkshire. Mr. Hammond has been spending a short holiday in London town. It was my good pleasure to meet him and have a chat on the doings of the Fancy in the land of the white rose. It is needless for me to say anything about Mr. Hammond's popularity in Yorkshire. The man who, whilst a leader of one party, was selected by the other to lead the van in the cause of re-union must be a strong man—strong in his own individuality, strong to labour in a good cause, and strong in the respect of his fellow men. It would be impossible to find any man more fitted to give one a true insight into the Yorkshire Fancy than he who, by the unanimous vote of 1,100 Yorkshiremen, has been elected to the proud position of Hon. Secretary of the Yorkshire Union. His election to such a post is a most fitting tribute, not only to his capacity for work, but also to the high esteem in which his abilities are held by his fellow-fanciers in the county from which he hails.

When I asked Mr. Hammond if he would kindly allow me the privilege of putting before the readers of Cage Birds some of the interesting and instructive remarks which I gathered in my conversation with him, he most cordially consented. With his full approval do I now set them forth, in the hope that not only will they benefit the Fancy generally, but that they may also tend to remove many misconceptions which have arisen, and thereby increase the popularity of the Yorkshire Union, and the respect in which it is held, not only by fanciers within the county, but by those outside as well.

SPORT LEADS TO UNITY.

My first question to Mr. Hammond, concerning that body with which he holds such high official connection, was—What brought about the re-union in Yorkshire? The answer came swiftly: the desire amongst many of the fanciers to meet together once more on common ground—the desire for the old fellowship. Whilst the two bodies—the Yorkshire Union and the Amalgamated O.S.—existed, there was a feeling of unrest, which was not conducive to that good understanding which should exist between the fanciers of a district, and many felt that the feeling of mistrust and suspicion would eventually work much harm both to the present and future generations. Wishing to resume the old amicable relations which existed between the older societies, they did their best to smooth down the sharp points which divided the Fancy, and to promote a resumption of the old friendly intercourse. Epoch making, however, was a cricket match played between the Windhill and Bradford West societies. That match not only led to the question being discussed, but it also paved the way to a settlement of the friction and the joining together again of all the societies.

Sport ever has played a big part in the lives of Yorkshiremen, and it was only fitting that sport should be the means of healing the feud, I remarked. Mr. Hammond, proceeding, agreed, and said that the chat at the match led to the desire to avoid the clashing of dates, and from that went on to the calling of a meeting to further discuss the question of re-union. At the express desire of the Windhill Society, I was elected to preside over that meeting. That meeting led to others of the delegates of both bodies, with Mr. R. Halliday as chairman, and the appointment of a joint committee of six delegates from each body, under the presidency of Mr. Halliday, to draw up the rules, and thus clinch the matter. This committee worked in the most unselfish manner, and conducted its proceedings on most business-like lines.

DEMOCRACY v. AUTOCRACY.

Your present rules are not much different to those of the old union, are they?—No, not greatly. The main differences are those relating to the election of officers, the novice competition, and the alteration of the rules—all of which have strengthened our organisation and made the present Union a much more stable body than the old Yorkshire Union. We have done away with the autocratic power which the old Council possessed in the election of its officers, the election now being decided by the vote of all the members, the voting being by ballot. In the past the Union was ruled in great measure by those members who, having what is known as "the gift of the gab," were able by their persuasive, argumentary powers to sway the delegates in council assembled, and not only did this apply in the election of officers, but also in the alteration of existing rules, or the framing of new ones.

In the old days, I believe, there used to be considerable trouble over the novice medal question?—Yes, and it bid fair to wreck the Union. In fact, it would soon have made it bankrupt financially, even whilst it gave rise to much squabbling and disappointment. We have done away with the old order of giving a medal to the winners of three first prizes in novice classes, and have substituted a scheme whereby we give twelve medals this season, and these medals being for points scored the whole season through, will keep the interest alive, and give us big entries in the novice classes right through the season. Next season the winners of these twelve medals—that is, the twelve most successful novices—will have to leave the novice classes and take their chance in the sea of open competition.

A GLORIOUS FUTURE.

What do you think of the prospects for the future?—Splendid! We are bound to go ahead. We shall make greater strides than ever. We have real Home Rule in Yorkshire now, and the fanciers are banded together with an enthusiasm that has never been known before. There is no fear for the future. We have done away with the old autocratic spirit. We are a democratic body, moving on up-to-date lines, with our motto, "Government of the Fancy by the Fancy, and for the Fancy."

There is a big increase in the number of societies compared with the old Union?—Yes, we have about half as many again. We now muster twenty-four societies, but only eighteen are holding open shows this season. They are—Oct. 4th and 5th, Halifax; judge, Mr. A. Hirst. Oct. 11th and 12th, Windhill; judge, Mr. W. Mundell. Oct. 19th, Skelmanthorpe; judge, Mr. J. Robson. Oct. 26th, Gt. Horton Good Intent; judge, Mr. R. Halliday. Nov. 2nd, Sandy Lane; judge, Mr. R. Sutcliffe. Nov. 9th, Queensbury; judge, Mr. A. Ambler. Nov. 16th, Denholme and Thornton; judge, Mr. J. N. Harrison. Nov. 23rd, City of Bradford; judge, Mr. John Greaves. Nov. 30th, Shipley; judge, Mr. J. H. Payne. Dec. 7th, Dewshury; judge, Mr. J. C. Barnes. Dec. 14th, Laisterdyke; judge, Mr. W. H. Shackleton. Dec. 21st, Bradford (West); judge, Mr. M. Broadley. Dec. 27th and 28th, Huddersfield; judge, Mr. John Dawson. 1908—Jan. 4th, Manningham; judge, Mr. C. A. House. Jan. 10th and 11th, Eccleshill; judge, Mr. R. Carr. Jan. 17th and 18th, Brighouse; judge, Mr. W. A. Cowgill. Jan. 24th and 25th, Gt. Horton; judge, Mr. John Broadley. Feb. 3rd, Keighley; judge, Mr. J. Wilcock. Those not holding open shows are Guiseley and Yeadon. Bolton Woods. Spen Valley, Pudsey and Stanningley, Bingley, and Wibsey.

There is also a big increase in the membership of the Union, is there not?—Yes, we have now some 1,100 members. The split, although much regretted at the time, has increased the Fancy greatly. It caused new societies to spring up and aroused great local interest in Fancy matters. For instance, at Queensbury and Wibsey the founding of new societies created a large number of new fanciers. Previously there was only about half-a-dozen fanciers in each of these villages; now they each have societies with about thirty members. In this connection I would like to say that my own efforts would have proved unavailing had it not been for the unfailing courtesy and assistance rendered by the officials of the affiliated societies.

MODERN IDEAS EXTENDING.

I notice by the reports in Cage Birds that you are coming more into line with other parts of the country—that you are not so conservative as you used to be. You are going in more for members' shows, rambles, lectures, etc.?—Yes, that is so. You are right about the conservative spirit—it did exist, and even now some of our most prominent men look with disfavour on the more modern methods, especially members' shows.

They will alter their views in time. Members' shows have made the Fancy outside Yorkshire, and they will give increased power to the Yorkshire Societies?—Yes, I believe they will, for in some of the societies they have created tremendous interest and enthusiasm. At Great Horton they have largely made the society what it is to-day. We are about the strongest society in the Union now, and I think I may fairly say it is members' shows, and the untiring efforts of our Secretary, Mr. Dean, that have made us so. We hold one every month, and the benefits are great in every way. Not only do they encourage the young hands to show, but they teach them how to show their birds, afford them the opportunity of comparing birds and notes with fellow-members, and increase in a wonderful degree the social side of the Fancy.

I notice that your shows this year run over a long period, and that one comes actually after the Palace. Don't you think some of the later ones will suffer by this?—That point was raised, and it is one which we are somewhat anxious about; but I think things will work out all right. We have so many valuable prizes to compete for now, and our huge membership will, in my opinion, prevent the back-end shows from suffering, because the competitions extend right through the season.

THE GROWTH OF THE FANCY.

Don't you think it would be advisable, now you have so many societies and such a multitude of members, to run two shows in some of the early weeks, and thus prevent the chance of failure at the back-end? For instance, such shows as Skelmanthorpe and Keighley, which are wide apart geographically, might be held on the same date without materially interfering with the entry?—We have considered that, but the great difficulty is the points trophies. That difficulty we could see no way of overcoming. I must admit, however, that, as the Union grows, something will have to be done in that direction. If our growth, numerically and geographically, goes on in the future as it has in the past, we shall be compelled to alter the present system, as we shall have too many shows for the number of weeks there are in the season. Still, at present, I think we are fairly safe to bring the later shows successfully through, and we can deal with the matter further when we get more societies wanting dates.

With the increased number of fanciers and societies, the quality of the birds has also increased?—Yes, there is no doubt about that.

WINNERS BRED, NOT MADE.

Do you think birds are more honestly shown now than they used to be?—There is no doubt whatever about that. There is very little dressing done nowadays. There is not the necessity. Winners are bred now, not made. That this is so is proved by the grand displays we see in the novice sections of our shows, many of the winners in which are equal to those shown in the open classes, and in a few cases superior.

How has this season gone in Yorkshire? Has it been a good one?—Well, it has, and it has not. I don't think, taking the average, that fanciers have bred so many birds as usual, but there have been some beauties seen out at the First Feather Shows, and amongst the older and larger fanciers who do not bother about First Feather Shows there seems a most optimistic feeling prevailing. On all sides one hears of champions, and that from men who know what they are talking about, and are not given to boasting. Many say they have bred the best they ever had, and some even the best they have ever seen.

With the improvement in quality, the price has also increased of late years?—Yes; the big trophies we have in competition, and the consequent endeavours of certain exhibitors to win them, has caused a big increase in the market value of winning birds.

A TRIBUTE TO MR. MUNDELL.

Then the spread of the Fancy outside of Yorkshire will have increased the demand for good stock birds, and these will have advanced in price?—That is so. The establishment of the Southern, Nortbern, Cumberland and Irish Yorkshire Canary Clubs, whilst it has done much to weaken the old parent club, the Yorkshire C.C., has largely increased the demand for stock, caused a rise in the price, and popularised the breed outside of the county. Here I would like to pay a well-deserved tribute to one who has practically made it his life mission—Mr. Mundell. For nine years has he given all his thoughts, energy and time to promoting and extending the popularity of the breed outside of Yorkshire, and no man ever deserved better of his fellows than Mr. Mundell. No one will ever be able to gauge the value of his work. It has been stupendous.

WILD BIRD NOTES AND QUERIES.

The Nesting of the Tawny Owl.

Where old trees are scarce, and consequently holes to nest in are difficult to find, the Tawny Owl will not hesitate to scrape a hollow place at the foot of a tree and deposit her eggs therein. This bird is fierce, and loves not to be disturbed. In her rage she sees no fear, and will stoop at a human being as readily as she will at a dog or other animal.

Bird Sanctuaries.

Undoubtedly the best bird sanctuaries are the tracts of woods and plantations devoted to the raising of game birds. Although Hawks, Magpies and Jays are destroyed, many species of smaller birds nest along the edges of the woods in perfect security. One has only to take a ramble near these preserves to note the extraordinary number of young birds about. Even the Hawks and other large birds often manage to rear a brood in the depths of the big woods, for it is the busy time with the keeper, and, after he has secured enough game eggs for his purpose, he has quite enough to do to attend to his charges, so does not trouble to hunt down the larger birds, providing they do not interfere with his young Partridges and Pheasants.

Ostrich Hunt at Buxton.

Residents in the neighbourhood of Corbar, Buxton, on June 19th, were treated to the unusual spectacle of an Ostrich hunt. Mr. Statter, son of Mr. Thomas Statter, late agent for the Earl of Derby, who has recently returned from South Africa, brought with him several animals and birds, amongst the latter being three young Ostriches. When being taken to their future home at Brown Edge Lodge, Buxton, one of the Ostriches made its escape, and got into the open country up Corbar side. Mr. Statter and a number of friends quickly mounted and started in pursuit, the bird leading them a merry dance across fields and hedges. On one occasion they got it (as they thought) cornered in a field, but when they approached, it eluded them, and the chase began afresh. Up to the close of the day it was still at liberty.

The Whitethroat's Nest.

The scolding note of the Whitethroat can be heard along every hedgerow. The Whitethroat is an excitable, suspicious bird, and plainly tells us she disapproves of our presence anywhere near her somewhat flimsy nest. It is a rather deep structure, composed chiefly of dry grass stems, with just a whisp of horsehair for lining. Of natural warmth such a nest can have very little; the contents, either eggs or young, must soon get cold, and in stormy weather run great risk of destruction. Why some birds should build such delicate, open nests, and others take apparently every care to ensure warmth and comfort—even going to the length of building a roof over the structure—is one of those puzzles of Nature for which we can find no satisfactory answer. The hardy House Sparrow will often build a domed nest, and the delicate Chiffchaff do the same.

A Note on the Cuckoos.

We have heard the last of the Cuckoos, and many have probably left us for their winter homes. The Cuckoos are not confined to Europe and the Old World, but are met with in parts of the New World. The species are almost as interesting as our common bird; one, a black bird, inhabiting the Antilles, is looked upon as a bird of ill-omen, and is persecuted whenever found. This bird's nesting habit is quite the opposite to that of the common Cuckoo, for several hens will deposit their eggs in the same nest and apparently live amicably together. Another black bird inhabiting parts of India is similar in appearance to the King Crow, whose nest it uses as a nursery, deceiving the Crow by its extraordinary likeness; for so pugnacious is he during the breeding season that birds of other species are not allowed to approach the nest.

A Joyous Songster.

In a meadow adjoining my garden a pair of Skylarks are passing the summer months. Daily the cock bird flutters into the air, soaring high above the tall elms and lusty oaks. He is still in full song, his rich, silvery notes sounding as clearly now as they did in the early spring. It will not be long before we shall notice a change; his soarings will not be so frequent, nor will he remain upon the wing so long at a stretch, as he does now. Although this beautiful songster sings the greater part of the year, we are not quite satisfied with him; we wish he sang the whole twelve months. Like other pleasures of the open fields, the song of the Skylark will bear repetition; he soars and sings, and sings again, and we wait impatiently for his next appearance. When he ceases entirely we shall only then realise how much we are indebted to him for our enjoyment of summer; while we listen to his joyous carolling we note the sky, the trees, the waving grass, and all that helps to make Nature beautiful.

Loose netting, for all kinds bird nets, ¾ in. mesh, 7 ft. deep, 3d. yard; 9 ft. deep, 4d. yard; 12 ft. deep, 5d. yard, post free. This netting is guaranteed genuine thread, and actual measurement is guaranteed to every customer. Clap nets, 3 yards long, 4/- pair, 4 yards 5/-, 5 yards 6/-, 6 yards 7/-, 7 yards 8/-, 8 yards 9/-, 9 yards 10/-, 10 yards 11/-; all 4 ft. deep, made from ¾ in. thread netting and fitted complete with hemp lines, pegs, poles, etc., all ready for immediate setting. Full list of all catching appliances, one stamp. Every description of net kept in stock or made to order from the old-fashioned cod net to the latest fly net. All nets are made by men who are not only practical net makers, but have had a thorough experience in bird catching as well, and so know exactly what is required for the purpose. All the leading catchers are now using nets supplied by me. For months and months last season I publicly asked everybody that was not well pleased with my catching appliances to smash them up, and I would refund every penny of their money, but not one article was broken; this fact alone speaks volumes. All birds sent out are guaranteed exactly as represented, and are well on hard seed. I claim to be the originator of approval system in connection with wild birds, and during the whole 16 years I have been trading have never done business on any other terms. For genuine Worcestershire netted birds I solicit one trial, and ask to be judged by result. Kindly note address; by far the largest and only centrally situated bird stores in Birmingham—

A Real Live Question.

IS IT A BIRD YOU WANT?

If so, I will tell you what I am prepared to do. I have a large number of 1907 Birds and the Cocks are not yet in full song, but still I am prepared to guarantee the sex, and should by any chance the Bird not prove to be a Cock I will exchange any time between now and January 1st, 1908.

My Offer means that I will return your cash or send you a satisfactory Bird if the one sent fails to please.

1907 Birds.—Pure prize-bred Yorkshire Cocks, 4/-, 4/6, 5/6, 7/6, and 8/6; Hens, 2/-, 2/6, and 3/6; Pairs (Cock and Hen), 5/6, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, and 10/6. Travelling Cages are charged for, 3d. extra.

All Birds sent out for Cocks bear my stamp, which is my guarantee of sex, and all Birds bearing such stamp will be exchanged any time between now and January 1st, 1908. The above terms are an absolute safeguard against the well-known Hen Trick practised by others.

Yorkshire Cocks for the early shows at reasonable prices. All other Birds on my usual approval terms.

For full detailed Bird Price List send postcard, or on receipt of two penny stamps to cover postage, I will send my 106 page Catalogue, full of useful information, and should be in every birdroom.

LONDON AND COUNTIES ASSOC. OF C.B.

A well-attended meeting was held on July 25th at headquarters, "The Bay Malton," Great Portland-st., W. The President, Mr. F. W. Thorpe, occupied the chair. Prize money and specials won at the Young Bird Show were paid. The Treasurer presented his balance sheet for the half year, showing a balance in hand of over £5. Mr. Wright kindly offered a case of birds for the most points gained in British Birds at the Autumn Show. Two new members were proposed, and votes of thanks to both the Judges at the Young Bird Show, Messrs. Armstrong and H. Norman, were unanimously accorded. A judging competition in Yorkshires was then held, in which several members took part, after which Mr. Tringham placed the cards. Three prizes being offered it was found that the latest novice, Mr. H. J. Orme, had taken the first prize, Mr. Thorpe being second and Mr. H. J. Hawes third. The Secretary (Mr. R. J. Pretty) having reported on his visit to Henley with a view of arranging for the outing on Bank Holiday, it was agreed to meet at Paddington Station at 9.45 a.m., and proceed by the ten o'clock express. Fourteen names were given in, and final arrangements were left to the Secretary. An object of great interest at the meeting was the exhibition of two Kingfishers by Mr. H. J. Hawes, both of which were in lovely plumage and seemed very well disposed towards cage life.

CLUB REPORTS.

GUILDFORD FANCIERS' ASSOC.

The annual meeting of the Guildford and District Fanciers' Association was held on Friday evening. The President, Mr. H. Pike-Pease, M.P., presided, and there were also present Mr. Arthur Allen (Chairman of the Committee) and about 30 members. The Committee, in their annual report, stated that an increased interest had been shown by the public in the objects of the Association, and the open show in December, 1906, was a great success. The industrial exhibition held in connection with the show enlisted the sympathy of a large number of the younger members of the community and their parents but was not a success. The committee looked forward with confidence to the future, and trusted that members and friends who had given such valuable help in the past would do their utmost in wiping out the small deficit shown in the balance sheet. The statement of accounts showed receipts amounting to £226 11s. 2d., including balance brought forward £11 13s. 7d., entrance fees £93 13s. 9d., gate money £41 15s. 9d., sale of tickets £12 2s. 10d., and subscriptions £10 5s. 6d. There was a deficit of £21 4s. 7d. The prize money amounted to £104 1s. The report and balance sheet were adopted on the motion of the Chairman. The President, Mr. Pike Pease, M.P., was re-elected, and all the other officers were again asked to act, with the exception of Mr. F. S. Folker, the hon. auctioneer, who resigned, and whose place was taken by Mr. George Drewitt. Mr. A. C. Yorke and Mr. C. Turner were re-appointed Hon. Secretaries. The following were elected on the committee: Messrs. A. Allen (Chairman), Towers, R. Hansell, J. Jones, G. Tunnell, S. Stevens, W. Cooper, A. Williams, R. Philpot, W. J. Lympuss, Blake, and W. Edwards.—The guarantee of classes for the year was discussed, and the following members promised to guarantee classes: The President, Messrs. Blake, Jones, C. Pope, W. Edwards, A. Allen, C Turner and Avis. At the conclusion of the business the Chairman presented Mr. A. Yorke with a marble clock, subscribed for by the members in recognition of his services. The Chairman spoke highly of Mr. Yorke's efforts for the Association, especially during the show. The hon. assistant secretary, Mr. C. Turner, was presented with a barometer, and Mr. C. J. Parker (hallkeeper) was given a silver cigarette case and cheque for the valuable services rendered by him during the show.

ENGLISH AND WELSH BORDER FANCY C.C.

In placing before you the balance-sheet and report for year ending April 30th, 1907, we would ask you to carefully study the various items put before you for the welfare of our club, and we ask all members to cordially co-operate with the officials in doing all they can to improve the society both in numbers and usefulness. The classes at the various shows have been well filled—in many cases creating a record. Especially are we pleased to see "Gallant Little Wales" coming to the front. Last year we had occasion to regret the apathy shown by our Welsh members, but this year they have shown not only enthusiasm but ability to hold their own with the best. We very much regret the poor display made by our members in the International Contest, no doubt due in a great measure to the bad weather at the time, and we hope that our Scottish brethren will be able to fix on a suitable show and on a date when the climatic and other conditions are more likely to be better than they were at Edinburgh. At the same time we wish to tender our sincere thanks to the Scottish National officials for the very generous manner in which they catered for us both as regards classification and specials. The committee have decided to hold the International Contest at Gateshead this year. Mr. J. S. Wilson (Workington) is the judge, and the date December 13-14. No doubt our Gateshead members and friends will see that the birds are well looked after, and there is no question of the ability of the judge to handle our "wee pets." The classification will be as last year, and both societies will give £2 each as specials independently of anything that may be provided by the Gateshead Society. The general meeting at Manchester could hardly be called a success, very few members turning up, and the business put before the meeting was of a very routine character. Whether we are to take this as a compliment that things are going on all right, or to put it down to apathy, we leave the members to decide. We have received a good many intimations from different parts of the country that it would be advisable to divide the competition into two divisions, viz., North and South. By this means two shows—a Northern show and a Southern show—could be patronised in the same week and a very large amount of railway charges be avoided. The society will be able to give cash specials to each division, and it is hoped the members of each division will subscribe to a suitable trophy for competition. Members would, of course, be allowed to show at any show, but the points gained would only count to the members in their respective divisions. The members will be asked to vote for and against this motion for division. The cash balance of £1 17s. 7d. is not quite so good as last year, but when it is taken into consideration that the cash specials were taken out of the funds it is decidedly satisfactory. The membership continues to increase, but not in such numbers as we could wish, considering the large number of fanciers taking up this variety. When will the members understand that it is to their interest—and it also ought to be their pleasure—to get as many new members as possible? No society can afford to stand still. The fight for the £2 2s. cup was of a very keen character, resulting in a close win for Mr. D. Jenkins. The novice medals took some winning at some of the shows, the "young 'uns" showing plenty of pluck. We were pleased to see the competition for cash specials was of a more open character than last year, and we think it would be advisable in the coming year if winners were given the option of a medal or some trophy of a permanent character instead of cash; this, of course, to be entirely at winners' option. In conclusion, we desire to place on record our sincere thanks to the donors of cup and novice medals for their generosity, and we hope some other members or body of members will do something of the kind this year. We also should like to congratulate the Novices on not only the improved numbers but the very much improved quality of their exhibits. We anticipate the novices of last year will during the coming show season give the old hands a rare old dust up. We leave it to the Novices to see that this anticipation is turned into reality. Rules and standards and all other information may be had from the Secretary, S. Hadwin, 28, Pembroke-place, Liverpool.

THE BENGALESE.

One day, on Peter's return from school, his little sister, Kitty, ran to meet him in an unusually excited manner, "Oh, Peter," she exclaimed, "a lady has called to see mamma, and she brought a little cage with something in it—white mice, I think, for I just caught a glimpse of something very small and white moving about, and I heard a little squeak."

"Hurray," said Peter, who was always ready to welcome anything in the shape of a pet animal, "I wonder if they are for us. Let's go and see the mice, Kitty."

"Yes," replied Kitty, "mamma said I might go to the drawing-room as soon as you came in, Peter."

The children ran off together, and found their mother and their sister, May, and a lady they had never seen before, taking tea, and looking at something in a small box cage which stood on the table.

As soon as the children had said "How do you do?" to their mother's friend, they peeped into the cage and saw, not white mice, but two tiny birds. One was pure white all over, with pinkish bill and feet; the other was variegated with white and fawn colour, and the latter bird was just then performing in the funniest way, stretching up his head and pretending to sing while he danced round his little companion, spreading his wings and tail, and showing off as proudly as if he had been a miniature peacock.

"What dear little birds!" exclaimed Peter and Kitty in a breath. "Whatever are they, and where do they come from?" For the children recognised at once that they were no ordinary birds of the country-side.

"They are called Bengalese. My son brought them with him from Japan, and as he has several pairs I thought you children might like to have these. I know you are always careful of your pets," said the lady, kindly.

"Indeed, we should love them; thank you so very much. We may accept them, may we not, mamma?" added Peter anxiously, for there was a strict rule against asking for presents.

"Yes, Peter, you may have them. But let Kitty choose first the one she prefers, because the Bullfinch is yours, you know."

* A True Parrot Story.

My father and I went to see the great bird show at Norwich. The boys were shouting "Catalogues," and it seemed like a voice of a boy behind me crying "logs, logs," for some time. Then I saw some people laughing at a Parrot, and I wondered at what they were amused, until I heard the Parrot shout, "log, alog," then I laughed at her; it sounded very funny. A lady said, "He will get the 'cat' on all right before the show is over, and say 'catalogues.'" Then one man said he once heard a Canary talk, and he grew very angry when all the visitors laughed at him. He said the Canary lived in a room with a Parrot, and the Parrot was taught to say, "Poor Willie is dead," and the Canary learned it from him. My father said this story may have been true, as the man who told it would not say so if it was wrong.—May Eagleton (age 8), 39, Leicester Street, Norwich.

* Poor Twites.

One day last spring my father had to cut down two old gooseberry bushes, in one of which there was a nest of four young birds, which I thought were Brown Linnets. I had a hen Canary at home which had been sitting on four eggs, but these did not hatch, as the Canary had no mate. I took the nest and young birds home and put them in the cage with my Canary, who made a great fuss of them. She reared the two strongest, and my friends told me they were Twites. They were fine little birds, but one cold morning I went to feed my pets and found them lying on their backs dead.—Annie Roberts (age 13), 30, Rother Street, Stratford-on-Avon.

* A Country Visit.

A fortnight ago, when on a visit to my grandfather, who lives in the country, I saw many of our wild birds amongst the trees and hedgerows. In the garden were a number of Chaffinches, busy looking for food. I also saw four very beautiful Yellowhammers, and many Thrushes and Blackbirds; but the boldest of all is the Robin Red Breast. One came into the house one day, and as it was trying to get out through the window I managed to catch it. It had a bright, bold eye and a slender beak, and, as I was taking it to show my grandfather, it wriggled out of my hand and flew away with a chirp. My sister also caught one in the same way only a fortnight before. My auntie says that very often one comes into the house.—Sent by Albert P. Morris (aged 8 years), 48, Breeze Hill, Walton, Liverpool.

THE SHOWS.

EAST BOWLING.

The above association held their Members' Show on July 27th, for Canaries in their first feather, at the Barley Mow, East Bowling. The entry was a very good one, and some very promising young birds were staged. Mr. J. Greaves officiated as judge, and gave every satisfaction. The points gained count for gold medals and silver medals, and other prizes which are to be given in the competition for the year. YELL. YORKS.: 1, Crowther; 2, Firth; 3, Atkinson; 4, Casey. BUFF: 1, Bleazard; 2, Firth; 3, Casey; 4, Warburton. TICKED OR UNEVEN MARKED: 1, 3, Casey; 2, Atkinson; 4, Bottomley. MARKED BUFF: 1, 2, Casey; 3, vhc, Crowther; 4, Varley. CINN. FOR.: 1, spl, 3, Dewar; 2, Miller and Eadie. Special for most points, Wilson.

LLANBERIS.

This North Wales Show was held on July 25th, some splendid birds being staged. Norwich came up grand. The special for best bird in show was won by Mr. E. J. Jones with a splendid Crest. Goldfinches came up well, Mr. J. L. Ford winning with a well-known winner. Mr. J. Bowker judged, and the awards gave every satisfaction. NORWICH YELLOW (12): 1, hc, Hunter, clear yellow, very nice bird, rounded head, carried wings rather badly; 2, E. D. Owen, good stamp of a bird, grand colour, feathered like wax, a close race; 3, Winniard, very nice clear yellow, good colour and shape, carries wings well; vhc, Rowlands. BUFF (8): 1, 3, E. D. Owen, large, cobby, saddle-marked, nice quality and colour, third clear, nice short bird, loses in head; 2, Rowlands, clear, good body, light in feather, and fair size; vhc, Jones; hc, Williams. CANARY, A.O.V. (14): 1, 2 spls, E. J. Jones, clear body, dark Crest, wins easy; 2, W. H. Jones, variegated Crest, very good bird, but loses in condition; 3, Rowlands, clear yellow Yorkshire, nice length and quality; vhc, Winniard, Gold, clear-capped Lizard; hc, Hunter. CANARY, FIRST FEATHER, A.O.V. (10): 1, Rowlands, nice variegated Crest; 2, Griffiths, yellow Yorkshire, will make a good one; 3, Winniard, bonny Norwich, should make a grand one when coloured; vhc, Evans; hc, E. D. Owen. BRITISH GOLDFINCH (11): 1, Ford, grand condition, good buttons and bars, good size, beautiful blaze, wins easy; 2, 3, Owen Bros., two good birds, rather out of condition; vhc, Tolcman; hc, Norris last year's winner, out of condition to-day. BRITISH, A.O.V. (4): 1, 3, Forbes, the leader a very good Bullfinch, wins easy; 3, Linnet, bit loose in feather; 2, Owen Bros., Greenfinch, grand bird.

STOKE NEWINGTON.

The Young Stock Show of the Stoke Newington Fanciers' Association was held in the Devonshire Square Church Schoolroom, on July 23rd, but owing to the disastrous breeding season and other causes the entry was not quite up to the average. We are pleased, however, to say that there was no decrease in the quality of the exhibits, which were, if anything, better than usual, especially the Yorkshires, both champions and novices. The special for the best bird in the show fell to a very finely-drawn yellow Yorkshire belonging to Mr. Preston, a bird which should moult out into a good back-end winner; the same gentleman's buff was also a sweet bird. This exhibitor's birds possess what many Yorkshires lack—good heads. That good old fancier, Mr. Sweetman, staged a team of nice, stylish birds of good length and well up on leg, but they were just past their best. A good typical buff won for Mr. Morris in the Norwich, and Mr. Penton once again staged a nice team of Yorkshires. Don't you think, though, W. P., that it's time you showed the champions how to do the trick? You have the birds. Try your luck, man! The pick of the Britishers were Mr. Pike's Linnet and Goldfinch, and Mr. Dowden's Chaffinch. The birds were nicely staged, and all the arrangements well carried out by the committee, under the direction of Mr. W. Morris, the new chairman, and amongst those working we noticed Messrs. Bagley, Soames Bros., Niblett, Spence, Preston and Sweetman. Mr. Dowden, the able secretary, was, as usual, the essence of courtesy and energy. Mr. C. A. House judged. YORKS. YELL (6): 1, 3, vhc, hc, Preston; 2, res., Sweetman. BUFF (7): 1, 2, vhc, hc, Preston; 3, res., Sweetman. NOVICE, NOR. (6): 1, vhc, Morris; 2, res., Williams; 3, vhc, Sadler. YORKS. (4): 1, 3, res., vhc, Penton. BRIT. GOLDFINCH (3): 2, Pike; 3, Sadler; res., Hudson. A.O.V. FINCH (5): 1, Dowden; 2, res., hc, Hudson. LINNET, ETC. (6): 1, 2, Pike; 3, res., vhc, Hudson; hc, Dowden.

KNOWLE (BRISTOL).

This annual five-miles' radius show was held on July 26th and 27th in the usual fields, and was once again favoured with capital weather. Our section made a nice display. The entries were not quite so numerous as last year, but the quality throughout was exceptionally good. Mr. F. Buckland, that well-known and practical bird exhibitor, again filled the post of hon. secretary, carrying out his duties in a most able manner, and fanciers can rest assured that their little pets received every attention in the hands of such a practical and respected fancier. Mr. G. H. Billet judged.

NORWICH YELL.: 1, spl, Tritem, good size, neat head, nicely feathered, brimful of colour, and well put down; 2, 3, vhc, Brown, extra neat type, splendid carriage, good heads, beautifully feathered; hc, Clarke, Kirby. BUFF: 1, spl, Tristem, good type and colour, in splendid feather for time of year; 2, Munro, a bonny bird, capital head, neatest of wings and tail; 3, Brown, a cap and wing marked, very good quality, put down in best of trim; vhc, Clarke. YRKS. YELL.: 1, spl, Haynes, neat and straight, good length, lovely feather; 2, Roberts, a smart little yellow, nice length, good position, well put down; 3, Newman, again good type, nice carriage, well up on leg, neatly folded tail; vhc, Bussy, Cook; hc, Hurst. BUFF: 1, spl, Haynes, nice bird of good position, grand head and carriage, little rough in feather; 2, Barry, another not far behind, could be better shown; 3, Lovell, a smart little buff, hardly ready; vhc, Roberts. SHIPLEY.

The Shipley Ornithological Society held a very successful Members' Show at their headquarters on July 20th. The entry was not a large one, but some beautiful birds were staged, the quality being of a very high order. The clear buffs and ticked yellows were each good classes for merit, and the winners birds that should do their owners much good later on. Mr. Matt. Broadley judged, and his awards met with a good reception.

SALE.

This society held its Nest Feather Show on July 20th at the Sale Hotel, and it was a great success; 260 birds were staged, and competition was very keen. There was a grand special prize list, which included a number of useful, valuable and ornamental articles, many of which were on view in the show. The committee are all good fanciers and workers, an dare fortunate in the society having such a practical secretary as Mr. Hardcastle, who was untiring in his efforts for the success of the show. Messrs. Irlam, Lee and Drinkwater worked like Trojans, and special mention should be made of two ladies, Mesdames Hardcastle and Irlam, who were untiring in their labours, which included the charge of that important department, the commissariat. The principal special prizewinners were Messrs. Hardcastle, Wardleworth, Smith and Irlam. YORKS. YELL.: 1, Bleasdale; 2, Hardcastle. BUFF: 1, Hardcastle; 2, 3, Bleasdale; 4, Barratt. BINGLEY.

The members of the Bingley Ornithological Society held a very nice little First Feather Show at their headquarters on July 27th, each of the classes being well supported, except that for ticked yellows. The quality was splendid, some rare good birds being staged. Mr. A. Livesey, the hon. secretary, had all the arrangements well in hand, and the fixture was most successful. Mr. W. A. Cowgill judged.

BRADFORD (EAST) O.S.

This society held another Members' Show for Canaries in their First Feather at Park Chapel Schools, on July 27th, when some keen competition was witnessed in the race for points, which count towards the gold medals and money specials that have been put up for competition this year. Mr. S. Dean, of Gt. Horton, officiated as judge, and found rather a stiff task in placing the winners in their respective order. The quality of the exhibits was exceptionally good, many of the birds showing great merit and prospects of better things during the winter shows. There were no less than 64 entries in the six classes provided, the class for clear yellows having 18 exhibits, which were hard to separate. Clear buffs totalled 14, another good class, and ticked yellows 15, the 1st and 2nd prizes in this class falling to two novice members, a very creditable performance. Ticked buffs provided another surprise, as a novice carried off 1st and 3rd in this class. The winners of most points were Mr. W. Cruise 1st, Mr. W. Stables 2nd, Mr. C. Cowgill 3rd most points. The following is a full list of awards:—YELLOW YORKS.: 1, 2, Cruise; 3, Greenwood; vhc, Hill; hc, Peacock. BUFF: 1, Farrar; 2, Stables; 3, vhc, Cruise; hc, c, Greenwood. DARLINGTON C.B.S.

Members' Summer Nest Feather Show, held in the Half Moon, Northgate, on July 27th, when there was a good entry. Considering the majority are dropping into moult there were some very promising youngsters in the Yorkshire and Norwich. We had a few visitors from surrounding districts, but would have liked to see more. The room is well lighted, and the birds were staged to perfection. Mr. W. Grainger acted as steward, and Mr. T. Wright, of York, kindly consented to judge.

YORKS. YELL.: 1, H. C. Carter, good quality, well upon leg, not large, but neat throughout; 2, Stephenson, plenty of size, nice quality, rather loose in feather, but close up; 3, Grainger, nice quality; 4, P. M. Carter, not large, but neat. BUFF: 1, Grainger, good quality, nice carriage, rather short of leg if anything; 2, Wilson, fails to former only in wing carriage; 3, P. M. Carter, good size, nice quality, but rather bad in feather or may have gone up. TKD.: 1, H. C. Carter, buff, A1 quality, neat throughout, pick of section; 2, Stephenson, yell., plenty of size, not quite up in feather; 3, P. M. Carter, good quality, nice size. NOR. YELL.: 1, Allen, good quality, nice size and shape; 2, Crosling, monster, good type and quality, nothing to chose from first; 3, Todd and Son, nice quality, very neat, but rather on small side. TKD.: 1, Allen, tick buff, nice quality and shape, good all round; 2, H. C. Carter, variegated, bold bird, good size and quality; 3, Allen, lovely quality and shape, not so large as former, but our choice; 4, Stephenson, full young yet. CINN.: 1, 2, 3, Todd and Son, trio of nice birds. LINNET: 1, Todd and Son, lovely bird, good sound colour throughout, well pencilled, not over large; 2, 3, Moss, nice one for shape, colour and markings; 4, Hildon, big bold bird, nice shape. A.O.V. BRIT.: 1, C. D. Cooper, lovely Waxwing, grand trim, looking well. REDPOLL, ETC.: 1, H. C. Carter, looking in the pink. GOLD. AND BULLFINCH: 1, Holland, Goldfinch, very fair specimen. MULES: 1, Heseltine, Goldie Mule, good colour and markings, likely to make a good one; 2, Lumley, Linnet Mule, good size and markings; 3, 4, Holland, former Linnet Mule, good size, latter Greenie Mule, make a good oue with a good moult.

CRICCIETH SHOW.

This Show was held July 27th, under the C.B. Union rules, when a very nice collection was brought together. Taking into consideration the bad season in breeding which we have experienced, we must say the officers of this show did not do badly when they staged about 70 birds. The Norwich were a fine section, also the First Feather, and the British, especially the Goldfinches. Mr. Thos. Burnell, the secretary, carried out his duties with marked ability, and was most ably assisted by Messrs. D. C. Ellis, Evan H. Jonathan, W. M. Jones, and the representative from the C.B. Union, and everything passed off most satisfactorily. Some very promising youngsters were exhibited by Messrs. Sheldon, Dorkins, Roberts, Cowell and Forbes, and with a good moult no doubt they will be heard of again at the winter shows. Mr. P. Proud, the well-known poultry expert, judged, and if the North Wales societies want to get rid of the several grumblers, they should provide the cage birds section with a judge of experience, the same as the other sections in the show. NORWICH (13): 1, 2 spls, E. R. Roberts, inclined to be beetle-browed, fair size, good colour; 2, hc, J. Hunter, a bouncer for size, trifle coarse in feather when judged, looked better at noon, a good one all over; 3, W. H. Jones, another yellow in his natural colour, well worthy of its place; res., R. Evans; vhc, Wm. Winnard, showing a slight frill on back, or would have gone up a bit; hc, G. D. Owen. YORKSHIRE (12): 1, spl, Geo. Evans, a very finely-drawn yellow, good length, stylish, good rich colour; 2, E. J. Jones, natural colour, rather soft, wonderful for length, rare back and flights, well on legs; 3, R. W. Roberts, buff, good colour, perfect back, lovely carriage of flights and tail, straight as a gun-barrel; vhc, R. M. Jones, good Cinnamon-marked, but in moult; hc, E. Jones. A.O.V.: 1, spl, W. H. Jones, wing-marked, dark Crested hen, excellent body properties, a clinking Crest for size, drooped down to perfection, in fact a real beauty, quickly claimed; 2, E. J. Jones, the Llanberis cup winner, another one of same markings, of better size, well rounded Crest, perhaps not so thickly built as the first-mentioned one, a very little indeed to choose between them, these birds were a credit to their owners; 3, Winnard, Lizard, clear cap, well spangled bird, good underneath, well worthy of its place; res., Jones, clear Crestbred, a slasher for size, not over well-browed, but will improve; vhc, Roberts. CANARY, FIRST FEATHER (16): 1, 2, H. W. Sheldon, two grand Norwich, not much to choose between them, both of beautiful colour, shape, and quality of feather, well packed wings, gets well over the perch, grand size and shape; 3, G. T. Dorkins, yellow Yorkshire, plenty of style, well up on leg, wings and tail well carried, will be hard to beat if moulted well, a gem all over; res., Roberts; vhc, Cowell, Forbes, Roberts; hc, Winnard, a grand lot, well worthy of higher honours in their own classes, moult them out well, lads, and with care and attention they will repay the trouble bestowed on them by winning for their owners at the forthcoming shows. MULE OR HYBRID (5): 1, G. T. Dorkins, dark Mule, clinking good Mule, waxlike in plumage, and in good colour; 2, Wm. Owen, variegated, full of quality and bloom, showing parentage distinctly; 3, E. J. Jones, another good one, rather wild when we saw him; res., G. D. Owen; vhc, W. Winnard, Canary-Bullie; hc, R. R. Williams, Greenfinch-Canary, both in nest feather. BRITISH GOLDFINCH (13): 1, G. H. Pritchard, very steady, rather dull in plumage; 2, Wm. Owen, this bird was badly staged, he deserved a better cage, he is a clinking good Goldie, possesses a fine blaze, grand chestnut, fine wings, and is grandly marked all over; 3, Owens and Bros., close on the heels of the former; res., vhc, R. Jackson, tho vhc will be heard of again, not quite steady yet, Mr. Jackson knows how to manage these beauties, and is hard to beat on the show bench; vhc, R. Lloyd, G. H. Pritchard. ANY OTHER VARIETY: 1, spl, R. C. Forbes, Bullie, a charming bird, grand cap, deep, rich, lustrous colour throughout; 2, Owens and Bros., Greenfinch, an old winner, and will win again in good company, especially in his own class; 3, E. Jones, Thrush, well spotted, fine colour and polish, will improve later on; res., Forbes, Linnet, fine nutty colour throughout, grand pencilling from head to tail, only fault to day he is ragged in the tail, which tells much against him; hc, R. A. Owen, Owens and Bros

CREWE O.S. & POT. ERIES C.B.A.

The second inter-club Nest Feather Show of the above societies was held on July 27th in the Co-operative Hall, Crewe. At the first show held at Stoke on June 29th, the Pottery men won by a margin of 47 points. At the second attempt, however, the men of the railway town reversed this order, winning by 103 points against the Pottery Club's 79. Such inter-club exhibitions are very interesting, stimulating friendly rivalry between the contestants, and considerably augmenting the "gate" of each society. We think if other Cage Bird Societies would adopt this method they would greatly benefit thereby. Some really smart birds were staged, especially in the Norwich classes, which, with a good moult, will be hard nuts to crack in keen competition. In the clear yell. Nor. class Mr. Roberts won easily with a very typical specimen of good size and quality; in Clear Buffs the same exhibitor was first and second, standing well out; in Ticked, etc., Buffs Mr. Rathbone came out first and second, the winner being a real beauty, good size, with a rare head and chest and nice quality. Clear yellow Yorkshires saw Mr. Crimes to the front with a bird of nice type and well drawn. Clear buffs was won by Mr. Goodall with a nice lengthy one of good quality, the same exhibitor winning in ticked, etc., yellow with a bird of nice length, beautiful type, colour, and quality. In the Border classes Mr. Hancocks ran clean away, winning first and second in each of the four classes with birds of sweet type and feather. The British classes contained some splendid exhibits, shown in rare condition. The winning Goldfinch of Mr. Heaton's, though a bit small, has a nice blaze, good colour on back and chest, and was closely pressed by Mr. Morgan's exhibit. In brown Linnets Mr. Crimes won easily with a bird of good size, very rich colour, grandly pencilled, and carrying a nice bloom. Bullfinch or Greenfinch was won by Mr. Potts with a fair Greenie, trifle small, the same exhibitor accounting for first and second in the Bramble, etc., class with a lovely Bramble of good size, colour, and markings. A nice Song Thrush of Mr. Hardern's was awarded first in the large British. Mr. Bowker's Siskin in the A.O.V. Hardbill was a bird of nice size, beautifully laced, grand colour and feather. The awards were made by Mr. Arthur C. Brotherhood, and the grumblers appeared to be all taking a holiday. Judging was over, cards up, and catalogues with awards on sale shortly after twelve, which speaks well for the methodical way the joint Hon. Secs. Messrs. Wilkinson and Heaton, went about their work.

GOOLE.

Held in the Victoria Pleasure Grounds, Goole, on July 18th, the cage birds being housed in a large tent away from poultry, rabbits, etc. While the classes were not quite filled, as the secretaries wished, yet we had some splendid specimens on the benches. The Yorkshire class was cancelled, to the great regret of lovers of this particular Fancy, but the Norwich were all there. Mr. Ambrose placed the cards in his usual able manner.

NORWICH CL.: 1, Whitehead, all right for shape and feather, not so hot in colour as 2, Axe, a beauty for feather and colour, well staged; 3, Duckitt, jun., a nice taking exhibit; res., Peck and Fawcett. TKD. OR VAR.: 1, 2, Axe, an easy win, hot colour and in splendid condition; 3, Waterland, not far out of the hunt, yet not in quite the same condition as the leaders. A.O.V.: 1, 2, Peck and Fawcett, two very nice Scotch Fancies, well staged, very fair drive and nerve; 3, Robertson, Border, in splendid condition, as lively as could be and tight as a drum, hard lines to meet the winners. BRIT.: 1, 3, Axe, the well-known Thrush leading, must have proved a gold mine for its owner, wins almost every time out; 2, res., Milne. FOR., A.V.: 1, Pigott; 2, Lambert; 3, Miss Sutcliffe; res., Jackson. SELL., 10/-: 1, Whitehead, Yorkie, cheap at the price; 2, res., Axe, Norwich; 3, Peck and Fawcett, Yorkshire, another cheap lot.

INVERNESS.

On Wednesday of last week the Inverness Ornithological Association held an exhibition of this year's progeny in the club house, Washington-court. The Young Stock Show was resuscitated last year with a view to bringing the local fanciers who were not already connected with the Association in touch with the committee, who are anxious to assist the less experienced fanciers in the cultivation of such an interesting hobby. Mr. Alex. Sanderson, president, explained the idea of holding such an exhibition. In the course of his remarks, he expressed his pleasure at seeing so many young people present, and exhorted those who were already budding fanciers to persevere, so as to reach the top of the tree. Mr. George Mackenzie, in proposing a vote of thanks to Mr. Sanderson, referred to the great interest displayed to Mr. Sanderson in the exhibition. Mr. Robert Gibb judged, and his awards gave satisfaction. Mr. Alex. Urquhart carried out the secretarial duties in his usual efficient manner. There was a fair array of Pigeons and Canaries. The birds were all more or less deep in the moult, but the quality was excellent. Mr. Stanford was first in the Norwich class with a cinnamon, which is very promising. A buff, belonging to Mr. Alex. Urquhart, followed closely. It is a bird of the correct type, and should develop into a winner. Mr. Stanford also had third prize with a somewhat similar bird to his winner. Mr. Meiklejohn came fourth and fifth with two very typical birds. In the Crest or Crestbred class Mr. Stanford had premier honours, the leader being a first-class specimen of the variety, and well deserved its place. In addition, it secured the honour of the best cage bird exhibit in the hall.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

Annual Nest Feather Show, held July 27th, in the Oldham Hall, Renshaw-st., Liverpool. Mr. A. G. Davies judged. There was a record entry of nearly 17, and quality was well to the front. Amongst the Yorkshire Greens some real beauties were staged, whilst the Norwich Greens, though small in number, had some very desirable birds amongst them. The feature of the show was undoubtedly the grand display of Borders. The President (G. R. Johnson, Esq.) had given a very handsome silver cup for most points in clear and ticked Borders, and this no doubt brought them out in such numbers. Mr. J. Waters, Altrincham, took the cup with a team of 24. Mr. J. Bretherton won the handsome cigar holder for most points in Greens. Novices, as usual, had a good time of it, the old hands, in most cases, having to take what was left.

The Rare Merlin's Nest.

Mr. T. Robinson, of Citheroe, has taken a photo of a Merlin's nest, on the Fells above Waddington. The birds that occupy this nest are the only pair on the moor. The nest was found in a clump of heather, and consists of but a few twigs of heather. The eggs are reddish in ground colour, and covered with dark, brick-red spots. The natural size of the eggs is 1.5 in. by 1.2 in.

FANCIERS' RAMBLES.

YORK C.B.S.

The members and friends of the above society held their annual country ramble on Sunday, July 14th. The party, numbering twenty-two, journeyed by the 9.55 train to Castle Howard, the beautiful Yorkshire seat of the Earl and Countess of Carlisle. On arrival, we were conducted by Mr. Chas. Young, who took us by way of Cramlibick over the beautiful meadows to the village of Welburn, where lunch was served. Soon after we set out for the famous old castle, the home of the Howards, dating back a number of years. Here we were shown over the library, picture galleries, and the world-famous entrance hall with its splendid paintings by such artists as Van Dyck, etc. After, by the kind permission of Mr. Harrison, we were taken to the aviaries to see the collection of birds stocked there, then by the way of New River Bridge, through Oakwood Woods back to Welburn, where tea was served by Mr. Thompson at the Temperance Hotel. After the cloth was moved an informal meeting was held. Mr. A. Richardson took the chair, and it was proposed by Mr. Gledden, seconded by A. Simeson, that the secretary, Mr. T. Boyle, see the L. and N.-W. Railway Company, and try to arrange an excursion up to the Palace Show next year, also to take weekly subscriptions from those who thought of making the journey. The Chairman proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. C. Young for his kindness in acting as guide. Mr. D. Hunt seconded, and Mr. Young suitably replied. He said he could not say much about birds to us, but he would give the society a special prize for our Open Show, which was received with thanks. After tea we set off by the village church to Whitwell, listening to the bells chiming, "Abide with me," and then we strolled to the station, catching the 7.45 train. Amongst the fifteen members present, we have bred 338 young birds, not so bad for York. On reaching home, about 9 p.m., everybody voted it the best outing ever arranged by the York C.B.S.

AN AUSTRALIAN EVENT.

The North Suburban C.I. Society.

The twelfth annual show of the North Suburban Canary Improvement Society was opened by the President (Mr. A. J. Walmsley) in the Brunswick Town Hall, Melbourne, on June 13th, and remained open till the 15th. It was not only a record in numbers, but also in quality, the cage birds making a very attractive display, and the largest ever staged. Many well-known winners put in an appearance. Mr. C. F. C. Rose, the hon. secretary, is a most painstaking official, and, backed up by a capable and energetic committee, carried out his duties in a manner which secured, as it deserved, much praise. The society's Crest Challenge Cup was won by Mr. W. Stevens (also G. Whaley's 5-guinea trophy) with a very nice bird, in lovely feather, and of good type. The Norwich Plainhead Challenge Cup was won by that well-known breeder, Mr. G. Whaley, Messrs. Warner and Rose gaining second place. The Cinnamon Challenge Cup was secured by Mr. W. L. Thompson, and the Yorkshire Cup by Mr. W. J. Myring (also several other prizes). In Lizards, Mr. P. Verey won all the prizes, his exhibits being most creditable. Mr. A. G. Boardman won in most of the Finch classes, and took a special.

BREEDING RESULTS.

Bolton.

Breeding results in and around Bolton are bad on the whole, but a few have done well. I consider that most of the failures might be prevented if breeders would only begin to prepare their hens early, and get them into their cages about January, instead of trying to do it all in a few weeks. I have 112 on the sticks from 20 hens and eight cocks. Last year I had 123 from 18 hens and nine cocks, while in 1905 I had 116 from 16 hens. Any fancier is welcome to call and see my stock, and take my methods of treatment with pleasure.

W. WHITTAKER.

Crewe O.S.

After a late start, owing to conditions of weather, the breeding commenced rather late, but fanciers have picked up a lot of ground lately, although quite a number have done very badly. Amongst those who have done excellent are Mr. T. Hancocks (Borders), who has over 50 on the sticks. Next comes Mr. T. Cremes (Norwich), with a like number, and who has been successful with a Goldfinch Bullfinch Hybrid the first time of asking. It is now over a week old and doing well. We all join in wishing him success. Mr. S. Fleet (Yorkshires), H. Latham, J. Heaton, S. Potts, and W. Bowker have also done fairly well, but taking the season on the whole, the verdict is only moderate.

J. C. HEATON, Hon. Sec.

Bedford.

The members of the Bedford Cage Bird Society have been fairly successful this season. Mr. Wiggins, the hon. secretary of the society, commenced breeding very early, using artificial heat, and has over 50 Norwich doing well, many of them half through the moult. Mr. Arthur Keech has over 60 Norwich, including some very choice typical youngsters. Mr. H. Gentle has not had a good season, but has succeeded in getting 40 nice youngsters from 20 hens. Mr. H. Markham, although not very successful, has also a few good ones, including the best young buff he has ever bred. Mr. G. Osborn, one of our youngest members, has over 50, including a good Goldfinch Mule. Mr. T. Smith has been breeding chiefly with double Crests, and has quite a number of youngsters, which look like making up well. Mr. T. Millard, another veteran, has a few of the right stamp. Mr. H. Gould and Mr. J. Corrie, and several other members, have from 20 to 40 each, chiefly Norwich, so that we may expect to have a record entry at our Annual Show in the autumn. Mrs. Gray, of Rothsay Road, Bedford, has a pair of Bullfinches flying in her aviary, which have reared one nest, and the hen is sitting again. Her Pekin Nightingales have also nested in their aviary. J. C. WILMOT.

Newcastle C.B.S.

Amongst the Mule breeders, Mr. J. Maddison has 14 young, one a clear Siskin Mule. This is the fourth year in succession that he has reared a clear Mule—Linnet in 1904, Goldfinches in 1905 and 1906, and now a Siskin. I don't know whether James goes in for sight influence or not, for amongst others he has an almost clear Linnet Mule, a four-pointed Goldfinch Mule, and several variegated. I would like to know through CAGE BIRDS if there is another fancier who has bred and reared a clear Mule for four years running, or even two or three. What have the gentlemen to say who go in for this sight influence? How many light ones have they bred, not counting the clear ones? Mr. MacPartling has a few young ones, amongst them four Twite-Canary Mules, all variegated—in fact, one of them has one light wing and seven light feathers in the other, besides being splashed on the body. Amongst the Canary breeders, Messrs. Currah and Son (Gosforth) have between 60 and 70 young ones, and some fine birds amongst them. They have the finest fitted up bird-room that it has been my lot to see. It is 18 ft. by 17 ft. Mr. Thos. Robson has got a few young ones, Crests and Norwich. Two Crests are very nice, and as neat as any that I have seen; also two or three real good Norwich, which he thinks a lot about. Mr. T. C. Crawhall has over 100 young ones, and I have heard that he has bred a good Crest or two, so we should see some keen competition amongst the Crest fanciers at our northern shows this coming season. Mr. Taylor (Melbourne House) has a few young ones, but this fancier has not had the best of luck this season. I learn he has bred a good Yorkshire or two. Mr. M. C. Potts has only six young ones so far, some of his hens refusing to feed after hatching. Better luck another season. Mr. Macdonald (Wallsend) has about 40 young ones, and he tells me he has bred a good Border Fancy or two. Mr. McCoull (Wallsend) has bred a few Crests and Crestbreds. Mr. J. Bertram has about 30 young ones. Mr. A. Storey has only four. Better luck another year, Andrew. Mr. Allison has only a few young ones. Mr. L. Stone has about 30. Mr. J. Hubbuck has had bad luck, only about six young ones. Messrs. Dobson and Son only a few. Mr. Leech has had a bad season. At one time he had between 90 and 100 full eggs, but very few batched out. I wonder what was the reason of so few hatching? Mr. Robinson has hardly a young one. Mr. A. Grey (Morpeth) has bred a few, and I learn that he has bred three real good ones. Another Queenie or two will do Mr. Grey; what say you? Mr. Harvey (Byker) has a few young ones, and a friend informs me that he has bred a real topper of a Scotch Fancy. Mr. Little is only having poor luck this season. Mr. Coutts has only 12 young ones. Mr. J. G. Hutchinson about 30 now, after starting very badly. Mr. Hindmarsh has had poor luck, having only 12 young ones. Mr. Young has between 40 and 50. Mr. Craig has got a few Borders and Scotch Fancies. Mr. Mackenzie (Low Fell), foreign bird fancier, has two young ones from a pair of Cockateels, seven weeks old, going on well. They have been bred in an indoor aviary. He has also had eggs from a pair of Red-rumped Parrakeets. I, myself, have 28 young ones, all doing well.

W. CURRY.

A Word for the Jay.

Waterton, the well-known naturalist, fostered a great affection for the Jay, and declined to recognise it as a destructive bird. He loved to see it in the woods and hear its harsh, cackling note. Its beautiful plumage—notably its azure wing bars—has caused it to be regarded as a fit object for the taxidermist's art. At one time scarcely a country cottage but what possessed its wicker cage for the chattering Jay. Of late years it appears to have lost its place as a favourite cage bird, and yet few birds are more interesting, its curious antics and knowing ways affording considerable amusement to strangers.

F. CARL, 154, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.

Mr. G. Gwilliam has removed to Annandale Villa, Seymour Road, Gloucester.

Our coming Show has been fixed for Tuesday, November 26th.—R. L. ARMES (Sudbury).

Mr. A. Wellings will, we hear, judge Egremont (Cumberland) Show on November 29th.

If you don't know what to put in your cage bottoms, see Foreign column—Pearson.—ADVT.

I am very pleased with Part II. of the ANNUAL. It is very valuable, and I think must have taken a lot of compiling.—C. BARWELL (Northampton).

Battersea Show will be held on October 24th and 25th in the Town Hall. The judges-elect are Messrs. W. Mundell (Yorkshires), J. Robson (the remainder).

I had many replies to my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS. Kindly thank them in the next issue, as I could not reply to them all.—M. HODGSON (Loughbrough).

We regret to learn that the popular Secretary of Jarrow and District C.B.S., Mr. J. T. Carrick, recently had the misfortune to break his wrist, and join with his many friends in wishing him speedy recovery from the trouble.

Hatched in the spring of 1892, a Brown Linnet, which Mr. W. J. Saunders, 47, Catherine Street, Salisbury, has had in his possession for fourteen and a half years, died a few days since.

The half-yearly balance-sheet of the City and Suburban A.C.B., which reaches us from the Hon. Sec., Mr. V. Wynn, endorsed by the Association's auditors, shows the highly satisfactory sum of £25 8s. 10d. cash balance.

Mr. J. F. Dewar has again been invited to judge the show of the Antwerp Society on August 11th. When will Britons return this compliment by inviting a gentleman from Belgium to officiate at one of our shows?

I have been elected Hon. Sec. to the Brighouse and District Cage Bird Society, in place of Mr. A. Morton, resigned. All correspondence dealing with the above society must be addressed to me.—F. MITCHELL, 9, Marion Street, Brighouse.

A gratifying feature of the London Young Bird Shows to date has been the excellence and number of the exhibits staged by the novices, their birds being in most instances the equal of those in the "higher circles," and in some cases even better.

The following gentlemen have consented to judge at our First Annual Show, to be held on October 12th:—Scotch Fancy, A. Paterson, Esq., Edinburgh; Borders, John Watson, Esq., Selkirk; Norwich, Mules and British, W. R. Dunn, Esq., Portobello.—WALTER B. SMART, Sec. (Loanhead).

I have received two entries without name or address, postmark "Llanelly." They are dark Mule Goldfinch cock and cock Bullfinch; both are classified right. If exhibitors will only write before, or day of show, the birds will be put in their proper places.—H. WILKINS, Secretary Kidwelly Show.

We are having a lecture on August 7th by Mr. J. Beswick, of Stockport, on "The Norwich Plainhead," writes Mr. S. M. Clayton, Hon. Sec. Rochdale Good Intent C.B.S. I should feel glad if you would kindly notify this (see Club Notices column), as we are doing our utmost to make our society one of the most progressive in this part of Lancashire.

A One-bird Island.

The Island of St. Helena possesses no indigenous land bird, but has a small water bird all to itself; it is a Ringed Plover, and is called the Wire-bird.

Jackdaw's Mal-formed Bill.

A Jackdaw was shot in the neighbourhood of Nottingham the other day with the upper mandible projecting over the lower about three-quarters of an inch.

Found Out!

The other week a Galashiels nurseryman is said to have found a young Starling in his nursery, and as the bird could not fly he took it to his home, nearly half-a-mile away, and put it in a cage, which he hung up in the lobby of the house. Next day he was surprised to see the mother bird fly into the house and commence feeding the young bird in the cage. This operation has been continued since, and the bird appears to be in no way frightened at the strange surroundings.

Serious Accident to Mrs. Skey.

We regret to announce that, whilst on her way, with her husband, to the meeting of the W.C.O.S., last week, that enthusiastic bird-lover and successful breeder of Hybrids, Mrs. Skey, was knocked down and her leg broken by a cab, the horse of which had bolted in fright from a tram-car. Mrs. Skey's injuries have proved more serious than was at first thought, and she has naturally suffered great pain; but, although she is going on as well as can be expected, it will be some time before she will be able to turn her attention to Fancy matters. Many will join us in the hope that Mrs. Skey will have a speedy return to convalescence.

Australian fanciers can obtain Ramsden's pure pepper from Elliott Bros., Sydney, and Felton, Grimwade and Co., of Melbourne. They will save trouble and expense by placing their orders with these firms.—ADVT.

Report of Nest Feather Show of the Wallsend and Mid-Tyne C.B.A., in Buff Yorkshire class, credits Mr. Heddon with being 2nd, which position I got. It should, therefore, have read, "2, Cockburn, stylish exhibit, close up, good wings, pipo tail."—WM. COCKBURN (Wallsend).

From Mr. Bowes, the Hon. Secretary of the Crook Original C.B.S., we hear that his society is making great headway, and that at the last meeting no less than 11 new members were elected. This is good business, and we wish our Crook friends a continuance of the same.

Morriston and Dis. C.B.S. Show will be held under C.B.U. rules on November 21st. A very spacious hall is being secured to hold same, with plenty of light overhead; and exhibitors may rest assured that when the time comes all exhibits will be carefully attended to. Mr. J. H. Payne will judge. Mr. D. Jenkins, the Border fancier, was elected a member of our society on July 27th.—D. JEREMY, Sec.

Reference has before now been made in these columns to the wonderful singing Linnet which is owned by Mr. H. Allen, of Leeds. At one of the last week-end contests in Leeds Mr. Saynor offered Mr. Allen £15 for this wonderful little songster, which is said by all who have had the pleasure of hearing him to be a veritable champion. £15 refused for a singing Linnet! Has anyone ever known such an offer to be made for an exhibition bird?

A sample of silkworm pupæ, both whole and ground, reaches us from Messrs. Trower and Co., 442, Caledonian Road, London, N., who have been largely instrumental in placing this valuable ingredient in the food of all insectivorous birds within the reach of bird-keepers generally. The finely-ground quality is especially useful, only requiring mixing into the soft food in suitable proportion, and being greatly relished by the birds. In nutritive value it stands high, while it keeps indefinitely, has no objectionable smell, and is reasonably priced.

HOLIDAY NOTICE.

Readers should note that "Cage Birds'" offices will be closed Saturday to Monday, August 3rd to 5th, inclusive.

Advertisers will oblige by sending next week's announcements to reach us by an early post on Tuesday, August 6th. Editorial communications should also reach us then.

Feathers Across the Sea.

Judging by the report of the North Suburban C.I.S. Show, sent by our Australian correspondent this week, our friends "down under" still keep their fancy for colour-fed Crests and Crestbreds, these breeds having both cayenne-fed and natural-colour classes provided for them. A Spice bird-Bengalee Hybrid is reported to have been on view, while there seems to have been a fine display of Goldfinches, both cage-moulted and otherwise.

Did the Smell Annoy Him?

While a motor-car was proceeding from Elgin to Lhanbryde, a Crow, after circling in front of the car, is reported to have suddenly wheeled directly towards the vehicle, striking the front passenger with some violence on the shoulder. As the partition screen was not attached, the Crow fell against a lady behind, its beak piercing her eyelid. The Crow, stunned, as it were, by the blow, fell at first on the road, but almost immediately recovered, and was to all appearance unhurt.

An L. and C.A.C.B. Outing.

The members of the London and Counties A.C.B. have, writes Mr. R. J. Pretty, received a very cordial invitation to Henley-on-Thames on Bank Holiday Monday from an enthusiastic fancier of that town. It has been suggested that a cricket match should be played, or some other means of spending a pleasant day will be devised. The train leaves Paddington at 10 a.m., and any fancier or friend wishing to partake in this outing is requested to be on the departure platform (No. 1), under the clock, by 9.45.

Nottingham in Luck.

A curious bequest has just reached the Nottingham Corporation, by the will of Miss M. A. Mason, a member of an old Leicestershire family. It is made in these terms:—"I also give to the said Corporation of Nottingham for the said Art Museum the last Mule Canary that travelled from Nottingham to the Cross Keys, Wood Street, Cheapside, on the (almost) last 'old times coach,' driven by 'Old Joe Pearson' (as the next visit I made to Loughborough, Leicester, was by railway). Also the two gadflies, which are also in the same glass case as the Canaries, and were caught at Prince Albert's Exhibition in 1851 at Hyde Park."

Shared the Home.

In a bird's nest, on the estate of Mr. G. S. Streeter, at Thornley-place, Bishops Stortford, were found eight Partridge eggs and six wild Duck's eggs. The birds had taken alternate possession of the nest.

My Little Wooden Hut.

In a small improvised wooden hutch, at the Clock and Watchmakers' Almsheuses, at New Southgate, there is a sleek-looking Thrush. It was found in the garden unable to fly, and one of the old ladies took it in and tended it. For some days after that another bird—probably a parent—brought it worms to eat. But when the patient had recovered its normal condition, the other bird ceased its visits, and the Thrush now chirps, "I wouldn't leave my little wooden hut for you."

Useful Guests.

A couple of Swallows have, it is reported, grown so accustomed to entering a house in Nottingham by the open window after flies as to become quite tame. They refuse to be fed, however, and confine themselves to darting about the rooms after the flies.

A Last Move.

I have had a curious instance brought to my notice, says a writer in a contemporary, of wild birds laying their eggs in other's nests. A pair of Blackbirds that set up housekeeping in an exposed position were robbed of two clutches of eggs in succession. They built again for the third time, but the wretched boys tore out the nest when three eggs were laid. Then the hen Blackbird adopted the Cuckoo tactics and deposited two eggs in a Thrushes' nest close by. Mrs. Thrush has taken to them quite contentedly, and we are awaiting developments.

Wanted: A Talker.

Many offers have been made by persons anxious to possess the smart Parrot whose excessive loquaciousness led to its appearance in a London Police Court recently. One applicant wrote from Wales as follows:—i see you have been fined for keeping a noisey Parrot now if you ar going to get rid of him as i have got a Butey full African gray with red tail and very quiet and tame and well climatised and splendid wistler and come out of Cage just begone to say a few word i should like one that is tolking, so if you ar going to get rid of yours please say how much money you want for a exchang if you will exchang i will garantee this a good Bird, and will soon come to talk we ar living in the country. We don't care what noise he make, or if you don't Care to exchange you mite recemend some one else that would like to exchange as i do realy want one that is talking now, as not much time to learn it.

Where's the Dove?

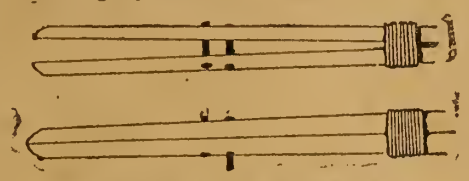
In order that the revival spirit might be quickened, it was arranged in a negro church near Savannah that the preacher should give a signal when he thought the excitement was highest, and from the attic, through a hole in the ceiling over the pulpit, the sexton was to throw down a pure white dove, whose flight around the church and over the heads of the audience was expected to cap the climax. All went well at the start; the church was packed. The preacher's text was, "In the form of a dove," and as he piled up his periods the excitement was intense. Then the opportune moment arrived—the signal was given—and the packed audience was scared out of its wits on looking up to the ceiling and beholding a cat, with a clothes-line round its middle, yowling and spitting, being slowly lowered over the preacher's head. The preacher called out to the sexton in the attic, "Whar's de Dove?" And the sexton's voice came down through the opening, so you could hear it far away, "Inside the cat!"

An Alleged Infringement.

Concerning the matter referred to on page 41 last week, of alleged infringement of Mr. W. Rudd's patented device on a breeding cage, we have received the following from that well-known Norwich bird specialist:—"Mr. Watson's reply confirms my statement that his sketch was a copy of mine. He adds insult to injury by absolute untruths. He states he only saw one small sketch in my catalogue, and that it did not show the working. How could he see one small sketch without seeing four more of them, which show the working to a far greater degree than his, as I show the door in three positions, and the nest-pan on? He owns to having seen so much—we now know he must have seen all. Where does the 'mere coincidence' come in? He cribbed from my catalogue, and wants to take credit that in no way belongs to him. He would have shown himself to have been more of a man had he apologised and said he did not think he was doing any wrong."

[Mr. Rudd's catalogue (page of which he encloses) shows five sketches of a revolving door, and naturally we regret we should have been led into publishing a sketch in any way approximating to his patented idea.—EDITOR, "C. B."]

ILLUSTRATED IDEAS



Under this heading we shall illustrate weekly some idea useful to the bird-keeper. Readers are invited to send us particulars of any novel and practical appliance of use in our hobby, either in cage, birdroom or aviary, with a rough sketch of same where possible. Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

QUICK-MADE FORCEPS FOR HAND FEEDING.

Sent by E. Eatock, 295, Lever Street, Bolton.

When young birds in the nest have to be hand-fed, a very convenient pair of forceps is easily made in the following manner:—Two suitable and similar pieces of wood (a little larger and broader than match stalks) are bound tightly at one end, and then pins are forced through in reverse ways and slipped, as shown. The head of each pin will hold, if pressed into the wood, but it must work loosely in the corresponding hole in the opposite piece of wood. Pressure on the pins will open the ends (which may be tapered) to take up the small quantity of milk-sop, etc., which can then be placed neatly and clearly in the gullet of the young bird.

CLEANING BRUSH FOR OUTDOOR AVIARY.

Sent by C. & H. Palmer, 57, Ashbourne Grove, East Dulwich, London, S.E.

My brother and I have a few birds in an outdoor aviary, which we keep up ourselves with our own pocket money. We thought of the enclosed idea whilst cleaning out our aviary. The drawing is that of a brush, which cleans the aviary out quietly and thoroughly. It is easily made. The handle is that of a broom; the end is a new blacking brush. A piece is cut out of the handle, as shown in Fig. 1. A screw is driven through the handle and just into the back of the brush. Now, it is easy to get into any and every corner of the aviary by simply turning the brush round, more or less, according to the angle of the corner. It can be used as an ordinary brush if put at right angles with the handle.

A Brush for Corners.
Side view, showing screw, and brush let into the handle; also view from above, showing screw-head.

IN THE COURTS.

A Fanciers' Society and its late Secretary.

On July 24th, at the West Bromwich County Court, before his Houour Judge Smith, an action was brought by Mr. Beale and others, on behalf of the West Bromwich and District P.P. Society, against George Hitchman, formerly secretary, for the return of certain books and papers, and also for an order for the presentation of an account of the moneys received and expended, and tho handing over of any moneys belonging to tho society.—William Mole, the present Secretary, said the defendant was appointed secretary on January 16th, 1896, and he held the position up to May 29th last. The defendant had in his possession a number of books, papers and documents belonging to the society. They wished defendant to hand over the whole of the receipt books, cash books, vouchers, and correspondence.—Mr. J. Clark, who represented tho society, explained that since the action was commenced on Juue 13th last defendant had handed over a bank pass book, a minute book, two cheque books and a cash receipt book. There were other books which the society had demanded, and which the defendant had promised to hand over. He explained that the defendant had been receiving moneys on behalf of the society. What the society wanted was an account of all moneys received and paid by the defendant since the last balance-sheet in 1905.—His Honour made an order for defendant to deliver the books and papers up to the society in fourteen days, and to furnish an account and hand over any moneys in his hands within a month, and to pay the costs.—"Birmingham Daily Mail."

HOUSE'S
CANARY MANUAL
Price ONE SHILLING. Post Free 1.2.
Superbly illustrated by the Champion Canary Artist Mr. H. NORMAN. EVERY BIRD DEPICTED IS A VERITABLE MODEL, and shows the breeder what to aim for. Some idea of the popularity of this Practical Manual may be gathered from the fact that under the title of "The British Canary," it has passed its Third Edition, entering upon a Fourth Edition of 5,000 copies under the new title of "HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL." MR. HOUSE has thoroughly revised and brought this work up-to-date and incorporated a chapter on the "Roller or Singing Canary."

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence to pay postage expenses, &c., otherwise their letters will not receive attention.

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

NOTE.—Readers are requested to carefully study past numbers and current issue before submitting questions. By doing so they may save trouble and unnecessary repetition.

CANARIES.

NORWICH PLAINHEADS.

Answered by J. H. PAYNE.

Noise with Beak.

Novice (Nottingham).—Your hen is out of sorts, hence her continually sitting on the nest and not laying. Take her away at once from the cock, as the breeding season is now over, and she will be in moult in a very short time. For the noise you say she makes, give ten drops of syrup of squills, ten drops of glycerine, and ten drops of best whisky in the drinking water, fresh daily, and continue for a fortnight or three weeks. Also put a piece of mutton suet between the bars of the cage for her to peck at.

Beaks Mutilated.

Broken Beak.—The mutilation of the beaks of your young birds was no doubt done by the cock when they were a few days old. From what you tell me I think you will find they will come right in time. Let them have a little egg food two or three times a week. I should advise you next year, should you use the cock again, to take him away from the hen and let her rear the young herself.

Not Fertile.

Novice.—I am inclined to think the cause of your having clear eggs is due either to the cock not being in good breeding condition, or else he is a non-breeder, but I cannot tell you for certain, as you do not give me any particulars. Is the cock in full song and active and lively; if so, then I think you may conclude he is not a breeder, but if he has been off his song and appears listless, and continually sits in one place, you may conclude he has been out of sorts. Part them at once, as the breeding season is now over.

YORKSHIRES.

Answered by H. W. BATTYE.

Weaning Young Birds.

Manxman.—Your young ones that are 26 days old will do well on egg food, but will soon start eating the crushed seed as well, and by the time they are six weeks old will be able to crack seed, when you may stop the egg food. (2) The one she plucked a little at thighs would have been better left with the hen another day or two, but it will have got over it by the time you see this, either one way or the other.

BORDERS.

Answered by J. PATTERSON.

Cinnamon Blood, etc.

Mug.—If you had told me full particulars of your stock birds, I should have had more to guide me If you have no Cinnamon blood in any of your stock you must procure a Cinnamon, either a cock or a hen. I may say that Cinnamon cocks are still very rare in this variety, and seldom for sale. Should you get one you will breed from say a pair of self Cinnamon cock and clear hen, marked young. They will be dark marked, both cocks and hens, but any showing pink eyes and Cinnamon markings would be hens. From a clear cock and Cinnamon hen you would not breed a Cinnamon chick, but by keeping a cock bird bred from this pair you might expect to breed a few Cinnamon marked and pink eyed hens. By pairing him back to his mother you are intensifying the Cinnamon blood. You might breed a Cinnamon cock, but may expect most of them showing pink eyes to be hens. Take a cock of this cross, pair to his mother again, and you will get an equal percentage of both cocks and hen Cinnamon marked. You will now have your birds pretty sib-bred, and must introduce a Cinnamon hen from another strain with a son from the last named pair. You will now have established a Cinnamon strain, and your care must be to keep the blood pure on the cock's side. I presume you have made up your mind to breed Cinnamon marks or self Cinnamons, if not so, and you only wish a little Cinnamon blood you need not go any further than the first cross. You will find a few showing back long afterwards. (2) You may consider yourself fortunate to breed so many good yellows. I cannot understand how you cannot get forward with your bulls. If bred from the same pairs they ought not to be so long and heavy. You must pay particular attention to the size of both stock birds, and pair them rather on the small side, and see how they improve. (3) I should not advise you to use any of your present stock for double bulling. You would be increasing the evil rather than diminishing it. Get a highly coloured, small buff cock, teemlag with quality, and pair him to a small buff hen, bred from double yellows if possible, and you will be more successful.

Eye Markings.

Black.—Yes, the eye markings should be as large as possible. They should break away from the beak with a sharp point, extend more fully above and below the eye, and finish off about the same distance behind the eye, with a slightly more rounded peak, giving one the impression that they were pear shaped. I am afraid the birds you have bred are only lightly marked, and, therefore, will not stand a chance against a perfectly marked bird, but the latter are seldom seen. (2) Yes, the eye markings are more difficult to keep perfect. The wing markings are not so hard to establish. You are quite right to pay attention to the eye markings of your stock birds, and what is more you must consider the points which their fore-parents had. (3) Yes, they are undoubtedly the most interesting to breed for, and I trust you may be repaid for your enthusiasm some day.

Faulty Wings.

Faulty Wings (R. Wallace).—This is decidedly the worst fault a bird can have. Let him go for a songster to someone. There is no way to improve a faulty wing carriage, either by pulling the wing feathers or otherwise, that I know of, and they are utterly useless as stock birds, as this fault is very difficult to breed out. The quickest and cheapest way is to clear out all this strain, and procure another good pair perfect in wing carriage. (2) All the washerwomen in the Kingdom could not make a frayed feather lie straight by washing it. You must pull such out, when they will come all right in about six weeks time.

CRESTS AND CRESTBREDS.

Answered by W. E. GREEVES.

Cold and Colour-feeding.

Novice in Doubt.—Continue to give canary seed to your hen; also scald a small quantity of rape seed daily. This may be done by putting a small quantity of rape seed in an egg-cup, over which pour a little boiling water. Let this stand until cold, then take the seed and put it in a piece of muslin and well rinse in cold water. When so done, take all the moisture from the seed with a cloth, when it is ready to give the bird; add a small sprinkling of groats. Also give bread and milk, over which put a few drops of syrup of tolu, and add to the drinking water six drops of whisky. Continue this until the bird gets quite well. It is very pleasing to the eye to have your birds a deep, rich colour, but in the Crested variety this is of little value. Given two birds with equal crests (the most important point in this variety), colour would be an advantage, but it would be useless showing your young Crest cock unless the crest is large and a good shape.

LIZARDS.

Answered by BARKER CLEGG.

Lump under the Eye.

J. Welch.—It is a cyst of matter, which has probably been caused by one of the parent birds pecking at the youngster in the nest, evidently desiring to force it out, so as to prepare for nesting again. Take the bird in your hand, and insert a needle right through the place, but keeping well away from the cheek. To allow the matter to discharge, use a little gentle pressure. Then sponge with a little warm water. Keep it open for a day or two, using the sponge each time. Yes, it will get quite well again, and the feathers will come all right in the moult.

ROLLERS.

Answered by "SCHOOLMASTER."

Sex of Rollers.

No Name.—You can't sex young Rollers with safety by their looks, unless you are a very experienced "old band." The best way is to keep them until after the moult, and sort the cocks out as they begin to sing. There is one easy way to sex youngsters before they begin to moult, however, and that is by watching the young birds and noting those that are trying over their song. It is a great help to have a peep-hole in one's bird room door, through which the birds can be watched without them seeing you. Or there should be some place in the room where one can hide, or something one can get behind. When the young cocks are in the flight cage, or flight, they soon begin to warble a few notes of their song, and the young cocks can be seen sitting about with their heads up and throats working away as the notes come out. These should be caught and run into a flight, etc., kept for young cocks alone. You won't make many mistakes in the sex if you follow out this plan. It is best, though, not to part until after the moult with those put aside as hens, for it is quite likely one or other may turn out the other way about, especially if rather backward youngsters. As genuine Roller Canaries are not bred for colour, the latter is not a good guide with old birds, though cocks are generally a bit warmer on the wing butts, and on the throat and checks. The cocks are much more "cheeky" in looks and manner, however, and have a shriller call than the hens.

German Summer Rape-seed.

J.T.P.S.—No. 1, which you call "black rape," is not the seed usually called by that name, the latter being English rape, a large seed. Your sample is what is called French rape. No. 2 looks a very nice sample, but does not taste so sweet and nutty as it should. Both these rapes could be given with safety, especially to Linnets and other British birds, but I should not give either to my Rollers while I could get genuine German summer rape. The latter is a very small seed (like No. 2) but darker in colour, more of a dark bluish-red, and tastes very nutty and sweet when chewed in the mouth. I like a matured rape seed, but not one that is too old. I don't believe that seed which is lifeless (that is, will not germinate) can be any good to birds. To test it for this, soak a little in cold water for a day, or a day and a half, and then turn it moist on to a saucer and stand it in the open air. If good seed, it will soon begin to grow. The older the seed the longer it takes to germinate, and if some grains germinate and others do not, it is partly good and partly bad, or too old to grow, and the longer the seed takes to burst, the older it is. A rape seed which tastes well and sprouts quickly is right for all birds.

A Swelling, with Matter.

C.R.—The swelling on the foot the size of a pea, and containing matter, should be opened with the sharp point of a penknife. Squeeze out the pus, gently, and then well wash the place with warm water, afterwards anointing it with a little boric ointment, which any chemist will supply you with. It should soon heal as the result of this treatment. I do not know of any "bird doctor" near you, but any veterinary surgeon would, I think, be glad to advise one concerning a bird, or you could ask your family doctor.

In an Outdoor Room.

A. Goodman.—It has been a bad year, taken on the whole, for fanciers with outdoor bird-rooms. I don't know how long you have had your Rollers outside, but these birds are generally bred indoors, or, at least, in a snug, heated place. All high-quality German birds are used to warmed rooms. Of course, Rollers can be bred in cold rooms all right, but what I want to point out is that if your birds had previously been used to warmed quarters, the wretched spring would be sure to upset them. And it looks as though they were upset, seeing many eggs have been only partly hatched and some young neglected in the feeding. The sight of one lot of young birds would never upset the old ones feeding the next lot. I never heard of it. Is your system of ventilation all right? Any cold draughts, which make birds feel miserable will cause them to give over sitting and feeding. A door, with window facing south-east, would be likely to let in nasty draughts unless very well fitting. You want to be quite sure, however, your birds are used to outdoor cold-room treatment.

MISCELLANEOUS CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by "OLD JUDGE."

Birds Gaping.

F. Nash.—(1) If the birds make no sound when gaping it is most likely a trick, and you need not worry about it. (2) The birds, being twelve months old, should not have any down on the wing, and I cannot but think that what you call down is not down at all. (3) The best time to buy hens is in October, as soon as they are through the moult; they then get used to the room before the breeding season comes round. Don't buy old hens. Have young birds. Before investing in birds for breeding, it would be advisable to study a good book on Canaries, such as House's "Canary Manual." You will save its cost over and over again.

Best Bird for A.O.V.

Mug.—It is really impossible to say what bird would be most likely to win in an A.O.V. class. If the three birds, Yorkshire, Cinnamon, and Lizard were equal in quality, then the individual taste of the judge would decide it. If he were a lover of birds of position, the Yorkshire would most likely stand the best chance. On the other hand, if he does not favour birds of style and carriage, then the Cinnamon might appeal to him. It is one of the uncertainties of life about which there is nothing certain except the uncertainty. (2) It often happens that egg-eating hens may be cured by blowing an egg, filling the shell with mustard from the household mustard pot, and returning it to the nest. The best cure and the most effective is to end the career of such unnatural monsters, for you can never trust them.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Sex of Song Thrushes.

I have had a Thrush sent to me, but don't know the sex. I should be pleased if you could give me a guide to know if it is a cock.—OLD SALT.

Old Salt.—I can give you a guide certainly; but it is not one likely to be of much use, and, no doubt, you know it already. In short, the only safe guide to the sex of Song Thrushes is the song. Both cock and hen are alike in plumage, and sometimes the hen is the bigger, better-looking bird of the two, as witness the fact that many of the noted winners on the show bench have been hens. Therefore, before you can be certain your own bird is a cock, you want to hear it warble. The males are generally longer and flatter-looking on the head when viewed sideways, and some say they are invariably a little deeper in brown in the upper back and wing coverts, and more clearly edged with light brown across the wing coverts. Be these things as they may, they are hardly likely to help a novice to differentiate the sexes, are they? The one safe guide is song. To go for a "long, lean-headed one" is a general "tip."

Moulting and Management of Yellow-hammer.

Have a Yellowhammer, caged about two months. Steadying down very nicely. How should I feed to keep in condition from now onwards until through the moult?—YELLOWHAMMER.

Yellowhammer.—A yellow Bunting is not much trouble to moult, providing he is a free bather (and most of the species are), and that he breaks into moult early in the season. He should be kept in a cage large enough to contain a good-sized bathing dish—many Finches (the Yellowhammer is a Finch, strictly speaking) are shy at entering the baths hung outside their cages, but will readily "tub" themselves given "indoor" baths. The only alternative will be for you to turn a spray lightly on to him every suitable day. The method adopted to break a bird into moult is to gradually cover the cage front with some warm material, until it is practically in the dark, and to keep it in a fairly warm spot. This, generally, soon causes the feathers to begin to drop. A bird so started must be kept cosy till the moult is through. Catchers and others adopt various modifications of this plan, but such do not commend themselves to me. Linnets, etc., are gradually shut up in a cupboard at the side of a fire-place, or in a warmed room), treatment which cause them to drop into moult quickly. I don't advise you to take any steps of this nature, however, unless your Hammer goes to a late date without sign of casting its plumage. Coming to the feeding, the Yellowhammer only shows any particular liking for canary seed when in captivity; consequently that must form the staple diet of the bird you have. Try him also with small wheat and oats (crushed if you like), groats, coarse oatmeal, cracked hemp, shelled and crushed sunflower seed, maw seed, wild seed mixture, etc.; he may be tempted to take a little of one or the other, and the change will do him good. Rape and sunflower seeds, soaked in cold water until just bursting, likewise tempt many birds. Your bird should also have a little good insectivorous food every day or so, and a few mealworms daily, with other live insect food (flies, etc.) in season. Live ants' eggs are a great treat. It is, in fact, the soft and the live foods on which you should mainly rely to bring through your birds in first-class condition. A feed of best quality ants' eggs damped with new milk (or even plain water) is much esteemed, and a grand thing for them. If you use milk, give them fresh often; never let this go sour. See reply to "Sticker In."

In the Nature of Experiment.

Have just bought a Goldfinch-Canary Hybrid and a Goldfinch. They are twelve months old and very good soagsters. I keep them out of doors (day and night) in box-shaped cages, with wire fronts. Will they whistle (except when moulting) through the winter?—ANXIOUS.

Anxious.—I am not sure that you will be altogether well advised to keep your birds out-of-doors the winter through in small cages—I don't know how big yours are. It will be in the nature of an experiment—and a risky one, too, I fancy. Personally, I certainly should not think of trying it unless my birds had plenty of wing room and were exceedingly well-protected from stress of weather. You must decide for yourself, of course. If, as I surmise, your cages are but small, the two birds will be miserable during spells of cold, damp weather, and the water supply will give you trouble during severe frost—the latter will also most likely give your birds trouble. If you decide to take them indoors, then you want to be careful over hanging them out in the winter. Changes of temperature and conditions throw birds into moult. Thus, if you take your birds out of a cosy (though unheated) room, and hang them outside on a tempting-looking sunny, frosty day, the result for them may be a cross moult. Both Mules and Goldfinches will whistle right through the winter if properly kept and fed—they cease singing, in fact, only during the moult and while recovering from its effects. Goldfinch Mules are very hardy birds; much more so than Goldies. I have one now rising sixteen years old, and he has never had a day's illness, to my knowledge, and sings "like one o'clock."

Opinion on Seeds.

Saddler.—These seem to be four samples of good canary-seed. I like them in the order in which they are numbered, viz., 1, 2, 3, 4. No. 1 is an excellent, clean, well-ripened seed, which tastes well and contains no damaged grains. No. 2 and 3 seem but little inferior, except that No. 3 contains a percentage of damaged grains and No. 2 is not so well ripened. No. 4 is good seed, but seems rather dusty, and is a shade lean.

A Mysterious Bird.

A. Hudson.—On reading my reply to you over when in "cold type," it dawned upon me that I had overlooked one possible species your "little stranger" might belong to, and that the Cuckoo. I expect, however, this would have occurred to you yourself. A young Cuckoo, further, would be quite a big, bulky bird, and fill the small nest (assuming the latter to be a Hedge Sparrows) it was in; now it would be about as big as a Missel Thrush. Cuckoos have two toes in front and two behind, the outer hind-toe being partly reversible. If a young Cuckoo your bird would have a slightly curved bill, and yellowish mouth, irides and legs. Its plumage would be, broadly speaking, ashy-brown, mottled and barred with reddish-brown and greyish-white. As I have often stated, I don't think much of Cuckoos as pets; they are unsatisfactory, being dirty, difficult to keep for any length of time, and apt to break and soil their plumage. The correct food is a good insectivorous mixture, prepared, as is usual, with vegetable ingredients, such as cold boiled potatoe, finely-minced lettuce, etc.; soft, ripe fruit is also relished, and plenty of insect food (live) must be supplied. I doubt whether any particular value attaches to a Cuckoo; get as much as you can for it. Not many people care to keep one; and those who have once done so, don't as a rule, hanker after repeating the experiment. I had some fun out of mine, through its laughable actions in squawking to be fed—but that was about all, and my people got tired of feeding the lazy beggar.

Mule and Canary Ailing.

J. Price.—I cannot understand why you (and so many other fanciers) should leave writing for advice, or trying some treatment, until the birds are three-parts dead, when nothing can be expected to pull them round. Ailing birds want most prompt treatment to stand a fair chance of recovery. I can only recommend you to treat both Mule and Yorkshire Canary as follows:—For one day dissolve as much sulphate of soda as will just lie on a shilling in two tablespoonfuls of water, and give to drink. Follow it with three or four mild doses of dandelion juice (taraxacum), obtained from a chemist. Mix half a teaspoonful in the above quantity of drinking water. But give it on alternate days only; plain water in between. Lightly crack their seeds (not crush them) while they remain weak—canary, summer rape, hemp and teazle. Also give them as much maw seed as they will eat. But above all, give them milk-sop made fresh two or three times a day. Get some maizena wafers, or osborne biscuits, from a good grocer, and steep the required quantity in new milk, afterwards mashing it with a fork, when it is ready for the birds. This is a simple and good way to make it. Wash out the dish with every fresh supply. If the birds show a distaste for seed, mix about a tablespoonful of best quality ants' eggs with the milk-sop; on this they may quite likely pull round. Then, half-a-teaspoonful of Parish's Chemical Food should be put to their drinking water for a fortnight or so.

Taming and Feeding a Chaffinch.

(1) Will you tell me a way of taming a Chaffinch, a cock, caged fully 16 months? Every time I go near the cage it flies about and knocks itself against the wires and is spoiling its plumage. (2) What is the best food to feed it on?—LEWIS.

Lewis.—Am afraid you have set yourself a very thankless task. A "mad" cock Chaffinch is one of the very worst birds to steady. Seeing the time yours has been in captivity, I doubt if he is worth bothering with—if mine, I should feel inclined to open the cage door and let him clear away, and then try another bird. What sort of cage are you keeping him in, however? The only suitable one for a bird like this is a cage wired in front only, about 14 by 10 by 8, with inside food trough and two perches about on a level with top of the latter. In short, the Finch stock-cage sold by most of the cage-makers advertising in these columns. The cage should be hung in some suitable light spot, away from a window, and be partly sheeted down with a light cover. Feed and clean him out in a very quiet way, and try to get him to take a mealworm from your fingers. When moulted under the above conditions, he may come out quite steady. As regards the feeding: As a staple seed mixture give the following: Canary and teazle four parts, summer rape, charlock and linseed one part each, maw a quarter part. In addition, give a good feed of white sunflower seed daily. Smashed walnuts (and other nuts) are greatly relished also, and should be given occasionally in the light of a special treat. Keep the proportion of linseed down during the hot weather, but give it more freely during and towards the end of the moult. Give a mealworm or two every day or so, varying same with flies, smooth caterpillars, grubs, earwigs, spiders, aphides, gentles, wasp grubs, etc., as obtainable. These birds are not particularly keen on green food, but will nibble with appreciation a sprig of shepherd's purse, chickweed, groundsel, dandelion, etc. Radish, turnip, and summer rape seedlings, are usually eagerly devoured, however, when just sprouting.

The Sex of Skylarks.

Please can you tell me how to tell the sex of Skylarks?—NO NAME.

No Name.—To try to sex Skylarks is not a very satisfactory job for anyone to undertake who is not well acquainted with the species. Both cock and hen are alike in plumage. When a lot of Larks are together, however, the cocks can generally be easily picked out by their larger size and greater length of wing—of course, I refer to fresh-caught Larks who have not previously been sorted over. If, however, you at any time get a very big Lark, you can be pretty certain it is a cock. As the cock has a longer wing than the hen, the tips of his wings (when folded) reach appreciably further down the tail than in the case of his mate. The males, too, strut about their cage in a bold, "cocky" fashion, whereas the females are meek-looking and retiring—the difference is quite plain. The hen is generally more thickly spotted (blotchy) on the breast and back than the male. But size and length of wing are practically unfailing guides. Any dealer worthy of his salt will pick you a certain cock if you leave yourself in his hands and pay a fair price for the bird. Colour is no guide at all. Many of the cock Larks we get in England in the winter (having migrated here from the Continent) are very grey in colour—almost ashy-grey—whereas our English-bred Larks are always more or less rufous in their coloration, so far as my own observations go, that is.

In an Aviary.

Kindly let me know whether Bullfinches, Goldfinches, Linnets and Canaries will all agree in the same aviary; also is the food for the first three the same as for Canaries?—F. Parry.

F. Parry.—Like two out of every three persons who ask me questions about aviaries, you omit giving the most important detail of all, viz., the size of the said aviary. Whether different species will agree together depends, in many cases, solely on the size of the home, and on the number of its inmates. It is so in your case. Bullfinches, Goldfinches, Linnets and Canaries will agree together amicably enough providing they have plenty of space to manœuvre in. The above four species I have not found liable to attack other birds, but they will attack others of their own kind, more especially during the spring and summer months; and there are exceptions to the first-mentioned rule, for I have known even the docile, gentle Lintie, turn out a regular tartar on occasion, chasing and mauling other birds unmercifully. Vicious individuals of any species must, of course, be removed—at least for a time. Given a very small aviary (such as an indoor drawing-room one) it is best to keep cock birds only therein; and in a medium-sized aviary of any description, one pair of each kind only should be permitted. Odd, unmated birds are to be avoided always. Sometimes (in a good big outdoor or indoor place) extra hen Bullfinches and hen Canaries can be turned therein with advantage; then, I like all cock Bullies out of the way. With regard to the feeding, you should give in three dishes, canary, summer rape and teazle seeds, and in another a mixture of sunflower and safflower seeds. These will answer admirably as a regular thing. A feed of the other seeds—hemp, maw, niger, linseed, thistle, dandelion, wild-seed mixture, etc.—or of mixed packet-seed, say, a good maker's Finch mixture, can be given occasionally, according to season, and to lend variety to the menu. This is by far the most economical and satisfactory line of catering you can adopt. I may say, though, that if the Goldies have been used previously to having a lot of hemp, this must not be given too sparingly. Seeding green-foods and weeds as per advice given weekly.

A Goldfinch-Siskin Hybrid.

Have been fortunate in securing a nice Hybrid Goldfinch-Siskin. Are they usually colour-fed, and would you give it same as to young Canaries? What would value be, supposing it turned out well? It is very well marked and a nice size. Are they worth showing? How would it stand in a class with Goldie-Bullies? What colour of cage and what size would you recommend?—A.B.C.

A.B.C.—Your query would seem to have been mislaid somewhere—it has only just passed into my possession. Doubtless, however, you will have read the many recent replies I have given on colour-feeding Mules, and have carried out the instructions therein. Get a good tasteless pepper, and mix it with the egg-cake recommended "Saddler" in issue for July 13th. If the vendor advises adding oil to the feed, you must suit yourself on the point. Personally, I do not do so (or, at most, a few spots of finest almond oil, or "olive oil, B.P."), preferring to give a feed of linseed every day, which gives sufficient oil. Of sugar, there is ample in the cake. Add only a pinch of colour-feed at the start, and gradually work up to full strength—say, one in four. Give a little canary with the linseed, providing the Mule eats up its daily allowance of colour-food, one teaspoonful. A good Goldfinch Siskin Hybrid is always well worth showing; a fine specimen stands a great chance in any Hybrid class, though most judges would, I am afraid, show a partiality towards an equally fine Bullfinch Hybrid. A specimen got second in the A.O.V. Hybrid class at the last Crystal Palace Show. It is quite impossible to place a true value on your bird without seeing it—it may be better than anything of its kind yet seen, or it may only be moderate. I will only say that a good specimen should fetch three or four pounds, in show form; yours might not be worth this, or it might be worth more. The best cage to show it in is one of the Norwich Club type, only slightly smaller in length and height, enamelled outside black, and inside and wires either very dark green, or very light green or blue. I like the former shade very much, but between the three it is merely a matter of personal choice. I hope you have luck with the bird.

Color-feeding Young Yellowhammer.

I have a young Yellowhammer, 3 weeks old. When will it moult? How shall I colour-feed it? How much colour-feed shall I give at first, and how long shall I continue it? Are they any good on the show bench? It is very tame.—STICKER-IN.

Sticker-In.—I should say that your young Yellow hammer will, roughly speaking, commence to moult about the second week in August. If you intend to colour-feed it, I should begin right away. Young Yellowhammers (and many other young British birds, too) are not of much use as show-birds—they are beaten for colour by fully adult (two or three-year-old) specimens. Young Hammers have never the expanse of yellow, nor the richness of yellow and chestnut, of old birds. I have often seen old hens a better colour than young cocks. Still, don't let this fact discourage you, for if the bird is of large size, and well-marked, he should turn out good enough for any local or members' shows this coming season, especially if well moulted. For advice on general feeding and management, see reply to "Yellowhammer" this week. The colour-feeding should be easily accomplished. The bird will, I take it, be used to eating a little soft-food (which should be a high-class insectivorous mixture). Simply mix the colour-food with this, one teaspoonful in about six or seven; commence with a pinch only, and gradually work up to this strength. Use tasteless sweet pepper, without added oil (which I have often fancied to turn Britishers against it), adding a little finely-ground linseed to it, say, half-a-teaspoonful, made fresh every day. You can mix enough of the stock food (insectivorous food and pepper) to last a week, letting it stand a week before using, as then the colour-food gets well absorbed by the other ingredients. Damp it for use with a spot or two of water; don't make it "pasty," only crumbly moist. A little whole canary-seed can be mixed in, if you like; but see the bird does not waste the food searching for it. A Yellowhammer will thrive well on this diet through the moult, with a fair supply of live insect food in addition. Continue the colour-food for at least a week after the moult is over, which will be when feathers cease to be dropped, and when you can discern no quill feathers remaining about the head. Give a feed twice a week through the show-season. A really good Yellowhammer is an excellent exhibition bird.

Briefiets.

Shepherd's Purse (J. C. Smith, Wattie, P. G.).—A sample of shepherd's purse has been duly forwarded on to you.

Another Weed (T. Walsh).—Sorry, but was quite unable to identify the weed you sent. It was dried up when it reached me. Send a fresh piece with a flowering head, packed between damp leaves. It may be sufficient for you to know, however, that I did not recognise it as anything usually given to birds.

Dock (No Name).—The fragment you send looks like common sorrel. If you will let me have a fair sample, with a leaf or two, I will endeavour to accurately name it.

Knapweed (G. Little)—When you want anything identified you must send a fair sample—leaves and flowers or seed. The "hard head" (Knapweed) is a near relation of the thistle, and looks like a diminutive member of the latter family. It is a common wayside and meadow plant, very tough (hence its popular name), bearing small purplish flowering heads of "thistlish" character, though not thorny, and growing about one to two feet high.

Weed (J. W. Powley).—I do not know the correct name of the weed you send. Will see if I can ascertain it.

Wild Seed (John Brown).—I make you no promise, but will see what I can do when I go on my holiday—if the fish won't bite, I may find time. I cannot undertake tasks of this nature however.

Young Cuckoo (A. Hudson).—You will see that I had replied to you further before your letter reached me. These answers of mine have to be got out at such a rate (often only possible by burning of "midnight oil") that of time for reflection I have none. You should have mentioned the size of the youngster.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S.

What Parrot?

(1) Can you tell me what kind of Parrot it is from description herewith? (2) What is its diet? (3) What it its value? (4) Is it a talking kind? It can say "Polly."—A.A.H.

A.A.H.—It is the Slender-billed Cockatoo (Licmetis nasicus). (2) A mixture of two parts each canary and oats, and one part each hemp, Indian corn, wheat, dari, and sunflower seeds. Well mix, and always keep a supply in the cage. Give in addition, so as to vary the diet: plain biscuit (dry), dry crust household bread, boiled potato, ripe fruit, greenfood, and nuts, with regular supplies of grit, cuttlefish and water. Do not give slops or animal food. (3) Ten to fifteen shillings. (4) The majority of these birds seldom talk; they are not a talented species. Some individuals learn to repeat single words; as your bird already does this, if you persevere with it, it may add other words to its vocabulary. Kep it where it will hear plenty of conversation, as well as repeating words to it.

Pulling out its Feathers.

Small Indian Green Parrot had for 2 years, pulls its feathers as they are renewed. It is almost bare and does nothing but flap its wings all day. Fed on tea sop, monkey nuts and chillies. What is the remedy?—N. J. W.

N.J.W.—It is the diet that is wrong with your bird, and it will take it some time to recover condition, if it does ever give up entirely the habit of feather-pulling. Do not give tea, coffee or milk slops o rany kind of animal food whatever. If it cries for sop for a time you had better give it boiled maize (this only keeps fresh one day) as well as its seed mixture. This latter should consist of canary, oats, dari, wheat, Indian corn, hemp and sun-flower seeds. Well mix and always keep a supply in the cage. Supply so as to vary the diet: greenfood, ripe fruit, plain biscuits, dry crust household bread, nuts, raw carrot, with regular supplies of cuttlefish, grit and water. Keep it well supplied with cotton reels and rotten wood to play with and chew up. Also well spray it with Quassia Solution daily or every other day at least while the warm weather lasts, well wetting the parts the bird is in the habit of pulling. If there are any sores these should be annointed with Spermaceti Ointment. If the bird will let you handle it, well soak the bare parts with the Quassia Solution from a sponge, this will make its skin better and possibly deter it from pulling out its plumage. It must be kept out of draught till dry. Also for a time well colour its drinking water with Parish's Chemical Food. If there is any constipation making its drinking water saline with Epsom Salts for a day will give relief.

Young Parrot with Diarrhœa.

Bird is very bad and will not eat at all. It has been fed on maw and Parrot Food, crust of bread and banana. What can I do for it?—Novis.

No·1s.—As the case was so urgent I sent you a card, but I fear even that would be too late. If the bird continues to refuse to take food, of couse, it will be dead before you see this reply. Give 6 drops of either pure salad or olive oil direct to the beak. Withhold its drinking water, and in two hours offer it the following, let it take what it will at hourly intervals: About a wineglass-full of water, as much prepared chalk as will thinly cover a florin, and three drops of laudanum. Well stir together and it must be well stirred each time it is offered. The bird must be kept warm and quiet, and after the above treatment, put on a course of Parrish's Chemical Food. Make its drinking water the colour of pale port with same, and continue giving it for a month at least. Keep a piece of cuttlefish hanging in its cage, also crush some to about size of peas and mingle some with it's seed mixture and also scatter some over sand tray. You will find the correct diet in reply to F.T. in this issue, with the exception, that if yours has been on a seed diet it will not require boiled maize.

Breeding Zebra Finches.

Birds in cage out of doors, with cover at night. There are now 4 eggs in nest, the last just laid. They are not yet sitting on them. Is this usual or neglect? The cock bird is ailing and sits ruffled up, with his head under his wing a great deal. How can I treat?

C.T.—I think it is quite possible they are neglecting the eggs, though they are not by any means hopeless yet. The condition of the male is quite enough to account for this. Make their drinking water quite saline with Epsom salts for one day. Also supply green food liberally, such as grass flowers, chickweed, and a leaf of fresh lettuce. Crush some cuttlefish, and mingle this with their sand. Supply canary, white, French, and spray millet, and, if they will take it, a few ants' eggs and a little crumbled sponge cake. If any young are hatched out you will have to supply the sponge cake and ants' eggs, mixed together, and made crumbly moist, while they are feeding young. If these eggs are lost, there is still time for you to get another brood, but treat as above, and leave the birds to themselves. Do not disturb them by too much prying into the nest.

Bare Green Singing Finch.

Bird bare on head and shoulders when bought; said to have been plucked while in the stock cage. It is a good singer. What can I do to improve its plumage?—A NEW READER.

A New Reader.—Give the bird a liberal diet—greenfood, say a small leaf of tender lettuce daily; canary, white and spray millet, a few ants' eggs, and also a little crumbled sponge cake if it will take it. Give it a mealworm three times a day. Keep a piece of cuttlefish hanging in its cage; also crush some and mingle same with its sand. See that it gets the opportunity to take a daily bath. The bath is best given outside of cage, that is one of those (procurable from any cage maker or dealer), which bang over the open door of cage. For the next month slightly colour its drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food, and if the skin on the bird's head is white, dry, and hard, lightly rub in a little clean vaseline. Unless the scalp has been damaged there should soon be an improvement in the plumage of the bird.

Breeding Budgerigars.

(1) What size cage do these birds require? (2) What is the value of a decent pair? (3) Am I too late to breed this year? (4) Would an aviary, 4 by 3 by 2 ft., fitted outside a window answer?—C. E. B. ALLEN.

C. E. B. Allen.—(1) A cage of the same width and height of yours ought to be 6 ft. long for two pairs for breeding purposes. (2) The average price for decent birds is 6/- per pair for Greens, and 10/- to 15/- per pair for yellows. The very cheap birds are either newly imported birds or young ones not yet fully mature. (3) If you get at once one or two good, sound pairs of aviary bred birds, you would most probably succeed in pulling off a late nest. (4) The window aviary you suggest would answer fairly well. There would only he proper accommodation for two breeding pairs with their broods. It would do to keep them in during the winter with the protection you name, providing you can exclude draught. Note there must be two husks for each pair of birds, and there should be 18 inches at least between each; this will give you an idea of space required. Of course, while the birds continued breeding the young would have to be removed from them as they were able to fend for themselves.

Budgerigar with Diseased Leg.

T.J.—It was beyond me to say what had been the matter with Budgerigars' legs, but they certainly had been badly swollen and diseased. One sent was too much dried up and crushed in the post to be of much use for examination. You certainly adopted the humane course in putting it out of its misery, and so far as I can judge from the crushed and mummified remains no treatment would have been of any avail at the time you took that course. I regret I can tell you nothing more definite than this, but I should certainly advise you to thoroughly sterilise the cage, scald it out, and re-distemper it before using again, for I am strongly of the opinion that the trouble was of a septic character.

Blind in One Eye.

H. Lowe.—I regret, from the data you supply, it is impossible for me to help you. Possibly I might do so, if you could give me the history of the case. However, in such cases I always consider it best to consult a vet., who if remedy be possible at all, can give speedy relief.

Erecting Outdoor Aviary.

H.V.J.—Your arrangements appear to be well planned, and I cannot suggest any improvement thereon. However, I should strongly advise you to extend the fight at right angles. This part can never be made too large, and I should certainly extend it to include the ivy covered wall shown in plan. If you desire to keep birds of the Finch and Bunting class, I should advise you to plant the flight with non-poisonous trees and shrubs (such as fir, box, elder, honeysuckle, wild clematis, rose, briars, etc.), and sow oats, grass, and set nettles and other weeds round about—make it a jungle. Furnish the shed portion with plenty of branches (pea sticks answer well), and nest receptacles of all kinds; hang them up all over the place, and also in sheltered corners of the flight. The wire netting of flight should go 18 inches below the ground, and ought to then turn outward, so L, for 8 or 10 inches. For your food vessels fix pieces of gas pipe in the ground, standing above same 18 inches. Make some wire platforms to push in those which will grip glazed plant saucers. This contrivance will keep seed from mice. If you repeat query later, giving an idea as to class of birds you require, shall be pleased to advise you.

The Pekin Nightingale.

I have what I believe to be a Pekin Nightingale, a small cobby bird with long red bill. How must I feed and treat it?—KYO LAWS.

Kyo Laws.—I am of the opinion your bird is a Pekin Robin, known also as the Pekin Nightingale and Yellow-bellied Liothrix. It ought to have a roomy cage, so that it can get a good amount of exercise, a daily bath, and some garden weeds to pick over, also a little fresh lettuce. It must have some soft ripe fruit as in season, soft food, and a few live insects, such as beetles, spiders, flies, etc., or say half a dozen mealworms supplied at intervals during the day. Soft food: Crushed Osborne biscuits, crumbled sponge cake, ants' eggs, and dried flies in equal parts; make crumbly moist for use. The above is thoroughly wholesome, keeps fresh (it must be given fresh daily), and is easily prepared. The ants' eggs and dried flies can be procured through those advertising in our columns; purchase the best. A teaspoonful of white millet scattered among the sand twice a week, appears to be appreciated by these birds, and certainly does them no harm.

Grey Parrot weak on Legs.

Young Grey very weak on its legs, and always lying at the bottom of cage. It whistles well. Fed on boiled corn and packet food. How must I treat?—F.T.

F.T.—Continue to give the boiled corn (this only keeps fresh one day), and supply the following mixture: Two parts each canary, oats, and rice in the husk, and one part each hemp, dari, wheat and sunflower seeds. Well mix, and always keep a supply in the cage. You can also give so as to vary the diet: Plain biscuit, nuts, greenfood, ripe fruit, raw carrot and regular supplies of cuttlefish. Water to satisfy its thirst several times daily. Well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food for the next month or six week, and do not give any other drugs, etc.; but if the bird should become constipated, stop the chemical food for one day, and make its drinking water quite saline with Epsom Salts. You do not give me any details to go upon. You cannot, however, do better than treat as above. But no treatment will avail if the trouble is congenital. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk slops, or any kind of animal food.

PARK & LAKE AVICULTURE.

Answered by FRANK FINN, B.A., F.Z.S., M.B.O.U., etc.

Mandarin Ducks.

Have recently purchased a pair which look alike; how can I sex them? They seem wild, and I have only seen them eat grass. I am giving this, as well as corn and meal. Is this the correct diet?—H. LEWIS.

H. Lewis.—(1) Mandarin Drakes are always "out of colour" at this time of year—as, indeed, are common wild Drakes and most waterfowl in which the male has a distinctive plumage. They come into colour in September. (2) When out of colour the Drake is distinguishable by his orange feet (those of the Duck being olive); his bill often shows more or less pink, and he tends to have less of the white round the eye. The twittering note is also a masculine peculiarity. (3) They are naturally nervous birds, but get tame when kept where they see people. (4) Your feeding is right, but you need not give meal as well as corn and grass. Give some dried flies and finely-broken dog biscuit.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for a reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post-mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Linnet Mule (J.W.E)—This bird, and possibly your other eight, died of "bird-fever."

Canary (Anselmo).—Your bird died of septic inflammation of the lungs, liver and spleen, ending with apoplexy, all the symptons of bird-fever.

Redpoll (J. A. Bell).—Bird-fever.

GENERAL.

Answered by the EDITOR.

Coleman (Palace Awards).—So far as we can ascertain, the gentleman mentioned has not won a first prize at the Crystal Palace during the time specified.

Illustrated Ideas (W. C. H. Wythe).—We are quite unable to decipher your two communications. Please write in ink, and not on pieces of cardboard, when we shall be pleased to give your ideas consideration. We are busy men, and life is short.

Canary Breeding Competition (E.B.).—Yes; anyone sending in the full number of coupons is entitled to compete, providing, of course, the remainder of the conditions are not violated.

Address Wanted. &c. (C. Shirley).—Thanks for your letter. The matter it concerns had, we understand, already been dealt with. It is against the rules to give correspondents' addresses, but we are always willing to forward on any letter sent us in a stamped envelope.

An Action (A. E. Trueman).—If you send us a newspaper cutting giving a report of the county court action you are bringing, we will publish it. We cannot print any comments on a matter which is sub judice.

A Book (Nobbler).—Bechstein's book on birds is one esteemed by most people interested in the subject. It was, of course, written many years ago, and on its practical side is now very much out-of-date—we have made strides in the hobby since the day of its talented author. Whether worth the contemplated exchange or not is a question we must leave the parties concerned to decide.

Canary Breeding Competition (F. Smith).—A full set of coupons (i.e., one from each week's issue) must be sent in by every competitor, vide Rule 7. No exception can possibly be made.

Slaying of Swallows (Bristolian).—The gentleman you mention cannot be held responsible for the words used by "Bath Bun," therefore it would obviously be an injustice were we to publish your letter concerning him. You seem to have overlooked the fact that those particular words were words written by "Bath Bun."

BEGINNERS: You MUST read the ANNUAL.

CANARY NOTES IN BRIEF.

By Claude St. John.

A WEATHER NOTE.

At last, after an unusually long spell of cool, wet weather, there is at this late hour just a little prospect of a warmer and more summery interval. It has doubtless come too late for a generally bad season to be turned into a good one, but there may be numbers of cases where a nest may be snatched, as it were, from a pair of birds before the moult sets in. In all these cases the bird should be perfectly healthy and vigorous, and ready to set down to nesting, if not at once, at least at a very early date. The birds that are best fitted for this task are those which have failed more or less with one or both of their earlier broods. It will be still more important, should this warm interval really occur, to pay the closest attention to the ventilation of the room, and especially during the first few days, if the change is at all sudden, in order to prevent the indoor temperature taking too sudden a leap upward. Otherwise one may find that a goodly proportion of the birds have been thrown into moult.

BEFORE THE MOULT.

It is quite time now to be on the look-out for signs of approaching moult, and all the birds that are not actually feeding young, breeding, or young that are not yet fully on a diet of hard seed, should be limited to a plain and wholesome diet of canary seed. A pinch of Epsom salts in the drinking water—enough to make it taste faintly saline—or 12 to 15 drops of syrup of buckthorn in each ounce of drinking water, is also an excellent preparation for the moult. It cools and regulates the body, and helps to eliminate the ill effects of a rich and generous diet of egg food during the summer months. It may be given with advantage twice a week until the moult commences.

A QUESTION OF MEASURE.

In mentioning an ounce of drinking water just now as the most common standard of computation, it occurred to me that the uninitiated often have very crude notions of these measures. Yet they are very simple. It may not be generally known that the ordinary old-fashioned glass bottle, or hat-shaped drinkers, and china and zinc drinkers, such as usually seen on small cages, and bought with cheap breeding cages, hold something like one ounce of fluid when filled moderately full and not to overflowing. This is not exactly correct, but it is near enough to be taken as a guide for all practical purposes. With larger drinkers and self-supplying fountains, one need only commit to memory the fact that one pint fluid measures contain 20 ounces, half-pint 10 ounces, and a quarter-pint 5 ounces, in order to dispense anything for the birds which is prescribed as so much to the ounce of drinking water.

SINGING CONTESTS.

MARYPORT.

Linnet contest held July 20th. There were eleven entries for three prizes. 1st, 3rd, Picheran; 2nd, Dixon. Judges, W. Irvin and Dave Burney.— J. H. Bell, Sec.

SHEFFIELD.

At the Bird-in-Hand, Broughton-lane, Attercliffe, July 27th, a contest took place for the benefit of "Ted" Robinson. Members did not turn up in force as was expected, there being only 18 entries. Mr. Robinson thanks the friends who sent prizes. Result of contest: Biggins 68, Watson 62, Beckingham 57, Scotney 56. Judges, Bollington and Watson. Owing to the birds going into moult there was a poor entry for the final contest of the season at this house on July 28th, only nine birds competing for three prizes. Result: Watson 74, Watson 64, Smedley 27. Judges, Callaghan and Hempshall.— Frederick Watson.

LEEDS.

Our weekly contest was held at the King's Head, Shannon-street, when fourteen birds competed for three prizes for quality singing. 1st, Nicholls; 2nd, Clegg; 3rd, Thompson. Judges, T. Summers and Cooper.—T. Summers, Hon. Sec.

The Prince Albert Linnet Association met July 14th to compete for three prizes, given by Mr. J. R. Saynor. There was a crowded house to hear the birds sing, but owing to a lot of Linnets going into moult only nine previous winners turned up. Judges, Messrs. Allen and S. Green; timekeeper, Mr. H. Greenwood; 1st, Smith; 2nd, Chippendale; 3rd, Wood.—E. Wood, Hon. Sec.

The members and friends of the Prince Albert Linnet Association met on July 28th to compete for three good prizes, given by Mr. J. R. Saynor. Twelve previous winning birds competed. Judges: Messrs. B. Jackson and G. Towers. Result: 1st, Allen; 2nd, Chippendale; 3rd, Wood. The bird room was literally packed with members and visitors, from near and far, and everyone was delighted to hear Mr. Allen's champion once more in a contest. The bird repeated his usual performance by simply running away with the contest. Our worthy host, Mr. J. R. Saynor, offered the magnificent sum of £15 for Mr. Allen's champion, which he refused, thanking Mr. Saynor for the kind offer.—E. Wood, Hon. Sec.

KENTISH TOWN.

There was a fine muster at the Prince of Wales, Wellesley-road, N.W., on July 27th, to witness the final heat of the free handicap, the result being as follows:—Tom Goldsmith, 5 add 19, first prize, musical box; Old Mouse, 5 add 16, second prize, handsome pair vases; Old Boots, 5 add 11, third prize, pair celery glasses. Prizes to be distributed on Thursday, August 1st, 1907, at 8.30 p.m., when we expect some big scores in the handicap on that night.—Joe Giddings, Timekeeper.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A LINNET FOND OF COMPANY.

Sir,—I am pleased to state that the Linnet, "Tiger," which I advertised in your paper last week, was sold (after winning his race on Saturday)—price, £5 10s. Kindly thank all who wrote me. Some asked such funny questions about "Tiger," such as if he sang night and day. The most funny thing about him was that he hardly ever sang at home, but always wanted plenty of company. Of Larks, Chaffinches, etc., he would never take any notice; but, if I wanted him to sing, all I had to do was to take him into a room with another Linnet. Then he would sing—no waiting for the other bird to start. T. Russell.

CAGING FRESH-CAUGHT BRITISH FINCHES.

Sir,—It has often occurred to me that if fresh-caught Goldfinches, Linnets, etc., as soon as received were put into the small wooden cages that German Canaries arrive in, and provided with the food and water inside, and placed side-by-side together in some quiet, light place, that they would soon become accustomed to their food and loss of liberty. The wooden bars would prevent them injuring themselves. As they tamed down and got used to their food, they could be put into more commodious cages. I think that two birds might be put into each single cage.

J. H. Verrall.

THE LITTLE OWL.

Sir,—A few lines on this bird may please your readers who are interested in the Owl family. During the past fortnight, to my knowledge, about 40 young ones have been taken and collected by a well-known fancier, who has them in a large loft over some stables. This year they have been very plentiful in this district. Last year the same fancier had over 30 at one time. How many nests were taken to supply these I have not as yet heard, but they have built in all directions in the district, and as a rule the nests have always been easy to get. They are very easy to locate when there are young by the droppings outside the trees. I expect they are also very plentiful in North Northam, where, I believe, they were first liberated. Being very small birds, they could easily be kept in cages, and would cause a sensation if exhibited. They soon get tame, and are most amusing pets—more so than the large Owls. Whether a pair of these would breed in an aviary I could not say, but I see no reason why they should not if suitable accommodation were provided for them. At night time, in whatever direction you go, you can hear their well-known cry. The locals have named them the "Cat Owl"—why I could not say. I should certainly recommend anyone with an aviary to have a pair or two of these interesting birds. I have not as yet heard of any young ones dying when taken. They seem to be easily catered for, and will eat nearly everything given them. I have now heard of about eight or nine nests, and, strange to say, taken from the same holes. How many nests they have a year I could not say. Perhaps some one who has studied their ways could enlighten us. I have not the slightest doubt that they are a great benefit to agriculturists, and do no end of good. T. H. Kinch.

A PLEA FOR THE SCOTCH FANCY.

Is Sib-breeding at Fault?

Sir,—An indisputable fact is that the Scotch Fancy Canary fails to occupy the position it did. Were figures available, as they are not, it would be a surprise to your readers to know its real position. I believe the wild birds top the list for numbers, and that the Scotch Fancy Canary, if not at the bottom, is very near the foot of the ladder. It is rare to find more than half-a-dozen of pairs of Scotch Fancy in a house; the cause is the price. Another reason is sib-breeding, that has been carried on to an alarming extent, and that is the sequel to birds which have been run upon for stock, not breeding with the new owners. Many breeders lost heavily in the opening of the breeding season, and I think that was the reason for the dropping away. A limited sib-breeding may help quality, but weakens the stability of the constitution, and that to ultimate extinction; so that the dearly-bought quality is lost, and where is the gain? On two occasions I purchased a certain strain, but never got a young bird. In the days of real Belgian Canaries I purchased a Belgian hen from a dealer and a Scotch Fancy cock from Mr. H. MacDougall, of Edinburgh, who has bred many a good bird. No sib-breeding could be possible. That was the best purchase I ever made. The progeny were healthy and founded a winning strain that did well on the show bench. The Belgian gone, sib-breeding is common, sib-breeding being in existence unknown to the owner, and the result is failure—failure in the worst possible form. Extinction of the species is the greatest calamity that can befall a nation or a community. The season just ended has, with the Scotch Fancy Canary, been the most backward on record, and when the season's history of facts is recorded it will give material for reflection to those who thought they could do anything with the Scotch Fancy Canary. Breeders rise to prosperous heights for a short while and then fall, never to regain lost ground. Happy is the man who sells out when he sees his stock is on the wane. A Scotch Fancy Canary Breeder.

THE SCOTCH FANCY CANARY MODEL.

Sir,—Your correspondents, Mr. Harrison and Mr. "Piebald," have a mighty good conceit of themselves, and do not leave others the freedom of opinion of their own. I did not say anything about the letter; that can be admitted or denied in the proper Council. For the purpose of this paper discussion I took Mr. Harrison's own statement on which to denounce his unfriendly action to one of his best friends in Greenock. If Greenock fanciers had been similarly disposed towards Mr. Harrison, and had shown up all the slips he made with his tongue when he was pushing his model, I wonder how he would have liked it! Mr. Harrison, do to others what you would like others to do unto you. Mr. H. should have accepted defeat and supported the model by which the Scotch Fancy Canary is judged in Scotland. I do not know what is done about Doncaster. Mr. Harrison has bred many varieties, but he will have to breed a lot more before he can tell cocks from hens by his method. If he has ought to disclose about the Greenock Derby, let him come away with it, and not beat around the bush. Mr. "Piebald" is Mr. Harrison's henchman, but he puts up a poor show. He tries to advertise a man who advertises himself in another paper; but to what effect? I, for one, do not attach weight to what a man says who was for a very limited period a breeder, and by no means a successful exhibitor of various varieties bred by himself, and who has sold out and, so far as I know, possesses not a single bird. What interest can such a man have in the Fancy (unless it is purely monetary), and what weight can his ideas have?—I say none. According to my light, only two objected to the adopted model—a competitor, and another who objects to everything that does not emanate from himself. He is so selfish that he will not permit another to have latitude; but the Fancy is much too wide to be controlled by him. Mr. Wright's model is a long way ahead of the others put before the Fancy, and is in demand everywhere—unless in Doncaster, and a wee club not a hundred miles from Arthur's Seat. Fanciers who have Scotch Fancy Canaries, and take a practical interest in them, have accepted the model, and are not the least annoyed at the noise of outsiders. I strongly advocate the maintenance of the correct model.

Advocate for Model.

P.S.—Surely a Doncaster post-mark is not necessary for a letter written from a Greenock address?

Sir,—"Piebald" asked in your issue of June 22nd for a full report of the committee meeting held on the model question. I have waited a month, hoping some other on the committee would give the desired information. But, no. Firstly, Mr. T. Smith had all the models which appeared in the Fancy Press and several others, but on production of the two announced in report of meeting, no others were discussed, these being considered far in advance. Now that this model has been exposed, I ask that they be put under seal and retained by the Secretary till the next committee meeting. The matter was decided against me, Mr. R. Wright giving his word he would not alter. I ask those who received a copy of his first one—this was submitted to the meeting—to compare it with the one submitted to the general meeting. Secondly, no other names were given out as having sent. After considerable chaffing, in which one gentleman lost his temper, the meeting broke up friendly. Thirdly, I have proved that there was a letter sent objecting to this photo, and I am further told who it was from. That being so, who suppressed this letter, and what means were employed in so doing? Why did not the Secretary produce the same before the committee meeting? I was pleased to read "Piebald's" views on this question, and any man elected on the proposed committee to reopen this question, who has any other purpose than the interest of the Scotch Fancy Canary, is unworthy to be on. All models submitted should be entirely freehand, of whatever kind; and all sent under a number, and only the one person who receives them to hold the key to them. All models to be kept under seal till the meeting. Canvassing to be debarred; anyone found so doing to be disqualified. No alteration, unless instructed from the committee appointed, and then only the final one selected. If done on such lines, I believe we should get a model and standard formed which would be the means of keeping the bird of the circle at the head of the Fancy. J. Harrison.

A GARDEN TRAGEDY.

Sir,—I think the following brief account of a small tragedy occurring in a garden this summer may interest your readers. It was told me by a friend of mine, who heard of it a few days since. A pair of Chaffinches had built their beautiful little lichen-covered nest on the top of the pergola, overhung by branches of the climbing carmine pillar rose. All went well with the small family of four until they were within a week or rather less of leaving the nest. Going to look at them one morning, I was surprised to see one of the youngsters with its head stretched right up to its fullest extent, quite motionless. It was dead, and the death had been occasioned, doubtless, by the bird stretching up, with widely-opened mouth, to receive some choice morsel which its parents were bringing and closing its beak across a slender twig of rose in such a way that one of the long thorns had run right through the tender skin between the fork of the lower mandible, and so held it semi-suspended until it had died, either from the pain and discomfort of the position or from its inability to take any food. The incident is so singular and probably so unusual (it is, at least, the only case which has come under my notice during many years of close observation of nesting birds, and I have never read of a similar one), that it might be worth noting on that account only; but what makes it more interesting is the subsequent behaviour of the parent birds. Whether on first finding it in this terrible position they made any effort to release it I cannot, of course, say; though all that I have seen of the behaviour of parent birds to their young when the latter happened to fall into any difficulty outside the ordinary course of the experience of the species to which the birds belonged, would dispose me to think it probable that they made no such effort at all. Subsequently they went on feeding the three other nestlings without taking the slightest notice of this poor corpse suspended in their midst. As soon as I had satisfied myself that the bird was dead I left it there purposely, in order to observe this point, and it appeared that they made no effort to remove it, though probably they could easily have done so, and it must have incommoded the rest of the family more than a little. It was not till I feared that commencing decomposition might make its presence insanitary for the other nestlings that I removed it, and up to that time I can be pretty sure that the parents had made no attempt to do so for themselves. It is but another instance of the inability of the lower animals to adapt even the simplest means to the simplest ends, unless such adaptation is suggested to them by the inherited instinct of the race. Where that instinct prevails the accuracy of the adaptation is, of course, marvellous, and often quite transcends any possible suggestions of reason. R. Jones.

THE BREEDING OF HYBRIDS.

Sir,—A friend has had eggs from the Bramble-Bullie which had some last year, and were placed under wild birds this year. All her eggs, so far, she has broken with the exception of two only, which are now placed under a hen Canary. These birds have been seen to pair on several occasions, but the result will have to be noticed in a future paper. I doubt this cross very much, but we never know what will happen in cage bird life. There is one thing about it, the Bramblefinch does not feed her, neither can he sing. I have noticed that he is one of the first up in the morning before the day fairly breaks, and he does gorge the green food, which he prefers before any seeds. Nothing comes amiss to him—lettuce, dandelion, chickweed, or groundsel. What he has for green food in his summer quarters I cannot say. He evidently is quite contented here during the summer, for I have now kept several each year; but I have not as yet heard of one which has paired with any bird, only the Chaffinch. My Bramble has not this season had any kind of insect food—in fact, I have been unable so far to get out. I do know of a pair up, consisting of the hen Bramble and cock Chaffinch, the latter being hand-reared and quite steady; but the hen was caught in November. Whether they will do any good later on remains to be seen. They have given us hopes that something may happen. Let us hope we shall get something for our patience after trying for so long over this cross. Now for the Canary-Bullie cross, which have been together for over 20 months. The first round was most disheartening. In the middle of June I had my hopes raised to a high pitch, as I thought they had paired on several occasions. After waiting several days the Bullie took to a wild bird's nest which I had put in her box; she made no attempt to build one. I waited in the room for over two hours to get the egg. I had to leave the room for a few minutes, and when I came back the egg had been laid and thrown out of the nest—broken, of course. Next day the same result happened—egg again thrown out of nest. The three days I waited until I did get the egg, which I at once placed under a Canary which was sitting. This egg disappeared from the Canary's nest, leaving no trace behind it. The fourth egg I also lost, but the fifth I have saved and placed under a Canary. The Bullie hen, since laying the eggs, has made no attempt to sit, although she did do so last year. I am patiently waiting to see whether she will again go to nest. I quite expect she will. With the other pair of Canary and Bullie I am afraid it will be no go, for since the start, when I expected something from them, the cock Canary had one of his feet badly injured, probably by the beak of the Bullie. It has now turned quite black and seems to be withering away. The Bullie takes to the nest which I have provided, but whether the eggs will be any good now the cock is so injured, I have my doubts. THE DISQUALIFIED GREENS AT THE LATE PALACE SHOW.

SIR,—It would be interesting to know in what manner, other than the way in which they have, could the Green Canary Association have shown their want of confidence in the judges elected to adjudicate on the Green Canary classes at the next Palace Show. Mr. Ramsden is surely the most innocent individual—a veritable innocent abroad—if he thinks the G.C.A. is prepared to submit to a further process of having it "rubbed in." If the Palace authorities are desirous of securing the G.C.A.'s patronage for their coming show, the matter is quite simple—let them submit a further list of judges' names to our Secretary. There are plenty of gentlemen qualified to judge the Green classes other than those or some of them which he has named. The G.C.A. is in no way vindictive, and its members are disposed to regard the disqualifications which have caused so much honest indignation more in pity than in anger; but its members are only human, and the gratuitous manner in which objectionable names have been put forward could only result in one way. If some one has to be sacrificed, it is not in the nature of things that a powerful society, whose patronage is sought all over the country, is going to stultify itself by acknowledging prima facie the righteousness of the disqualifications. The members of the Association, in their charity, are disposed to make every allowance for the judges, and do not in the slightest impugn their sense of duty or honour; it is a question of fitness entirely. No one knows better than Mr. Ramsden the feeling of indignity engendered by the deplorable handling of the whole question. It has been marked by neither fairness nor business tact, and how he can look for a self-respecting body of fanciers to risk a repetition of our experience at the late Palace Show is one of the questions which is agitating local birdy circles. J. S. CLINCH.

SIR,—As a member of the C.B.U. I should like to ask Mr. Bladon and the other gentlemen who formed the Executive Council at Manchester, during the appeal of above disqualification, whether it is true that Mr. Bladon said that prize money would follow automatically on the quashing of the disqualification, and, if so, will they kindly give their opinion on how the resolution has been carried out? I think it only fair that members of the C.B.U. should know this as their turn may come during the coming show season. Re Mr. Ramsden's remarks about the judges at the Palace Show next year, I really think a specialist club should have a little bit to do in choosing judges to show under. J. W. METCALFE.

SIR,—Mr. Ramsden, in a sort of postscript attached to his reply (?) to Mr. Clayton, says: Mr. Hadwin was written to re judges at the next Palace Show, etc." This is not true. The Secretary of the G.C.A. was written to by the L. and P.O.S. Secretary, and the Secretary of the G.C.A. (as Secretary) replied. This is quite different to the way you put it, Mr. Ramsden, and I should like to know by what right you published the matter? Every specialist club has a right to select its judges, and exercises that right. I do not know anyone outside its own membership who has the right to ask for an explanation as to why one man is selected and another left out. In an earlier part of Mr. Ramsden's letter he says that he has received a mass of correspondence relating to the disqualification, but on account of it being held by him as Councillor of the C.B.U., he does not feel at liberty to publish it. This mass of correspondence, he assures your readers, would surprise them. I take it that I, as a Councillor, will have received the same correspondence from the C.B.U., and I can only say there is nothing in the nature of a surprise packet about what I have received. If Mr. Ramsden, or any other Councillor, has received something different to what I have received, then I shall want to know the reason for such preferential treatment. The honour of the G.C.A. is, fortunately, not in your hands, Mr. Ramsden. The reasoning that makes one breach of faith right, and a possible other wrong, is too Jesuitical for me. I think if you had written, "I will publish what suits my purpose," it would have fitted the case. S. HADWIN.

SIR,—I notice in this week's CAGE BIRDS Mr. Ramsden's reply (?) to my letter of July 13th, but a more evasive letter it would be impossible to imagine. Mr. R. has gone one, or perhaps two, better than the alleged "vague and non-committal" expression used to describe the resolution of the C.B.U. I presume Mr. Lythgoe used this expression, or he would have contradicted it by now. Mr. R. regrets that he has to differ from my statement that the C.B.U. Executive understood that prize money would automatically follow the quashing of the disqualification. I was present at the meeting when Mr. Hadwin asked to have the words, "and prize money he paid to Mr. Clayton," added to the resolution. The majority of the Council said it was not necessary, as the disqualification being quashed, prize money would follow. The word "automatically" was undoubtedly used. Mr. R. was not present, so I will leave your readers to judge who is right on this point. Mr. R. asks why the Council did not boldly say the appeal was allowed and the disqualification quashed? I contend the Council did say so in something more tangible than words. It returned the deposit and the birds, and you know, Mr. R., if you care to look at this thing without prejudice, that the mere returning of the deposit was sufficient to show that the appeal was allowed. The C.B.U. rules on this point are explicit. They say clearly that any deposit is forfeited if appeal is not allowed. Mr. R., you will have to find something more substantial than a pious expression of regret to support you in the action you have taken in this matter at Liverpool. You expressed yourself as open to conviction, and you gave us clearly to understand that you would do your best to settle this matter with justice to both parties. But at Manchester your tone was of altogether a different character. The spleen and bitterness of your remarks at that meeting showed clearly that you did not want the case settled except in one way, and you were not over particular as to the way. Now, Mr. R., what right had you to promote other birds? Even if the C.B.U. had decided against me, you could not take away the fact that my birds won, and I would be perfectly justified in advertising these birds as "My Palace Winners." You can take away my prize money on the technical ground that I was not a member of the C.B.U. I therefore have no right of appeal to the Committee. But you can't take away the fact that my birds won in other classes than the one in which the disqualified one appeared. Don't make any error on this point, Mr. R. You can take from me the prize money, but you can't take away the fact of my winning; consequently, you can't promote any other birds—you can give, not pay, my prize money to someone else, who will receive it or not as his conscience allows. But you can't take my first prize honours from me. The G.C.A. decided this matter some time ago, and the points I gained in these classes were counted in my favour; so that you see, so far as the G.C.A. is concerned, you can't do any "promoting." Mr. Ramsden sympathises with me in the unsatisfactory decision of the C.B.U. I can't appreciate your sympathy, Mr. R.; you have put too much spleen into this matter to make your expression of sympathy of any value. I would rather believe that you were more than glad that the unsatisfactory wording of the resolution gave you a chance of wriggling out of what you know to be the actual decision arrived at. With the exception of Messrs. Ramsden and Lythgoe, every member of the Council present at Manchester were practical exhibiting fanciers, and were not at all likely to be afraid of expressing their opinions. The mistake they made was in not recognising the De Wet-like slipperiness of Mr. R. They naturally thought, being open themselves, that Mr. R. would accept without quibble a perfectly obvious decision. The principal points raised by my previous letter Mr. R. has thought fit to evade, but I will ask him to again read my letter and answer the questions he will find therein. In conclusion, I must ask each and every member of the C.B.U. Council who were present at Manchester to say clearly what, in their opinion, was their unanimous decision in this case. I hardly think any of them will lack courage to do so, in spite of Mr. Ramsden's suggestions to the contrary. P. CLAYTON.

THE CINNAMON-MARKED YORKSHIRE C.C. PATRONAGE.

SIR,—Our Committee granted the patronage of the club to the following societies at their meeting on Saturday last, July 27th:—Halifax, Accrington, Manchester, Sandy Lane, Queensbury, Denholme, Bradford City, Shipley, Dewsbury, Laisterdyke, Bradford West, Huddersfield, Brighouse, Gt. Horton, and the Palace. The competition is this year extended to 15 shows, and we hope to have a corresponding increase in membership. R. GARNET, Sec.

SCALY LEGS.

SIR,—The term "scaly legs" is often used in a descriptive way, merely to indicate the presence of large, coarse scales on the feet and legs, and not as it is usually applied to poultry, when it is generally interpreted as meaning the presence of a well-known and understood condition of the legs, caused by a microscopic mite which lives and breeds underneath the scales of the legs and feet. There seems no reason why cage birds should be altogether exempt from the attacks of the parasite which is the cause of the real "scaly leg" among fowls, and if any poultry were about suffering from this complaint there are lots of ways in which the contagion might be introduced to the birds. It would be as well, considering these points, to enquire in such cases whether any poultry affected with the complaint were about the premises. The way to treat—this is supposing the trouble is simply enlarged scales, which, as often as not, are just the natural consequence of old age: During the progress of the moult—or sometimes at its commencement—the birds themselves will get rid of any scales that require removing; but if it appears necessary to interfere with the course of nature, bathing in a fairly warm solution of permanganate of potash—a deep-red solution—for a few minutes each day, and gently anointing them afterwards with some simple ointment, such as zinc ointment, boracic acid, or even pure vaseline, is generally all that need be done. Of late it has become popular to advise a proprietary article, and, whilst I do not consider that one such article should be given precedence over another, when more than one are of equal service, I must admit that when they are kept at hand for other purposes these commercial preparations are often the handiest and readiest to use. For that reason one may have recourse to either Zamhuk or Homocea ointments. Both are useful, and probably one as good as the other for simple things, for which, doubtless, a little vaseline or lanoline would do as well in the vast majority of cases. R. THOMAS.

THE CITY OF GLASGOW O.A. AND THE MACLEAN CUP.

SIR,—I am pleased to have been able to draw out "Fair Play," but he has not helped the MacLean Cup. The original owners have a right to recall the cup in view of the way it was foisted upon the City. The original documents should be in the possession of the Scotch Fancy secretary, present or past, and they ought to be tabled. The existence of the City never will depend upon the destiny of the MacLean Cup. The rightful owners were not "severely sat upon." The spirit that pervaded the conduct of the meeting was not what members have been accustomed to, and Norwich fanciers have reason to be aggrieved. The City officials should keep in mind that there is a new show in Glasgow, and that it will be the Show of Glasgow. My remarks were quite in keeping with the wild proceedings of the meeting. A FANCIER.

SIR,—I would like to know what "Fairplay" means by saying a few members of a certain club were going to hold an open show, and turned up in strong force at the City meeting, meaning to take the Cup away with them, but were severely sat on? I don't know who "A Fancier" is, but "Fairplay" has no right to say what is not true. It is the Glasgow and West of Scotland Club that is running the open show, not a few members; and there was only eight or nine of our club at the City meeting, and six of them were on the City Committee, which is strong force, indeed, for a club of 70 members. I hope the fanciers at large will not trouble about "Fairplay's" words of wisdom, as it has been very hot here, and that might be the trouble. ONE WHO KNOWS.

SOME DOVES FOR AVIARISTS.

SIR,—Perhaps a review of a few of the Doves and Pigeons which the amateur may often find an opportunity to secure may be of some help to those who are in doubt as to what species are suitable for aviary life and which are not. Of course, one and all will understand that, when going into this branch of the Fancy, the first thing to be done is to see that good, large aviaries are available. Very few, indeed, of the Dove or Pigeon race can truly be called small birds, and at least an equal number are more than usually large and hulky, so that a single specimen of such species as the Nicobar, Bronze-wing, or Bleeding-heart, will out-balance quite a number of individuals of Cape, or Diamond, Doves. The small and the large Doves are not the ideal companions in an enclosed space, not so much on account of the risk of their quarrelling—which is really very small—as from the fact that the commotion caused by these great birds flying around for exercise is apt to set up a panic of terror among their smaller companions. Where Doves only are kept in the aviary quarrels will rarely occur, as the Doves and Pigeons, whether large or small, generally agree among themselves. To other classes of birds they may, indeed, be overbearing and quarrelsome. It is a pity that, in reviewing species that are readily obtainable, nearly the whole of the lovely Fruit Pigeons must be disposed of summarily. Although among the most charming of their tribe, they are in many cases but very rarely obtainable, such birds as the Jamboo, the Superb, the Double-crested, and the Bronze Fruit Pigeons being met with but rarely. The Nutmeg, Purple-shouldered, and Double-banded Fruit Pigeons are, perhaps, a little more common; but, as with all these rarely imported species, the price suffers on account of their rarity whenever they do come into the market. Then such enormous birds as the Crowned Pigeons are, as a rule, only to be thought of by those who have almost unlimited space at their disposal. Still, out of the hundred and more species of Doves and Pigeons that have at one time or other appeared in our market, one may make a selection to stock a noble aviary above and below—that is, in both perching species and those that are more purely ground-loving birds. Of the latter class one might specially mention the Tambourine Dove, which is so easily obtainable sometimes, and as scarce at other times as it was erstwhile abundant. Among the larger kinds, which would well repay the trouble of breeding them, might be instanced the Necklaced Dove, of the Malay Peninsula; the Bronze-necked Dove, of South America; the Nicobar Pigeon, from the islands of the same name; the Bleeding-heart Pigeon, of the Philippines; the Australian crested Pigeon; the Triangular-spotted Pigeon, of West Africa; the Spot-winged Pigeon, of Argentina; the White-crowned Pigeon, of the West Indies; and the striking Wonga-wonga Pigeon of Australia. The Green-wings of India and Australia, and the Vinaceous Pigeon of Brazil might also be mentioned, though Russ describes the latter as being delicate in captivity. Some of these species are already known as free breeders; others are sufficiently rare to be a valuable property. Of the small Doves and ground-loving birds I may just name the handsome Australian Bar-shouldered, the Diamond, and the Peaceful Doves, from the same continent; the Zebra Dove, from the Malay Peninsula; the Steel-barred and Geoffroy's Doves, from Southern Brazil; and the Emerald and Cape Doves of Africa—the last-named one of the, if not quite the, smallest Doves that come into the English market. From such an array as this, one need go no further to stock an aviary with birds possessing the three great virtues of beauty, rarity and hardihood. ÆNA.

A CURIOUS COMBAT.

SIR,—Perhaps it may interest some of your readers to know of a most unusual incident which two ladies witnessed last week in the vicinity of Guildford. They were walking down the Box Grove Road at about 6.30 p.m., when they suddenly noticed a juvenile, but thoroughly feathered, Greenfinch fluttering about in some grass close to a hawthorn hedge. On stooping down to see what ailed it, they found to their intense astonishment that it was making frantic efforts to free itself from a male stag beetle, who had his mandibles firmly imbedded on either side of the bird's throat. In fact, so tightly had the brutal insect gripped his prey, that to pull the two apart threatened to dislocate the victim's neck, and one of the ladies was forced to abandon the attempt and to content herself with pinching the stag beetle violently in the waist. When the pressure became intolerable he promptly relinquished his murderous attack on the bird, and clung to the lady's fingers. However, she shook him off without any difficulty, and the Greenfinch, recovering his breath and pluck simultaneously, hastily pecked her hand and flew away. He was absolutely unhurt, save for the two small holes caused by the insertion of the beetle's mandibles, and these, luckily, were not deep enough to cause any permanent mischief. T. BROWN.

Moulting and Colour Feeding.

By S. HADWIN (Liverpool).

A Lecture delivered before the members of the Birkenhead Society on July 16th.

Amongst the good muster present we noticed most of the prominent fanciers in the district. Mr. J. Burns occupied the chair, and, in introducing the lecturer, said that most of the members present knew the position Mr. Hadwin held in the Fancy, and he had no doubt he would be able to treat the matter before them in an able manner. He hoped the members would give Mr. Hadwin every attention, and after the lecturer had finished he was sure Mr. Hadwin would be only too pleased to answer any questions put to him. Mr. Burns then called upon Mr. Hadwin for his address.

Mr. Hadwin, on rising, said: Gentlemen, the questions we have to discuss to-night are moulting and colour feeding. Now, as these two questions run together, and as colour feeding can only be done during moult, it would be of no value to discuss them separately. There is very little difference in moulting non-colour specimens and colour-fed ones, with the exception, of course, that colour feed is used in one case and not in the other. This being so, we will take colour feeding first, and afterwards, if any questions arise on moulting non-colour-fed specimens, they can be dealt with then. The art of colour feeding, or, in other words, the feeding of birds to improve their natural colour, has become such a general practice of late years that it would only be a waste of time to go into its origin.

A FALSE PROPHECY.

It is not so very long ago that anti-colour feedists prophesied that colour feeding had had its day, and that it would die a natural death before long. Now, it is never safe to prophecy until you know, and I venture to say that colour feeding is more popular to-day than in any other period of the Fancy's existence. Take the four varieties—Yorkshires, Norwich, Lizards, and Cinnamons—and you will hardly find a non-fed specimen on the show bench. A lingering desire to prevent a too rapid death of the non-feds kept a class or two on the schedules of various shows, but these are gradually becoming extinct for want of support, and I am afraid something more than a "screech through the Fancy Press" will have to be done before natural colour classes will be revived in any quantity. The specialist clubs are the ruling powers in a matter of this kind, so I would advise anti-feedists to capture the voting power on these clubs, and then they would not be long in settling the question from their point of view.

BORDER MEN AGAINST FEEDING.

The old Border Fancy Club took this matter in hand, and by a large majority decided that colour feeding should cease so far as this variety was concerned. This action was backed up by the English and Welsh Clubs, and now there is not a fed Border Fancy to be seen, and the variety is becoming as popular, if not more so, than in the old colour-feeding days. This increasing popularity is no doubt due to the fact that it is easier to moult without colour feeding than with it. There are some who object to colour feeding on the ground that it injures the bird's health. This, in my opinion, is a great mistake. Birds can be moulted on colour feed quite as healthily as without it; in fact, it is more than probable that the extra care required when colour feeding tends to make the moulting process healthier than would be the case with non-fed birds.

THE ESSENTIALS OF MOULTING.

A healthy moult depends not on colour feeding or the absence of it, but on the conditions under which the birds are moulted. The practice which obtains amongst some fanciers (I am glad to think that the number gets fewer every year) of moulting birds practically in the dark cannot be too strongly condemned. It is both inhuman and unnecessary, as is also the practice of taking away the seed box when colour feeding. It is advisable to break the light so as not to have the full glare on the birds at this time; but there is a vast difference between shading the light and having birds practically in the dark. In the one case the birds will exercise themselves freely, whilst in the other they are practically still all the time; and there is no doubt that a bird getting natural exercise will moult out more healthily than one not getting this exercise. Then you must not lose sight of the fact that a healthy moult is a good moult—good for colour and good for stamina. You want both colour and stamina in the keen competition of the present day.

HOW TO MOULT HEALTHILY.

Now I will try and give you my ideas as to how this healthy moult can be obtained. I take it what is wanted is a quick, clean moult, with plenty of colour, and the sort of colour required a rich, deep, soft orange red. In the old days, when birds were cayenne-fed, the style of colour was a hard brick-red kind; but the advent of the cold pepper has made it possible to have a very much deeper and softer tone than formerly prevailed. Now, first of all, we will take the cages. These should be thoroughly cleaned before putting the birds in, especial care being taken that there are no red mites about. I like to use the ordinary breeding cages for moulting the show birds in, and to moult two in a cage.

I find that two, provided they agree, do better together than if moulted separately. They encourage each other to take exercise and baths. There are some birds that will not agree with others, so, of course, these have to be moulted separately. The stock birds could be thrown into the flights, so as to leave plenty of room in the breeding cages for the show birds. In front of the cages, about six inches away from the wires, there should be hung a thin gauze curtain, just sufficient to break the light without interfering with the free exercise of the birds, and a covering of brown paper or calico should be placed over the tops of the cages and project over the curtain a few inches, so as to keep the dust from falling on the birds. If the curtain is hung with hooks, it can be run from side to side without any trouble for cleaning or feeding purposes.

THE FIRST MOULT.

Now, as to the birds themselves, we will take the young ones first. I think it is advisable to keep them in cages about the breeding cage size until they are well on seed—say about six weeks old—and then let them have a fortnight or three weeks in the flights; after this, those that are intended to be moulted carefully should be taken out and put into the moulting cages. The first nest of young will commence to moult at from 10 to 12 weeks of age, and the second and third nests about a fortnight earlier in each case. The young birds having been got on to hard seed before putting into the flights, they can be left on seed for a week or two, and then the soft food should be gradually introduced again, with a little colour food added to it. The amount of colour feed should be very small at first, and gradually increased until the full strength is used. I cannot urge too strongly this gradual change from soft to hard food, and from hard food to soft, sudden change being very detrimental to the birds' health, as they are very liable to upset the birds' stomachs.

MOULTING A NATURAL SICKNESS.

It must not be forgotten that moulting is a sickness—a natural sickness, certainly—but still a sickness, and, therefore, anything liable to upset the birds should be strictly avoided. Now we come to the old birds. Those that have not been used for breeding will no doubt have been in the flight cages during the summer, and these should be put into the moulting cages about the end of July. Those that have been breeding should be given a week or two in the flight cages before being put into the moulting cages. It very frequently happens that some of the breeding stock show signs of breaking into moult before they have quite finished the last nest; therefore a small quantity of colour feed should be given them at this time, so as to make sure of getting them level in colour. These birds that show signs of breaking up into moult whilst feeding young should still be given a week or two in the flight to get them into good condition for moulting. It must not be forgotten that it is as much necessary to get birds into moulting condition as it is to get them into breeding or show condition.

HASTENING THE MOULT.

Now, having got the birds put up for moulting, the best thing is to get the feathers off as soon as possible, and so make way for the new ones. Where the birds do not show signs of breaking up naturally it is advisable to give them a little assistance, and for this purpose I do not know of anything better than rum, gentian and saffron, in the proportions of one quart rum, 2 ozs. gentian, ¼ oz. saffron. I prefer mixing this with the soft food in proportion of one teaspoonful of mixture to 20 teaspoonfuls of soft food, and given to the birds every other day until they are thoroughly broken up into moult. This mixture should be mixed a few days before using, so as to get the saffron thoroughly dissolved. Of course, the colour feeding has been going on all the time the birds are being broken up. And now we come to what is probably the most important part of colour feeding—viz., the feed itself.

HOW TO OBTAIN GOOD RESULTS.

In the first place, I consider that hot and cold peppers supply all the colouring matter necessary, but to bring out the best results a little oil and sugar should be added, and the whole mixed together a few weeks before required for use. By this means you get the peppers thoroughly incorporated and blended together and the colour extracted, so that it is not necessary to give the birds nearly so much as if given to them in a more or less dry state. Cold pepper contains the most colouring matter, but it does not last; it fades very quickly, especially if exposed to a strong light. It is also very relaxing and disagreeable to the taste. To correct this laxativeness, this disagreeableness to the palate, and this disposition to fade, a little hot pepper has to be used with the cold. I find pure ground cayenne the best form of hot pepper. There is a strong objection to cayenne, and yet I believe it is more healthy than cold pepper. Of course, it is like everything else—it has to be used in moderation. I do not know of a finer pick-me-up than this same cayenne if a bird is run down, or after coming back from a show.

Birds I have Kept.

By J. JONES (Dudley).

EXHIBITION NIGHTINGALES.

In choosing a bird for exhibition I always like one as large as I can get—one after the style of a Norwich Plainhead Canary, not long and thin looking, as some 'Gales are. See that it is nice and compact in feather, wing carried down after the stylo of the Robin, and one not too hollow in back, as many are. You will often see this failing, more so in the hens than in the cocks. Select a bird with a nice, clear, bold eye. In position he should stand well up on perch, and not be crouching down, as the majority of 'Gales do. With such a bird you will have an ideal specimen, fit for anyone to look at. You must train your birds to travel well from perch to perch, as nothing looks so bad in a show cage as to see a 'Gale dull and sluggish looking and cowering in a corner of his cage, trying his very best to hide himself from visitors. A Nightingale well put down is nearly always in the prize list. A Nightingale is a great attraction to visitors. They all wish to get a good look at one.

THE SONG OF THE 'GALE.

With regard to their song, don't run away with the idea that all 'Gales will sing in a cage, for if you do you will make a big mistake. You will not get one out of every dozen to sing well in a cage; but if you happen to have the good luck to get a wild caught one to sing, its song will well repay you for all the trouble you have taken with it in its cage life. Some people run away with the idea that they only sing at night, which is a great mistake, for we know very well all the best caged birds sing at daylight, and very rarely by gaslight. The one I have here to-night sings just as well by gas as by daylight, but still, as he has been cage-moulted five or six times, it makes all the difference to its singing. I think that is all I know about 'Gales. Now the food I have advised you to feed the 'Gales on will also do very well for the Wryneck, Redstart, Wagtail, etc., and by adding a few grocer's currants and sultanas, cut up fine, with a slice of orange and a piece of banana, you will have a grand food for the Blackcap.

A HANDSOME FELLOW.

We next touch on another of my favourite birds—viz., the Waxwing—and one that I have shown very successfully. I find they are very easy to cater for. They seem to thrive and get very fat on any good insectivorous food, but they require great attention, and must have their sand tray cleaned out very often, or else they soon get offensive. You should put fresh sawdust in the cage bottom at the very least three times a week. A good staple food for them I find is as follows:—Hard-boiled egg, ants' eggs, dried flies, with a good supply of grocer's currants. This is as good as any food you can make. Don't miss giving them currants, as they are very fond of them. Three or four mealworms a day will keep them nice and sleek in plumage. If you find them going slack in feather and falling away in flesh, and not looking so well as you would like, give them a good supply of live clean "gentles," as there is nothing that will pull a Waxwing round better than these. If you should have a few elderberries by you, soak them in warm water for a few minutes; they will work wonders with your bird. I think the Waxwing is one of the most taking exhibits on the show bench. When in good plumage and condition, its feathers fit it like a skin, and with care and attention they will live a very, very long time.

A STURDY CUSTOMER.

I don't know any bird that will stand the amount of knocking about the Waxwing will. Try and keep them in a very cold room, as they cannot stand any heat at all, but soon go loose in feather through it. All the Waxwings are inclined to get very fat in the cage. For that reason give them as much room as you can, so they can have plenty of exercise. At the same time, do not neglect to give them a bath in the cage. Some of them will not bathe at all, and when you find one that will not sprinkle him over every day, and he will soon take to his bath.

MOULTING A TIME OF TRIAL.

Now, it is at the time of moulting that we loose nearly all our Waxwings. For out of all the imported ones we get every year, not one out of every fifty survives the moult. I had only two moult out out of my last batch of seven, but I firmly believe if we give them a good supply of gentles, elderberries, and a few live ants' eggs, we shall be more successful in moulting them in the future than we have been in the past. Some of you will perhaps ask me about colour-feeding them. Well, I don't think it improves them to any great extent. The only difference I see it improves the yellow tips of the tail feathers; but, still, I think they are a lot better without it. Before concluding this short account of the Waxwing I may say they are very fond of the following berries when in season:—Hawthorn, mountain ash, and juniper.

THE CHIFFCHAFF.

The Chiffchaff is another bird I am very fond of, but I don't think any of us will be able to keep one for any length of time; but, still, the Chiffchaffs are always very interesting birds to have in one's collection. I have exhibited them myself several times very successfully, but they cannot stand a lot of travelling about from one show to another, as they must be fed very early in the morning and very late at night, or else we soon lose them. I had a very nice one this last show season, and at the same time very rare. It was a pure Albino, with pink eyes, and was pronounced one of the rarest birds seen on the show bench for many years. I much regret to say it has now gone over to the great majority, even though I tried all I knew to keep it alive. They seem to die without any apparent cause whatever. The way I fed mine was as follows:—Hard-boiled egg and bread ground up fine, with live ants and their eggs, gentles, and wasp grubs, and they seemed to do very well on this food; in fact, any live small insects seem to suit them very well. Should you try to put them on any of the so-called prepared foods which you see advertised, you will soon be in want of another Chiffchaff; for I don't think it is possible to keep them unless we supply them with some kind of live food. I have never kept one above twelve months.

THE WAGTAILS.

The Wagtails are a very interesting class of birds to have in one's aviary, and at the same time very easily catered for, as they seem to thrive very well on the food I advised to feed the Chiffchaff on. Keep them supplied with plenty of live food, and they will cause you very little trouble, for they always seem to keep in good condition. You must keep them well supplied with water to bathe in, as they are very fond of it. I find they are very easy to rear from the nest. Take them when they are about ten days old, feed on yolk of egg and some good ants' eggs, with a few mealworms chopped up very fine. You will rear them on this and nothing else. When they commence to feed themselves you will find them very fond of the wasp grub and live gentles. You can also feed them on hard-boiled egg, ants' eggs and dried flies, with grated carrot.

CAGES FOR WAGTAILS.

As regards their cages, I find one after the style of that for the Nightingale suits them very well, the only difference being the perches. These I place three or four inches apart, so they can step from one to the other quite easily, for they always seem to be on the run. Never have anything to do with an old wild caught bird, for, do what you will, they never seem to get tame; and, as you can get the young so very easy, it is far better to hand-rear them, so that you can get them nice and steady for the show bench.

THE GREY THE FAVOURITE.

The Grey Wagtail in spring plumage is one of the very best for exhibition purposes, bar the Blue-headed one, which is no doubt an exile from another country. The breast of the Grey Wagtail, when in spring plumage, is a very deep yellow, back a nice silvery grey; the flights are a very dark brown (some say nearly black), with the inner margin nearly white. At the latter end of August, when they begin to moult, the throat looks nearly white, the breast a very pale buff; the underparts are a very nice yellow, the rump nearly of the same colour; the back has a very nice tinge of green. I may say the young do not get the full colour till they are twelve months old, or in the second moult, to be more precise. If you require them for exhibition, you will have to colour-feed them, as this adds very much to the colour of their plumage. For a show cage get one about 14 ins. long, 9 ins. deep, 8 ins. high, with four perches or steps, which you prefer, and enamel same a nice dark holly green, for it to show the yellow off to perfection.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

No show secretary should be without this invaluable index to exhibitors all over the country. If any section be weak, reference to the Register of Wins will immediately enable a whip up to be sent.

"I have received the ANNUAL (part 2), with thanks. It might well have been called "Cage Birds Directory." There is no doubt it will be very useful in this way, comprising, as it does, the names and addresses of almost every exhibitor of cage birds of any note. It will also be very useful to fanciers when they are purchasing stock. They can see at a glance whether the advertiser has done any winning with his birds, and in this way save the cost of part 2 many times over.—THOS. ROBSON, 41, Shield-st., Newcastle-on-Tyne."

The Amateur's Aviary of Foreign Birds.

Of course, it may happen that a suitable wall for building one's aviary against is not available, in which case one has to fall back on a separate building; but in constructing this the same principle must be borne in mind—to have an inner house thoroughly protected from wind, and met by close sides, with an open wire flight if space is sufficient for this.

It is quite possible to keep foreign birds even without the convenience of a garden or yard; I know of some which were successfully kept in an area with the grating—an ordinary one flush with the pavement—covered with wire-netting, and the inmates of this original aviary always seemed lively and happy. Many areas are much more well adapted for keeping birds than this one, and I rather wonder that the idea of thus utilising these spaces has not been more taken up by town avieulturists.

Another good place for an aviary is the end of a balcony or verandah—and an empty room is perhaps the best of all, if the lighting be good. To make a room into an aviary the window should, of course, be fitted with a wire frame (half inch mesh), and it should generally be left open. Care should be taken to arrange the netting so that birds cannot get jammed between it and the sashes, if these are allowed to remain, which will be as well, so as to be able to close them and keep the place warmer in cold weather. Some ventilation, however, must at all times be allowed.

Such a room should, of course, like an aviary, be fitted wth perches in the form of natural boughs, and have nesting-boxes hung in suitable corners. The arrangements for food and water should also be the same as mentioned for an outdoor aviary, and to prevent the water being splashed about it is well to place the pan on a wide tray and surround it with turf, which will be kept fresh for some time by the splashing of the birds.

KEEPING A CLEAR FLOOR.

A room devoted to birds should have the floor covered with oilcloth; this may either be sanded or left bare and wiped over at frequent intervals, in which case sand must be supplied separately in a box. The same choice of methods of dealing with the flooring applies also, of course, to an outdoor aviary, but as the objection to sand there, which might be made in a house, does not apply, it is best to use it.

In the bird-room it is possible to obviate walking on a sanded floor and carrying the sand about on one's boots by laying planks from the door to the food and water vessels, which will be all that need constant attention. Once a week is often enough to clean an aviary out, and if breeding is going on it is better to leave the birds undisturbed, and throw down some more sand or earth if deemed necessary.

Besides rooms, recesses indoors, if well-lighted, may be converted into aviaries for birds, but I do not recommend these, as they do not give the birds enough fresh air, unless quite close to a window. If a recess is available it would be better to have a big cage made to fit it, and move this out bodily at frequent intervals to give the birds an airing.

This brings me to what is, after all, the most easy method of keeping forcign birds—their location in large indoor cages, such as the well-known Crystal Palace aviaries. These cages, as usually made, have several obvious advantages; the fact that they can be divided into three compartments by slides is one, and another is that the dome in the centre makes a good roosting and retiring place, which can be made as shady and snug as you like by means of a cloth cover, while the rest of the cage is left light and airy. They are particularly suitable as homes for collections of tiny Finches, such as Waxbills, and if only tenanted by these can be made very pretty.

GREEN SURROUNDINGS.

The floor in such a case should be covered with turfs, which can be put outside to freshen and revive when the grass is flagging, and twiggy plants in pots can be made to serve as perches to some extent, these being often removed and replaced by others; it is easy to have a number of pot-plants available. Plants infested with aphides will, of course, benefit by the attentions of the birds, for which these little insects are the best of food, so that the whole idea can be worked on the "mutual aid" principle.

Tiny Finches should always be provided with roosting-places, in the form of cocoanut shells and the little rounded wicker and rush baskets sold for the purpose—not open cup-shaped ones, but barrel-shaped, with the entrance at one end. These should be taken out now and again and scalded to free them from possible parasites; of course, they must be thoroughly dried before being put back.

The same idea should be carried out with regard to the perches, which should be often taken out and wiped down with a wet cloth. If they can be arranged so as not to cross the cleaning will naturally not require to be done so often. Natural twigs, by the way, are the best perches for aviary-cages as well as aviaries; they should not be all of one thickness, and it will be found that birds often prefer a thin to a thick perch, in spite of what one reads about their supposed discomfort if they have to grip their support with their toes nearly meeting.

This may be so in the case of Canaries and fowls, whose power of grasp may have degenerated owing to long domestication, but it does not apply to wild birds. Only think, for instance, on what thin twigs such big birds as Rooks habitually perch, building, as they do, on the tops of trees.

Perches which swing, or which twirl round, are better removed, as these are neither natural nor necessary. Those which are made to fix on to the wires are, however, very convenient, being easily removed and just about big enough for a pair of birds to sit on; it will be noticed that, in any case, birds like to sit near the wires, so that it is no disadvantage that such perches do not reach across the cage.

PROTECTION OF THE FOOD SUPPLY.

In aviary-cages care and thought are, of course, necessary to prevent the birds fouling their food and water supply. Both food and water are best put inside, so as to facilitate the ready access of the birds to them, but they must not go under a perch. If this is unavoidable a small table must be arranged to stand over the food and water pans, or those large glass baths with arched top, sold to hang on outside thrush cages, will be found useful. For seed, hoppers are easily obtained, but, whatever vessels are used, unless the food is placed well away from the sides of the cage, a great many husks will find their way into the room.

It is, of course, a good plan to supply water in those glass fountains with a spout at the bottom, and only offer the bath once or twice a day; but everyone has not the time for this. It is as well to have such a fountain in one's possession, however, in case circumstances should render it inexpedient to leave a bath constantly with the birds.

The usual place in which an aviary-cage is stood is on a table in front of the window; but this location is very undesirable if there is any draught, and, in any case, when the window is opened for airing the room in cold weather, a cover should be thrown over the side of the aviary nearest the window, so as not to give the birds a chill.

As most "Crystal Palace" aviaries are apparently made on the assumption that Canaries will be kept in them, the food and water receptacles will be found placed outside, with corresponding head-holes for the birds. This is all very well if you are keeping birds as big as Canaries, but if the inmates are the tiny Finches above-mentioned the boxes will have to be removed and the holes stopped up, or the little things will easily escape through them In buying an aviary for tiny Finches it is well to see that the wires are close, for if they are at all wide such tiny birds as Grey and Orange-breasted Waxbills may get out between them.

In the long winter nights it will be as well to stand a lamp near a foreign-bird aviary tenanted by Waxbills for an hour or so before you go to bed, to give the little things a chance of taking supper if they desire it.

AVOID OVER-POPULATION.

With regard to the stocking of aviaries and indoor aviary-cages, the well-known rule of allowing one bird of the size of a Sparrow to a square foot of floor space should be borne in mind; so many people err by overcrowding their birds. Height does not count, as what one has to consider is the amount of fouling of the floor, though, of course, the higher the aviary the more exercise the birds can get in it, and hence the better is their condition likely to be.

In making the estimate of what an outside aviary can contain one must leave the flight out of consideration, and treat it as an extra, for against the greater amount of fresh air available in an outdoor aviary one must reckon the fact that it is not likely to be so often cleaned out as an indoor abode for cage-birds.

In stocking an indoor cage or recess it is better to confine one's self to male birds only, or to be content with one or two pairs if the birds are wanted for breeding, since for breeding birds a certain amount of space is imperative to enable them to get out of each others' way, while a set of bachelors with nothing but the club dinner to quarrel about will be able to rub along all right in confined quarters. (To be continued.)

UNIONISM IN YORKSHIRE.

An Interview with Mr. Fred. Hammond, Hon. Sec. of the Yorkshire Union of C.B.S.

BY THEIR WORK ARE KNOWN.

Are the shows and judges in the Union arranged on the same lines as of old?—Practically they are, but actually not. The Council selected thirty-two judges' names and sent them out to the societies to be voted upon by ballot, and the eighteen receiving the highest number of votes were then balloted for by the Council for the different shows, in the same manner as in the old Union. The result of the voting showed that there was a wonderful unanimity prevailing throughout the county as to who were the best judges, for when the votes of the societies were counted, there were not three dividing the first twelve judges. The others were more straggling. In cases where any of the judges selected could not officiate, we called on the reserves, taking first the judge who came nineteenth on the list. Mr. Battye, our President, was one of the original eighteen, and so was Mr. Wilman; but, as neither of them could accept, we had to take Messrs. Harrison and Dawson, who were the first two reserves.

Do the shows still run in automatic rotation—the first two one year becoming the last two the next, and so on?—Yes; we cannot improve upon the old system in that direction. It is fair to all, and it suits all, because everyone knows that by taking turn and turn about, the good years cover the bad ones; whilst the enormous uumber of members now in the Union prevents any show, early or late, from being a failure.

THE YORKSHIRE UNION AND THE C.B.U.

Now, Mr. Hammond, I come to a ticklish subject—one which has caused a lot of controversy—the C.B.U. Why is it that the Yorkshire Union has not joined the Cage Bird Union, are the members against it? I would like you to give me your own personal opinion. I, of course, cannot ask you to speak officially for the Yorkshire Union, neither do I wish to do so; but I believe the positiou of the Yorkshire Union in relation to the Cage Bird Union is somewhat misunderstood?—I agree with you. I think our position in Yorkshire is not clearly understood, but I can assure you we are not against the Cage Bird Union. In Yorkshire our societies are together. We have our own Union, with its own rules both for governing the working of the Union and the shows. We have Home Rule, of which we are proud. We understand our own affairs, our own wishes and necessities, and we cannot see how any big National Union can do better for us than our own organisation. It could not possibly understand our affairs as we understand them ourselves.

The members of the Yorkshire Union could not very well object to the Cage Bird Union, seeing that the rules of each have much in common?—That is so. There is much that covers the same ground in both sets of rules, and it is here we clash with the C.B.U. Our rules provide that in case of any dispute, the rules of the Yorkshire Union shall prevail over all other rules. This being so, we could not let the C.B.U. rules prevail over ours; it would mean taking the government of the Yorkshire Union out of the hands of its members. Then, again, there is the question of contributions. We should be paying something like £10 per year and getting no benefit, because our own Union gives us all we want. Yorkshiremen don't like to part with money without getting something for it.

I agree with you, Mr. Hammond. "Brass is noau so easily haddled," I interjected.

YORKSHIREMEN LOVE FREEDOM.

Then they do object, and seriously too, to Rule 17 of the C.B.U. Yorkshiremen will not be bound. They will not be told they must only show here or there. They are not bound in any way to their own shows. They can show at home, and they can show away. The Yorkshire Uniou imposes no bonds in that respect. It gives its members perfect liberty and freedom to show where they like, and it also extends that freedom to outside fanciers who may wish to show at Yorkshire Union shows. They give a free hand to all, and keep none out.

In a word, then, the Yorkshire Unionists are Home Rulers and Free Traders? Laughingly, Mr. Hammond replied: You have hit the situation exactly.

Thus ended my interview with one who possesses all the typical shrewdness of his county and also its good old sporting spirit. In Mr. Hammond the Yorkshire Union have an official who I am confident will uphold all that is best in the Yorkshire Fancy, and in whose hands its past traditions aud future welfare are in safe keeping.

Light and Life.

Mr. J. J. Robson writes:—My attention was called to strange sounds emanating from the interior of an iron lamp post on the platform of Wetheral Station. Owing to the cautiousness of the "old 'uns," some time elapsed before I had the satisfaction of seeing a Great Tit with food enter a small hole, some 14 ins. from the ground, to quieten for the time being the family so safely encased in this strange nesting place.

WILD BIRD NOTES AND QUERIES.

Scarcity of Birds Abroad.

Travellers upon the Continent cannot but notice the scarcity of birds in many parts. This is partly accounted for by the great demand of all species for food; none are too large, none too small. Italy is almost denuded of feathered life, and during the spring and autumn migrations every inhabitant does his best to thin out the tired birds as they pass through the country. It is a wonder that insects of all kinds do not increase to such an extent as to become a plague, but we are told that the country is infested with lizards; these live chiefly upon flies, etc., and thus keep the insect life somewhat in check.

Woodpigeons in the City.

True countrymen cannot understand how it is such shy birds as Pigeons can possibly be found anywhere within the London area. There is no doubt but that the Dove family can be brought to a certain degree of tameness as easily as other species. Around this district Wood Pigeons and Stock Doves are exceedingly plentiful. These are seldom molested, consequently we can easily get within 20 yards or so of them. In another part, where they are frequently shot for food, they are extremely shy and wary, and it is only by chance or accident that one is able to get near enough to distinguish the species. Undoubtedly the wild Pigeons frequenting the parks and streets of London have acquired their tameness through not being molested. Birds are quick to recognise their friends.

The Song of the Wood Warbler.

The rambler through the woods has occasionally found a little yellowish bird, with a voice shrill and powerful for his size. When two of them sing in rivalry in the early summer months they make quite a din. The song is decidedly unmusical, and yet, if we can only manage to observe the musician, it is quite enjoyable. The actions of the little bird emphasizes the song; the play of the wings is charming—they make full amends for the indifferent melody. He commences with a single note, which loudens and quickens into a shivering passage, accompanied by fluttering and trembling, giving one the impression that the whole soul of the bird is in his song, that the singer enjoys the performance as much or more than the listener. Truly the little Wood Warbler is as charming as any of our Lesser Warblers.

Why Birds Moult.

Birds and animals undergo an annual shedding of covering, either feathers or fur. After being in constant use for many months, it must be evident that this covering must require renewing. If one is able to get possession of a two or three year old bird of any species, and will carefully examine the feathers, they will be astonished to see what a quantity of them are frayed aud worn at the edges; therefore, unless these were renewed at stated intervals, they would in time become useless. In some of the larger species the primary wing feathers are as much worn as they would be if the bird had been caged. The new plumage always appears clean and bright, showing clearly how dirty and faded the old one must be.

Ravens on Rimside Moor.

Mr. D. D. Dixon, the historian of Whittingham Vale and of Upper Coquetdale, says that a pair of Ravens have, this season, nested on the cliffs of Coe Crag, a lonely rocky hill on the northern confines of Rimside Moor; also that their young have been safely fledged. The Raven was once common enough in the wilds of Northumberland, and, according to Mr. Dixon's "Upper Coquetdale," "a pair of Ravens bring forth their brood each year in Raven's Crag, near Milkhope." How long might it be since there were Ravens nesting at Little Whickhope, North Tyue; at Cattlehope Spout, on the Reedwater; and at Raven's Cleugh, near Alwinton?

The Hawk and the Skylark.

A gentleman, it is said, was driving along a road the other day when, to his great surprise, a Skylark flew into his gig and took refuge under the seat. He looked around and observed, hovering overhead, a Hawk ready to pounce upon his prey. Determined to defend the poor bird that had sought his protection, he drove away at full speed. But the Hawk was by no means disposed to be baffled, and on he flew, equalling the horse in speed, and keeping his keen eyes fixed on the Lark's hiding-place. He continued the chase for upwards of two miles, circling, hovering and swooping past the driver with great determination. The poor Lark still clung to its new ally, showing all the while signs of the most abject terror. At last the Hawk gave up the chase, and flew back in the direction whence he had come. All danger over, the gentleman took the Skylark and, when it had somewhat recovered from fright, let it go, and it flew joyfully away across the neighbouring heath, and was speedily lost to view.

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor for the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers. In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

MY SELF-ACTING SPRING NET TRAPS.

Catch birds of every description without any attention, price 1/6; larger size, 2/-; carriage paid. I have received hundreds of testimonials stating they are worth double the money of any trap advertised. Read two, and beware of cheaper imitations that are not worth the cost of carriage:—"Sir,—I received the net trap; it is honestly worth a dozen of some of the nets advertised. I tried it this afternoon, and caught more birds in two hours than I have caught in other traps in two months.—George Matthews." "2, Lucas-st., Stockport.—Sir,—Trap arrived safe. It is far superior to all others. I have to-day caught fifteen Linnets, six Redpolls, four Chaffinches, three Greenfinches.—J. Scragg, The Old Brewery, Armitage-road, Rugeley." Trap cages, nicely finished, single 6d., double 10d., treble 1/3 Entirely self-acting and self-setting trap cage, registered No. 23927, warranted to catch birds and re-set without any attention, 1/6; call cages, 4d. HYGIENE OF BIRD KEEPING.

By W. GEO. CRESWELL, M.D., L.R.C.P., F.Z.S.

Price 1/1, post free from CAGE BIRDS Offices,
154, FLEET STREET, LONDON, E.C.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

LANCET: "This little book will be welcomed by all lovers of birds, whether ornithologists, aviculturists, or the owners of a single pet songster. The author deals with his subject in a thoroughly practical and scientific manner, and the results of his experiments prove the fallacy of some rule-of-thumb theories. . . . The book is well illustrated."

COUNTRY LIFE: " . . . a surprising amount of really valuable advice for all who keep small birds, whether in cages or aviaries. . . . Those who approach the subject with an open mind must admit the cogency of the author's arguments; and these, backed by a very wide experience at first hand, will prove hard nuts to crack for many of the champions of the 'good old methods.' . . . We venture to think that his experience will pave the way for a revolution in the methods of bird keeping in the near future."

THE GREAT POINT

in buying birds is to get the best possible value for money. When buying from me there can be no doubt as to the value, as I send everything on approval entirely at my own risk, and refund money in full unless purchaser is fully satisfied. Grand large Worcestershire cock Goldfinches, warranted in perfect health and feather, 1/0 each, three 4/-, six 6/6, or 12/- dozen. Specially selected large cocks, to moult for exhibition, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-, or 10/- dozen. Two-year-old cock Goldfinch, used as call bird, 3/-. Hen Goldfinches, 1/- each, three 2/-. Warranted cock brown Linnets, in perfect health, three 1/0, six 2/0, or 4/- dozen. Hen Linnets, 1/- dozen. Cock Greenfinches, three 1/-. Cock Chaffinches, 9d. each, three 2/-. Young cock Bullfinches, 1/- and 1/0 each. Two-year-old hand-reared cock Bullfinch, finger-tame, and full song, 3/-. Cock Larks, in nest feather, 1/- and 1/6 each. Hand-reared Merlin Hawks (very rare), cocks or hens, in splendid plumage, 5/- each. Self-acting spring net traps (nearly 2,000 sold last year), 24 in. long 1/- each, 18 in. long 9d. each. Self-setting and self-acting trap cages, 1/0 each. Single trap cages, 6d. each; double ditto, 10d. and 1/- each; treble ditto, 1/3 each; all with separate compartment for call bird. Round or square-topped call cages, 3d. each, 2/0 dozen, 27/- gross. Linnet or Goldfinch cages, 6d. each, 4/0 dozen. Real Japanese birdlime, absolutely strongest made, and only lime to stand all weathers, ¼ lb. 6d., ½ lb. 10d., 1 lb. 1/0, sample 3d., all packed in air-tight tins and sent post free. Loose netting, for all kinds bird nets, ¾ in. mesh, 7 ft. deep, 3d. yard; 9 ft. deep, 4d. yard; 12 ft. deep, 5d. yard, post free. This netting is guaranteed genuine thread, and actual measurement is guaranteed to every customer. Clap nets, 3 yards long, 4/- pair, 4 yards 5/-, 5 yards 0/-, 6 yards 7/-, 7 yards 8/-, 8 yards 9/-, 9 yards 10/-, 10 yards 11/-; all 4 ft. deep, made from ¾ in. thread netting and fitted complete with hemp lines, pegs, poles, etc., all ready for immediate setting. Full list of all catching appliances, one stamp. Every description of net kept in stock or made to order from the old-fashioned cod net to the latest fly net. All nets are made by men who are not only practical net makers, but have had a thorough experience in bird catching as well, and so know exactly what is required for the purpose. All the leading catchers are now using nets supplied by me. For months and months last season I publicly asked everybody that was not well pleased with my catching appliances to smash them up, and I would refund every penny of their money, but not one article was broken; this fact alone speaks volumes. All birds sent out are guaranteed exactly as represented, and are well on hard seed. I claim to be the originator of approval system in connection with wild birds, and during the whole 16 years I have been trading have never done business on any other terms. For genuine Worcestershire netted birds I solicit one trial, and ask to be judged by result. Kindly note address; by far the largest and only centrally situated bird stores in Birmingham—

W. CORE, 131, Cooch-st., Birmingham.

A Real Live Question.

IS IT A BIRD YOU WANT?

If so, I will tell you what I am prepared to do. I have a large number of 1907 Birds and the Cocks are not yet in full song, but still I am prepared to guarantee the sex, and should by any chance the Bird not prove to be a Cock I will exchange any time between now and January 1st, 1908.

My Offer means that I will return your cash or send you a satisfactory Bird if the one sent fails to please.

1907 Birds.—Pure prize-bred Yorkshire Cocks, 4/-, 4/6, 5/6, 7/6, and 8/6; Hens, 2/-, 2/6, and 3/6; Pairs (Cock and Hen), 5/6, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, and 10/6. Travelling Cages are charged for, 3d. extra.

All Birds sent out for Cocks bear my stamp, which is my guarantee of sex, and all Birds bearing such stamp will be exchanged any time between now and January 1st, 1908. The above terms are an absolute safeguard against the well-known Hen Trick practised by others.

Yorkshire Cocks for the early shows at reasonable prices. All other Birds on my usual approval terms.

For full detailed Bird Price List send postcard, or on receipt of two penny stamps to cover postage, I will send my 106 page Catalogue, full of useful information, and should be in every birdroom.

LONDON WILD BIRDS.

Some to be Protected all the Year Round.

A List of Fifty Four.

A curious rural charm—suggestive of a London embossomed in trees and musical with Thrush and Linnet instead of with the hoot of motors—breathes through no less prosaic a document than a London County Council "legal notice" published this week. It is, briefly, an announcement that from henceforward the "close time" for all wild birds throughout the county of London will be extended as from January 31st to September 1st; and that certain birds and their eggs shall be protected all the year, with a fine of £5 per bird and £1 per egg taken or destroyed.

There follows a list of 54 "smaller fowls," the very existence (says the "Daily Chronicle") of some of which in London at all might well come as a surprise to the average Cockney. Many, for instance, whose London birdlore extends little farther than to recognise the Blackbird, the Thrush, the Starling, the Robin, the Lark and the Swallow, may be interested to find the "Buzzard and Honey Buzzard" officially recognised by the County Council as quite possible London visitors.

Then there is our smallest Hawk—known as the "Hobby"—the Kingfisher, the Woodpecker, the Merlin, the Osprey, the Owl, the Shrike, the "Bearded Tit, or Reed-Pheasant," the "Landrail or Cornerake," the Night-jar, the "Wryneck or Cookoo's Mate, or Snake-bird," and so on and so on.

This is not all. So that there shall be no mistake about the scope of the edict, certain parishes are enumerated where the taking of wild birds in general is prohibited on Sundays, but permitted during the week. The names of some of these are occasionally pretty enough, but the reality sometimes bears a strange relation to the possibility of present-day bird-catching.

NO SUNDAY BIRD-CATCHING.

Thus the dweller in St. Botolph's, Aldgate, is somewhat tantalisingly informed that he may catch there as many Yellowhammers or Whip-poor-wills as he can during the six days, but on the Sabbath he must forbear! So, too, with the "Hamlet of Mile End Old Town," Saffron Hill, the "Hamlet of Ratcliff," St. Saviour, "including the Liberty of the Clink," and certain other quarters, where one fancies the gaol-bird would be, nowadays, the most characteristic, if not the only, ornithological treasure.

With this, as a representative learnt in a talk with Mr. Alfred Webb, Hon. Sec. of the Selborne Society, nothing could be more necessary from one point of view, and hopeful from another, than this latest charter of the London birds.

"Naturally the list would surprise the man in the street," said Mr. Webb, "but I assure you there are very few birds on the Council's list that are not comparatively common visitors to London. Certainly none of them are impossible. The rarest, perhaps, is the Buzzard which is seldom seen in England at all. But still, it may always turn up somewhere, and if it did so in London it would probably be shot immediately, without such protection.

"As for the rest, you would be amazed how many of them are to be seen constantly by anyone who takes the trouble to watch. As you know, the Nightingale sings still within the four-mile radius at Hampstead; Sedge-warblers are heard again and again in the London parks, as also Chaffinches, Goldfinches, Tits, Flycatchers, Whitethroats, Stonechats, Redstarts, Wrens, and many another of the Council's protegees.

"The Wood-pigeons, by the way—which I notice are not protected—are, if anything, increasing in numbers, in places like Kensington Gardens; and only the other day I saw a wild Dabchick in St. James's Park.

A FEATHERED SANCTUARY.

"So far as concerns the whole of London, the Council list could be easily increased. As you may know, the Selborne Society has a 'bird sanctuary' near Hanwell, which is at any rate in the London postal district. There we have already noticed no fewer than 67 different kinds of wild birds—including Kingfishers, Lapwings, Jays, Jackdaws, Tree-pipits, Fieldfares, Snipe, Turtle-doves, and many not mentioned by the Council. This very year I have been able to photograph there a Cuckoo in a Whitethroat's nest.

"On the other hand," Mr. Webb continued, "though it may seem strange in some of the central parishes, there has been a genuine, crying need for this protection all over London. You must remember that there is no necessity for the bird-catchers to go away into the woods to do their work. Wherever there is a bit of waste ground—a railway embankment, or anything like that—they will take their 'call-bird' and some lime and food, and lure any number of little songsters.

"You would be astonished to find what an all-prevalent affair this business of bird-catching is. I have known of cases in the Council parks where special men have had to be told off to watch even a Blackbird's or a Thrush's nest. These town poachers nearly always go out on Sunday—hence the Council's provision.

"Another very shrewd and necessary thing about the Council's list is the including of different names for the same bird. These bird-catching fellows are extremely cute in pleading ignorance. For example, if you charge them with catching a 'Wryneck,' they will swear that they did not know that name, and were always brought up to call it a 'Cuckoo's-mate' or 'Snake-bird.' I am afraid they are 'Snake-birds' themselves often enough!"

CANARY BREEDING.

By Miss Shephard.

One of the Prize-winning Essays in the recent Competition promoted by the City and Suburban A.C.B.

The breeding of birds is a hobby which should be encouraged in young people as well as older ones. It makes them much kinder in their nature to all things living, whether great or small.

SUITABLE ENVIRONMENT.

Now, to begin to breed, one must find a suitable place. If one cannot get a room to themselves, a corner in the living room or sitting room will answer the same purpose. Having selected the place, next see about your cages, which would be those known as single—24 in. long, 10½ in. wide, and 18 in. high—or double breeders, 3 ft. long, with the other measurements the same as the single ones; but you must be guided by your own judgment and the amount of room you have at your disposal. Your cages should have drinkers and seed glasses or troughs (whichever you prefer), and little egg drawers for the egg food, as then you do not have to disturb the birds by putting your hand inside the cage whilst they are sitting. Plenty of nice shell gravel should always be on the bottom of the cage, not forgetting a piece of cuttle-fish, which fix to the side of the cage for the birds to peck at. This is most essential, as it is to them like salt to our food.

COMMON BIRDS AT FIRST.

Now, the next thing to do is to see about our birds. We will suppose this is our first attempt at breeding, and I do not think it would be wise to pay a heavy price to start with, as you cannot always expect to be successful at first; but after one nest you can generally see where the mistakes are, then you can do better with the next.

Having paired up your birds, and finding they agree well together, place a nest pan in the cage. The best ones, I think, are those like little basins, and it is as well to line them with something soft; for sometimes the hen will not make a very nice nest herself, and often the eggs get broken, so it's as well to be on the safe side; then put them some nesting material, which should consist of moss and soft hair, which one can buy very cheap ready prepared.

REMOVAL OF THE EGGS.

When the hen begins to lay, each morning the egg must be taken away until she has laid the third, then, on the evening of the third, put them all back. By this means all the birds will be hatched the same day. If left to take their chance, the birds would hatch out one day after the other; thus the first birds could get all the food, as they would be three days older than the others, and the later hatched ones would die. Give the birds plenty of canary seed, and, a day or so before the young are due to hatch, some egg food, which must consist of hard-boiled egg and biscuit. Osborne biscuits are considered the best, but are somewhat expensive. Give them this until the young ones are able to eat seed. They must also have a supply of rape and hemp seed. A good many people differ on this subject, so it is always best to be guided by what your birds prefer.

THE SECOND NEST.

After the young ones are about three weeks old the hen generally wants to nest again, and, as her babies are not quite old enough to perch, they must be placed in the bottom of the cage, and a fresh nest pan put for the mother to make another nest in, or else she will turn them out. You must give her plenty of the nesting material, or else she will begin to pluck all the young ones' feathers out.

When the little ones begin to perch they are likely to disturb the hen, who should now be commencing to sit again. To avoid this, they should be put into nursery cages—that is, if you are using single breeders. Hang the nursery cages on the front of the breeding cage, and the cock bird will feed the youngsters until they are able to feed themselves, which is about four weeks from the time they hatch out.

By this time you will be able to see the little mistakes made, also the temper of the birds, for they are like human beings, and have their little whims and fancies.

CLEANLINESS A VIRTUE.

Always be scrupulously clean with your cages. Give your birds fresh water daily, not forgetting the bath, as there is nothing they like so much. A little watercress or sweet apple is a great treat to them, but they must be perfectly fresh.

In the breeding of birds one has to use his own judgment a good deal, as what is good for one is not for another; and many a bitter disappointment is often the result of hard work and precious time wasted; but to a true fancier these little set-backs act as a spur to the attainment of something better.

"I am only a beginner," says Mr. Charles Bogg (Horncastle), "and only saw your excellent paper a few weeks ago, when a friend lent me one or two copies. I obtained your paper this week and am charmed with it, and shall now become a regular subscriber. The coloured plates are very pretty, and are now ornamenting my kitchen.

A BUTTER-MAKING CANARY.

A TALL YARN NOT MADE IN AMERICA.

By A. C. Self.

I am going to tell you about my Canary. If you expect to hear the ordinary hum-drum yarn about the points of any one particular breed of bird, you will be disappointed. If you are a George Washington, don't go any further, but stop right here. At the same time, if you are under the impression that this is a throw-out essay from a lying competition, there, again, you are wrong. I have found it necessary to commence with this warning, for on every occasion on which I have spoken about my Canary it has always been followed by a funeral or a protracted sojourn in hospital for some doubting Thomas. What was it that the great Shakespeare said when he had finished writing "Love's Labour Lost"? (The Editor says I must not tell you; so, rather than this sad disappointment should weigh too heavily on you, I will go right ahead with the true story of my Canary). But, before I proceed any further, I may as well say, "Although you believe me, there are thousands who would not." Furthermore, if there should be one among the many thousands who devour these lines and doubts the veracity of any statement herein contained, let him answer to me. There is a lovely spot within easy reach of here, if he would like to see it. Tombstones for ornaments, with epitaphs which speak more eloquently than any words of mine of my straight-shooting ability. (The Editor has promised me, on the quiet, that he will absolutely refuse to give anyone my address).

But now for my yarn. I am sure by this time you are dying for this true and unvarnished anecdote. You will excuse me again reminding you that this yarn is true, won't you? You see, I am trying to believe it myself. But, there, why should a man who has swallowed a camel strain at a Canary?

Well, this Canary that there is so much fuss about came into my possession in quite an unusual manner. Through the great distress which was prevalent recently, a worthy son of toil was compelled to leave this "free country" and take up his abode in one of our Colonies. He could not take his pet with him, so what better could he do than turn it into money? If he sold it, it would not add much to his scanty store of filthy lucre, so the idea struck him that he would raffle it. In one of London's great business houses, where the apple of his eye—in the shape of a son—was employed, this coup was brought off. The eventful day arrived, and the lucky person who won the prize had no use for it (as is generally the case in these matters), and forthwith offered to sell it at a price—but what a price! Finding that no one was particularly anxious to ruin themselves for the sake of improving his financial status, he decided to take the bird home, thinking that in a day or so they would come to his price. But, sad to relate, long before he arrived home that bird and he parted company. Whether the bird was pleased at the change I cannot say; but, strange as it may seem, from that very moment the Canary seemed to alter in value. No one had ever heard anyone say anything about this bird's qualities before, and no one has ever heard or seen the like of him now. But I do not want to get beyond myself, as it were. I would rather break it to you gradually.

As I have already said, our friend did not reach home in company with his newly-acquired pet. Like many another, under similar circumstances, who imagine they have got something for nothing, he forthwith hied him to the nearest hostelry, and with several friends commenced what one of our great specialists—Bass, I think it was—called "irrigating his tonsils." And with such good effect that, before the "shades of night were falling fast," he was in such a condition that he found himself incapable of truthfully affirming whether it was the shades of night falling, or a basket of crockery. Anyhow, eventually he did arrive home, but not before he had had another and a more serious attack—this time the attack was one which will not be found in the British Pharmacopæia, but possibly on the records of "Fagin's Kitchen." He had, according to his statement subsequently, given half-a-sovereign for a sixpence! Altogether, that raffle had cost him almost as much, according to his account, as the Canary Islands are worth, and he did not have even that single Canary to show for all this prodigality. It was early on in his career of "budget balancing"—he called it "temperance" (putting down the drink)—that he lost and I found this Canary. It happened this way: He had placed the bird in the fireplace, nice and comfortable like, while he was practicing one of Sandow's famous exercises—bending the arm at the elbow and raising the hand to the mouth. This sounds easy enough, and so it is; but you try to do it about twenty times in an hour, and see how difficult it becomes. Of course, you must have a glass with something fresh in it each time, and it is all the more difficult if some one other than yourself is paying for the re-fills. As I have already said, the bird was left in the fireplace whilst this exercise was going on, but long before the "last act" it was transferred to more congenial quarters—and there it remains to this day. Now, don't begin to say hard things; it was not stolen—only borrowed—and our friend has been more than repaid for any temporary discomfiture he may have suffered.

In its newly-acquired home this bird took upon itself a complete metamorphosis—this is not a "terminological inexactitude," but a bald fact. Whether it was possessed of more intelligence, or whatever goes for intelligence in Canaries, I do not profess to know; but certain it is a change seemed to come over that bird. It did not sing so wonderfully, but it seemed to know how it came into my possession, and every time I looked at him or essayed to speak to him he cast reproachful glances at me. Have you ever seen a Canary wear a reproachful look? No! well—don't wish to. It is awful. That look haunts me even as I write. This is the sort of thing I am continually hearing: "Do you mean to say you cannot hear our new Canary sing?" Sing! Shades of Great Cæsar! If the gurgling sound of a torrent passing through a giant's gullet is singing, I have no ear for music. The wife says it's a roller—I suppose that is the effect of intemperance. To me it is a mocking bird. Not satisfied with occupying my waking hours, it takes upon itself all sorts of hideous and grotesque forms during my slumbers.

The other night I thought I had him. There was a large pan of milk on the table. At the other end of the same table I was busy fitting a new feeding pan in its cage, when it gave me one of its most reproachful looks. Before I knew what I was doing I seized that bird and hurled it with all the force at my command into that pan of milk! "Die, you brute!" I exclaimed; but I had reckoned without my Canary. Do you think he would die? No; he popped up to the surface looking like a drowned rat, his feathers all clinging to him—clinging closer than a brother—and, with a violent shaking, began to make frantic endeavours to fly. The more he tried, the more difficult it seemed to become. Now, some birds would have given it up and succumbed to what seemed the inevitable, but not this bird; he is of a different stamp. When he found he could not fly he tried drinking the milk. This, he soon found, was too great a task, although he had seen what could be accomplished in the way of drinking. His next move was to swim round and round that pan, as though pursued by a whole shoal of sharks. Slow at first, when he became more accustomed to his surroundings, he got up a speed which to me seemed almost incredible. Said I to myself, this can't go on for long, and, as I could not watch the poor fellow in his last gasps, I left the room. I returned about half-an-hour afterwards, the interval having been spent in preparing a nice little hole in the aforesaid burying ground for his interment. [No flowers, by request.] Almost before I had opened the door I heard a faint "sweet." That can't possibly be that confounded bird! Surely he is dead! In less time than it takes me to write this I was disillusioned, for on looking into the pan where I had left him battling for life I discovered that his frantic efforts for freedom had churned up the milk, and there was my Canary standing on a large pat of butter, not a whit the worse for his experience.

Needless to say, he is still alive; but one thing I am thankful for I drowned that reproachful look.

Colour in the Plumage of Birds.

Although our wild birds are not noted for beauty of plumage, in the sense that some of the tropical birds are, yet we possess some of unusually rich colouring, if not wholly so, at least in part. The rich blaze of the gold finch, the crimson on the head and breast of the breeding linnet and redpoll, is a bright as anything one could see in foreign birds. Where could one find a richer yellow than is to be seen in the wing of the goldfinch, and upon the head and throat of the yellow bunting? Our Bullfinch is a model of colouring; his rich red breast contrasting so vividly with the jet black poll, and blue grey back; but the Kingfisher is undoubtedly the most gorgeous of our birds. See him darting down some rural stream, his lovely plumage flashing in the sunlight, no bird of the tropics could create the admiration that one feels for him.

SINGING CONTESTS.

LEEDS.

Our weekly contest for quality Linnet singing, was held at the King's Head, Shannon Street, when 16 of the best birds in Leeds sung for three good prizes given by Mr. J. Booth: 1, Wigfield; 2, Johnson; 3, Nicholls. Judges, Summers and Cooper. Mr. C. Biss bought a very nice bird off Mr. S. Nevins, for 30/-. This bird did not sing in the match, or he would have walked in for the first prize.—T. Summers, hon. sec.

WARRINGTON.

The members of the Warrington Linnet Singing Association held their club contest at the Alexandra Vaults, Scotland Road, on July 6th. There was a crowded house to hear some good keen singing. A grand Silver Cup was given last year by Mr. Thompson to be won twice in succession, or three times in all; last years' winner being D. Clare, who was a hard trier this time. The principal winners were: 1, Houghton; 2, Leah; 3, Clare; 4, Armitage; 5, Mather; 6, Tryner. Judges, J. W. Bowers and J. Lawton. Timekeeper, W. Mather.—Walter Mather, hon. sec.

PWLLHELI.

Held August 3rd. Many visitors and fanciers were present, and the arrangements very everything that could be desired, and reflected the greatest credit on Messrs. R. Lloyd-Ellis and J. J. Edwards, the secretaries. They were ably assisted by an enthusiastic committee of true fanciers. Considering the time of the seasons, and that the most of our birds are in moult, a fine collection was brought together, reaching a total of 180, which is a record in North Wales. Some very promising youngsters were shown by Messrs. R. E. Griffiths (Carnarvon), E. R. Roberts (Penygrors), and J. H. Rowlands (Rhosgadfan). The special for best bird in the show was won by Mr. George Evans (Llandudno) with a clinking good Buff Yorkshire. Mr. A. J. Gladwin judged, and his awards were well received. The officials are to be heartily congratulated on their first venture, and we hope the gate would prove a good one, as the Pwllheli fanciers had done their utmost to make things a great success. The prize money was promptly paid.

NORWICH BUFF (8): 1, c, J. H. Rowlands, very taking exhibit, fine round head, bold eye, short neck, faultlessly staged, wins well; 2, E. R. Roberts, good substance, grandly fronted, very compact in wing carriage; 3, E. D. Aiden, an old winner, grand head one of the biggest ever bred in North Wales, bold front, deep colour, nicely mealed, rather slack today, which no doubt tells against him; res, Evans, another good one; vhc, Parry; hc, Forbes. YELLOW: 1, Owen, nice size and shape, wonderful colour and quality, wins; 2, Evans, not the size of the winner, smart, typical, clear, in want of a good wash to show to the best advantage; 3, Rowlands, another good one, no doubt he will improve, grand size and very chubby; res. Cowell, in the moult. YORKSHIRE BUFF: 1, Spl Best Bird, George Evans, nice, long, upstanding, clear, very racy bird, nice piped tail, full of style; 2, Forbes, nice head and back, good shape and size, very stylish, worthy of its place; 3, Wm. Williams, we missed through changing the classes; res, Miles; vhc, T. Jones, Miss Hughes. YELLOW: 1, E. J. Jones, looks much better to-day than at Criccieth, stands on a grand pair of legs, showing a lot of breed, well-kuown winner; 2, Griffiths, unflighted, of nice length, good back and flights, well on legs, showing nice thighs, straight as a gun barrel; 3, E. F. Jones, another gem, finely drawn, in good condition, slim and of grand position; res, Evans; vhc, Hughes; hc, Lewis Green, a true Yorkie, deserved higher honours only for slight slackness about the vent; hc, T. E. Jones. BORDER (10): 1, 2, vhc, Llynfwy Hughes; 3, vhc, hc, E. R. Poberts, four pointed yellow hen, staged with a master hand, a pretty model. CREST: 1, L. Hughes, quickly claimed; 2, Lewis; 3, E. J. Jones. BRED 1907 (20): 1, R. E. Griffith, already described in the open class; 2, E. R. Roberts, ycl Nor., correct type, beautiful, silky feather, staged in faultless condition; 3, Rowlands, Nor. Buff, not quite over moult, nice substance; res, Dorkins; vhc, Owen, Hughes, Jones; hc, Meirion, Jones; Forbes, a grand class. HYBRID: 1, E. J. Jones, dark mule, fair size, unsteady, grand depth of colour, lovely face; 2, W. Owen, variety, happy blending of both pareuts; 3, Thomas, another dark, very steady, but not the size; res, Dorkins; vhc, Evans, Lee. BRITISH GOLDFINCH (12): 1, Wm. Owen, shewn in a new cage to-day, and well worthy of the prize and the cage, wins easy; 2, 3, Pritchard, both staged in rare trim, nice blazes, good tans and bars; res, Miss Thomas; vhc, Forbes; hc, Ford. HARDBILL: 1, spl, Forbes, Bullfinch, the Criccieth winner; 2, Owen Bros., greenfinch, same position at Criccieth, three were missed; res, Lloyd; vhc, Griffith. SOFT BILL (10): Brotherhood, Waxwing; 2, 3, we could not see cards up; res, Hughes; vhc, Jones. FOREIGN (6): 1, G. O. Jones; 2, Capt. Evans; 3, Williams; res, Forbes; vhc, hc, Williams. BRISLINGTON.

The fourth annual open show was held on August 2nd and 3rd. Entries in cage birds were not numerous, but the quality on the whole, for a summer show, was very good. Some of the classes were very small, consequently many prizes were withheld. The birds were admirably staged and received every attention from a staff of hard-working stewards. The Hon. Secretary, Mr. Dembrey, had everything well in hand, and cards were quickly up. We trust the show will prove a financial success. Mr. T. R. Ind judged.

CREST OR CRESTBRED (3): 3, Richards, handsome buff crested, good domed skull, nice body substance, plenty of feather; vhc, Tristam, dark crest colour, red, neat shape, fair crest; hc, Roberts. BRED 1907: 2, 3, vhc, Roberts, former a prettily marked dark crest, excellent head and feather properties. NORWICH CLEAR (3): 3, spl, Clark, good-shaped body, short, nice head and neck; vhc, Tristam, we liked very much, close and tight in feathers, beautifully fed, well staged; hc, Tuckwell. NOR. A.O.V.: 3, vhc, Tristam, magnificent shape and quality, well carried flights, close, short tail; hc, Clark, good shape, colour, and quality. NATURAL COLOUR (6): 1, Pool; 3, 4, vhc, hc, Quarman, two former birds, yellows, fair type, short wings and tail, little to choose between. YORKS. CLEAR: 3, spl, Barry, a buff of good length and stand, neat head, wings and tail; vhc, Roberts. BRED 1907 (any variety) (14): 1, Newman, a promising buff, very solid in feather, finely drawn, good length; 2, Haynes, again good quality, neat wing marked buff, good length and stand; 3, Barry, buff, good feather and condition, very snaky, neat head and carriage; 4, Haynes; c, Beal; nest of four (3); 3, Tristam, four exceptionally good Norwich; 4, Baker; vhc, Neuman, we made little between. (6): 1, 2, Clark; 3, Quarman; 4, Collings; vhc, Richings.

CAMBRIDGE.

This event was held in connection with the Mammoth Show at Cambridge on August 5th. Considering the time of year the exhibits were fairly good, both in the numbers and quality. They were nicely staged in a small tent, and well looked after by a good staff of stewards, under the active superintendance of that good fancier, Mr. Brooks, who, with Mr. Driver, acted as general secretary of the live-stock section, and it is needless to say everything was carried out in the best manner possible. The show was visited by an immense concourse of people, and not the least interesting of the many sights were the Cage Birds, the tent being packed, and locomotion most difficult nearly the whole day. Mr. Jacob Mackley judged in his usual careful and painstaking manner, and little fault could be found with his awards.

NOR. CLEAR (12): 1, c, Brooks, a bonny buff hen, a clipper, such shape and quality, and well shown; 2, Mitchell, high quality yellow, good colour, not so chubby; 3, Francis, nice-shaped Buff, not so tight in feather; vhc, Handley; hc, Bateman. A.O.C. (10): 1, vhc, three spl, and cup best bird in the show, Brooks, beautiful wing-marked Buff, such a chest and back, capital head, rare colour and quality, a regular topper; 2, Mitchell, capital shaped, rich-coloured yellow, wing and neck marked, nice shape, hardly so chubby or tight in feather; 3, Francis, very high quality, thigh ticked yellow, capital colour, a trio of smart birds; hc, c, Handley. BRED 1907 (7): 1, spl, Handley, a yellow, not one of the largest, but grand type and quality, very neat and smart throughout; 2, Linsey, charming little buff, very nice shape and feather, good head; 3, Handley, another good yellow, but not quite the stamp of his winner; vhc, Brooks; hc, Smith. CRESTS (7): 1, spl, Handley, large, well-drooped crest, neatly centred and nicely finished and variegated; 2, c, Brooks, saddle and tail marked, nice centre, good droop, not quite so massive; 3, Cooper, nice quality green, shapely, but smaller; vhc, hc, Mayhew. YORKS CLEAR (6): 1, spl, Murrell, very slim, stylish yellow, nice quality, stands well; 2, Handley, another very pretty and typical yellow, hardly so slim; 3, vhc, Brooks, nicely-feathered, good positioned buff; hc, Green and Doncaster. A.O.V. (6): 1, 3, vhc, Linsey, a very nice team, of good shape and style, and showing quality of feather. 1st, a cinnamon-marked yellow; 3rd, a wing-marked buff, all put down in nice form; 2, Murrell, a variegated yellow of nice type and style; hc, Green and Doncaster; c, Brooks. BRED 1907 (10): 1, 2, and two spls, Linsey, good stylish pair, well drawn, nice length of leg, and good quality of feather; 3, vhc, Murrell, capital bodied yellow, stylish and nice feather, not so good in head; hc, Green and Doncaster; c, Watts. A.O.V. (5): 1, 3, vhc, Brooks, nice shaped green C.B., capital quality, and plenty of feather, good front and nice beak; 3, a Dutch Frill, and a good one, too, very nicely shown; 2, Mitchell, almost a clear-bodied dark crest, capital shape and droop, nice quality; hc, Francis. SELL 15/- (5): 1, spl, Brooks; 2, hc, Linsey; 3, Green and Doncaster; vhc, White. MULE (6): 1, spl, Williams, very large variegated Greenfinch and Canary, grand shape, and capital feather; 2, Brooks, neat, five pointd buff Goldie, nice shape and size, good face and wings; 3, Cocks, neat bodied Linnet Bullie, a good bird, but showing the time of year; vhc, Rowles; hc,. Popple; c, MacQuarrie. BRIT. GOLDFINCH (10): 1, and two spls, Rowles, very bright-coloured, well-cut bird, neat shape, very trim and steady; 2, spl, Brooks, another real good one, but not quite so tight in feather; 3, Smithson, capital colour, good shape and face, not so steady; vhc, Williams; hc, c, Popple. BULLFINCH (7): 1, White, capital shape and size, nice glossy cap and good breast; 2, Nutter, fine shape and size, grand cap, not quite so rich in breast colour; 3, Lambert, rich cap, nice shape, darker in breast; vhc, Howe; hc, Wilmot; c, Williams. LINNET (7): 1, 3, Howe, two beauties, but the winner excels in colour and size; 2, Fairhurst, grand shape and marking, hardly so rich in colour; vhc, Casey; hc, Barley; c, Cocks. BLACKBIRD, ETC.: Cancelled. A.O.V. SMALL (9): 1, 2, spl, R. J. Howe, most beautiful Nightingale, in excellent feather, and a shapely, well-marked Wryneck, two grand birds; 3, W. Howe, very neatly-marked Bearded Tit, in nice feather, a trifle wild; vhc, Gladwin; hc, c, Lyes. LARGE: Cancelled. FOR. PARROTS (8): 1, spl, Dew, very large, and brilliantly-coloured blue and bull Macaw, in grand feather; 2, Timacus, most charming pair of yellow Budgerigars, in perfect feather and lovely colour; 3, Mrs. David, another splendid blue and bull Macaw, not quite so rich in plumage; vhc, Cooper; vhc, hc, c, Mrs. Punch. A.O.V. (6): 1, R. J. Howe, very handsome Honeysucker, splendid colour and condition, well marked; 2, 3, Timaens, grandly marked, full feathered, black headed Gouldian, and a most charming long-tailed Grassfinch, rare bib; vhc, Cooper; c, Row; LOCAL NOR.: Cancelled. YORKS: cancelled. FINCH (7): 1, spl, Cousins, rich coloured Goldfinch, good face and bars, shown in ordinary singing cage, properly moulted and well staged, would make a good one; 2, hc, Nutter, nice shaped well-marked Bullfinch, nice colour; 3, Williams, another good Goldie, not quite so steady as winner; vhc, Gawthorpe; c, Chapman.

ROYSTON.

Royston Cage Bird Fanciers held their annual show in conjunction with the Horticultural Society, on August Bank Holiday, open to a 25 mile radius. Seven classes were provided, but the Yorkshire class had to be cancelled on account of no entry, though full prize-money was guaranteed in each class. What were the fanciers of the long slim ones thinking about? The quality in the Norwich class was very good, and the winner was hard to find. The Cottagers' class, any variety, brought together an entry of 16, competition being very keen. Mr. J. Moss, Hitchin, judged, and the grumblers were absent. We think with a little advertising, this show would hold its own with any in the district. NORWICH (11): 1, spl, Ison, a yellow of good size and quality, nicely packed wings and tail, gets well across perch; 2, Atlee, a big raking buff, not so good in feather or carriage of tail; 3, Pluck, variegated buff, fails in head; reserve, Williamson, a fair buff; vhc, hc, Larman, two non-fed birds, but rather too small; c, Day. YORKSHIRE, cancelled. A.O.V.: 1, spl, Munsey, a dark Jonque Goldie, lovely blaze for a mule; 2, Ainger, a fair variegated Linnet mule; vhc, r, Wilkin. GOLDFINCH only (3): 1, spl, Ainger, a monster for size, but has a small break in blaze which spoils a champion: 2, Munsey, a good finch, but wild. BRITISH A.O.V. (4): 1, spl, Ebbutt, a good Greenfinch, catalogued at 5/-, and quickly claimed; 2, 3, Stanford, a real good Bramblefinch; 3, a fair Greenfinch. FOREIGN (3): 1, spl, Falaher, African grey; 2, Turner, Alexandria Parakeet; 3, Cooper, Blue Bonnet Parakeet, but would not show on perches, otherwise should have won. COTTAGER'S CLASS (16) and a hot lot: 1, spl, Challenge Cup; 2, extra 2, Atlee; three, grand Norwich, the winner a fine yellow; 2nd, yellow; extra 2nd, variegated buff; these stood clear away, a clean win and a credit to their owner; 3, Walford, a fine Goldie, extra good blaze, nicely buttoned and good wing bars, hard luck to meet such winners as those placed before him; r, hc, Munsey; vhc, W. Smith, R. Smith, Dellar.

NEW ABBEY.

This new feature in connection wth the Show of the new Abbey Horticultural Society, was held on August 2nd, in the Oddfellows' Hall. The weather in the morning was wet, but cleared up during the forenoon, when there was a large turn-out of visitors. The Secretary, Mr. Wm. McDonald, was the right man in the right place, and did all in his power for exhibitors, and everyone seemed to enjoy themselves. Mr. J. Hannay, Maxwelltown, was to judge the Cage Bird Section, but he was unavoidably absent, and his place was supplied by Mr. Wm. McMillan, Dumfries, whose awards were well received.

SCOTCH (3): all absent at time of judging. BORDER: No entries. Surely there is something wrong with the Border Fancymen in this district, where over 1,000 of these beautiful little gems are kept. NOR. (2): 1 and 2, Rome, 1st Yellow a real good one, nice shape, neat wings and tail; 2nd, Buff, but nothing like the quality of the first. LIGHT MULE (3): 1, Rome; 2 and 3, Crosbie—three goods birds, beginning to break in moult. DARK (8): 1 and hc, Rome; 2, McNeillie; 3 and c, Crosbie. The best class in the show, containing Goldfinch-Canary, Siskin-Canary, Greenfinch-Canary. GOLDFINCH (2): 1, McNeillie, a nice foreigner, with rich bold blaze and good body colour; 2, Rome, a gem of a Britisher, hard lines! BRIT. A.O.V. (2): 1 and 2, Rome, 1st good Yellowhammer, in the pink of condition; 2nd, Bramblefinch of fair quality. SELL. (1): Crosbie.

WATERHOUSES.

In connection with this big agricultural gathering on Aug. 3rd, eage birds had a few classes, which were well supported. The arangements were capital and capable enthusiasts looked well after the exhibits entrusted to their care. Mr. T. J. Ambrose, who was judging the first section, was asked to take the classes, and readily consented.

NOR. (11): 1, Stanger, nicely moulded, good head and chest, nice feathers; 2, Carr, bouncing first feathers bird, good shape, promising; 3, Wilson, Buff, good colour and meal, nice feathers; Res. Clough, vhc and hc, March; vhc, Watson; hc, Oyston. YORKS. (5): 1, Wilcock, Yellow, well drawn, nice feathers and position; 2 and res., Rutherford and Bright, Yellow leading, rare length, stouter than leader and not as stylish; 3, Richardson, loses in length and feather. A.O.V. (4): 2, Wilson, nice Yellow Cinnamon, in rattling feathers, 3, Oyston, Green Crest, only moderate headpiece; res., Stanger; vhc, Carr. SELL. 7s. 6d. (7): 1, Clough; 2, Rutherford and Bright; 3, Wilson; res., Heslop. LINNET (10): 1 and vhc, Davidson and Bond, winner a gem for colour and pencilling, very steady and nicely burnished; 2, Wilcock, nicely marked, lacks the colour and bloom of leader; 3, Wilson, quite equal to second in colour and pencilling, but not as steady; res., Stobbard, a gem for size and colour, not steady enough, badly shown in a most unsuitable cage; vhc and hc, Heslop; hc, Musgrave. A.O.V. BRIT. (8): 1, 2, and 3, Bright, leader a grand Greenfinch in faultless condition; 2nd, a Goldfinch; 3rd, a Bully, both nice ones in good feather; res., Brown; vhc, Davidson and Bond and Stanger. FOR. (6): 1 and vhc, Richardson, pair of Budgerigars in grand feather; 2, Davidson and Bond, splendid Goldie; 3, res., and vhc, Mrs. Heslop, nice team in good feather.

CHURCHDOWN.

The Committee of the Churchdown Horticultural Society are certainly to be congratulated upon the success of their show on August 5th. The Cage Bird Section was really good for the time of year, and a source of great attraction to the many visitors who thronged the tents. The exhibits were nicely staged and well looked after by the stewards, who did all in their power for the comfort of exhibits and exhibitors. The Committee are fortunate in having fanciers in their midst ready to work hard to get up a show of this description, which we are quite positive must have augmented the gate receipts to no inconsiderable amount. Mr. J. H. Payne judged. Mr. E. J. Treseder made a very capable secretary.

GOLDFINCH, ETC. (10): 1, Wilcox, the Stonehouse winning Goldie looking well; 2, Wasley, good blaze, well tanned chest, fails in shape and smartness; 3, Miss Davell, nice blaze, grand bars and buttons, a bit unsteady, will improve; vhc, Smith; hc, Birchley; c, Hobbs. A.O.V. HARDBILL (9): 1, 2, vhc, hc, c, Birchley, grand Snow Bunting leading, in splendid feather and very steady; 2nd, Hawfinch, good size and feather, fails a bit in bib; 3, Leavers, grand Greenfinch, splendid feather, good colour, nice wings, well shown; c, Wilcox. A.O.V. SMALL (10): 1, 2, 3, vhc, hc, c, Birchley, grand team, well known Shore Lark leading, very steady and in good trim; 2nd, nice young Grey Wagtail, very steady, should make a good one later on; 3rd, nice Swallow, in beautiful feather and colour. LARGE (3): 1, 2, 3, Birchley, Hoopoe, great Grey Shrike, and Blackbird, all in nice form for the time of year. NOR. YELL. (2): First withheld, 2, Houghton, marked right wing, splendid colour, nice shape and feather, good wings and tail; 4th, Stephenson, grand shape, nice head and back. BUFF (10): A grand class for quality, first five birds in wonderful trim..1, 2, 3, vhc, Gwilliam 1st, ticked wing and shoulder, splendid colour, shape and quality, wings well carried, and neat tail; 2nd, clear, magnificent feather, nice shape, hardly the substance; 3rd, clear, rattling shape and quality, close up; vhc, Houghton; hc, Barnes, c, Stephenson. A.O.V. CANARY: 2, Bishop, Yellow Yorkshire, nice colour, feather, and position. YELL. NOR. BRED 1907 (11): 1, 2, Hiam, nice shaped body, good colour and quality, neat head, trifle long in tail; 2nd, nice shape and colour, neat head, wings well braced; 3, Walley, ticked over eye, nice colour, good full neck, not quite so neat in tail; vhc, hc, Davis; c, Evans. A table show of any variety young Canaries was held on August 3rd. Mr. William Shearer, of Hamilton, judge in Miner's Hall; 12 birds staged: 1, Rundell; 2, Duncan; 3 and 5, McGhie; 4, Graham; 6, Alexander. G. Kirk, sec.

DONCASTER.

The Doncaster Ornithological Society held its show on August 5th. Mr. S. Clarke judged. The Yorkshire and Norwich Classes were poorly supported, but the winners in each were nice birds. The A.O.V. class was headed by a good Jonque Goldfinch mule, a Scotch Fancy hen of rare style being second, followed by a light Goldfinch mule. The British came up well. In Hufdbills a nice Crossbill won. Softbill was a rare class, and won by a Yellow Wagtail. The exhibits in these classes reflected great credit upon the respective owners, the birds being in rare feather and condition for the season of the year. YORKS: 1, Miss Dalton. A.O.V.: 1, 2, Harrison; 3, Green and Son. LINNET, ETC: 1, 2, Green and Son; 3, Lewis. SOFTBILL: 1, 3, Bescoby; 2, Green and Son. HARDBILL: 1, Green and Son; 2, 3, Bescoby. FOR.: 1, 2, 3, Green and Son. SELL 10/-: 1, 3, Green and Son; 2, Bescoby.

STONEHOUSE.

This fixture was held on August 1st, in connection with the Horticultural Show, and was far and away the best yet held. The quality for the time of year was very good, and in several of the classes competition was keen. The exhibits were nicely staged and well looked after. Mr. Rees makes a most admirable Secretary, being most courteous and obliging. Mr. J. H. Payne judged.

NORWICH BRED 1907 (8): 1, vhc, Davis, buff-grizzled on rump, nice shape, splendid colour and quality; 2, 3, Gwilliam, variegated buff, nice close feather, well cut away, beaten in colour and chubbiness; 3rd, clear buff, grand shape, wings, and tail, bit pale in colour; hc, Taylor; c, Partridge. A.O.V. (13): 1, Bishop, smart Yell. Yorks, good colour and position, fair length; 2, Chew, dark buff Goldfinch mule, nice blaze, feather, size, and quality; 3, Perry, crest, nice frontal and droop, falls little right side, takes spl best Local Canary; vhc, hc, Miss Darrell; c, Partridge. GOLDFINCH, ETC. (13): 1, Wilcock, smart Goldie, grand tanning on chest, good blaze and cheeks, in grand condition; 2, Poole, good square cut blaze, beaten in feather and tanning; 3, Smith, nice feather and blaze, very steady; vhc, Darrell; hc, Birchley; c, Wasley. A.O.V. HARD BILLED (10): 1, 2, 3, c, Birchley, Snow Bunting, in fine order and very steady; 2, Hawfinch, good size and fair feather, falls in cut of hib; 3, Siskin, good feather and well marked, falls in colour; vhc, Wasley; hc, Poole; hc, Wilcox. SOFT BILLED (8): 1, spl best in show, 2, 3, hc, c, Birchley, Hoopoe, Shore Lark, and Swallow, all in grand form, and much admired; vhc, Poole; hc, Tate. SELL. 15/- (4): First withheld; 2, Davis; 3, Partridge; vhc, Mallett.

EPWORTH.

This Agricultural Show was held on August 5th, Cage Birds being an additional feature. The Society are to be congratulated upon the good entry secured, and no doubt will be disposed to increase the classification another year, which, considering the very good prize-money (offering 21s. per class), should make this fixture very popular. Entries totalled 23 in the 3 classes provided, the winners in each class being birds of high merit, and staged to perfection. Indeed, the first three Norwich were in wonderful condition, looking more like birds having just finished their moult instead of just commencing. The British Birds were good, Mr. Axe securing the special for best bird in the Show, with his well-known Yellow Bunting, closely pressed by his equally well-known Song Thrush. Mr. G. Heaton judged, and gave every satisfaction. The Stewards were most obliging to all, working hard and giving the exhibits every care and attention.

CANARY: 1st and 2nd, Axe, former ticked Yellow, fine size, colour, and condition, sweet head, latter marked buff, brimful of quality, must have pressed winner, looks like the Thorne and Goole winner; 3rd, T. Duckitt, junr., clear Yellow, sweet shape, perfect wing carriage, neat in head, with just a little more size would be a topper, shown in beautiful condition: the Goole 3rd we fancy, but much improved with a wash, should do some winning (the winners were all Norwich); vhc, Peek and Fawcett; hc, Newbitt. BRITISH: 1st and 2nd, Axe, Yellow Bunting, in spotless condition, not a feather out of place, and very steady, well marked, fine size; 2nd, Song Thrush, just beaten to-day by his stable companion on condition, showing signs of moult; 3rd, Miller, Bullfinch, well up in size, nice cap, and condition, hard lines to meet winners; vhc, Gravil; hc, Lambert. FOR.: 1, 3, Lambert, Green Amazon, very fine bird, in lovely condition, easy win; 3, very pretty Silver Bill in fine order. We hope to see this class better supported another year, as the Committee were, in our opinion, very generous in allowing it to stand with only two entries.

OTHERWISE
IS NOW READY

And will be sent to any address on receipt of a postal order for 1/-, post free; or

Order it at once from your Newsagent

No show secretary should be without this invaluable index to exhibitors all over the country. If any section be weak, reference to the Register of Wins will immediately enable a whip up to be sent. "I have received the ANNUAL (part 2), with thanks. It might well have been called "Cage Birds Directory." There is no doubt it will be very useful in this way, comprising, as it does, the names and addresses of almost every exhibitor of cage birds of any note. It will also be very useful to fanciers when they are purchasing stock. They can see at a glance whether the advertiser has done any winning with his birds, and in this way save the cost of part 2 many times over.—THOS. ROBSON, 41, Shield-st., Newcastle-on-Tyne."

Parts 1 & 2 of "Cage Birds Annual" complete for 1/3, post free. If you have already ordered Part I. from us, send us 9d. and we will post you on Part II.

IN THE COURTS.

SHOW CANARIES GOING ASTRAY.

Judgment for the Railway Company.

The sympathy of exhibitors will go out to Mr. Jos. Thompson, the well-known Wigton (Cumbs.) breed of Border Fancy canaries, who has been unsuccessful in the action he brought at the Wigton County Court, against the Maryport and Carlisle Railway Company, to recover damages for breach of contract through the non-delivery of two prize canaries at Llanelly Show, which prevented him from competing for the Border Fancy Club's trophy, of which he had previously recorded two wins. The case, as previously reported at length in CAGE BIRDS, for July 20th, last, was heard at the Ju'y Court, and His Hon. Judge Steavenson deferred judgment. The latter, as follows, was given on August 1st.

His Hon. said the plaintiff sent two Canaries to be exhibited, and there certainly was a very valuable prize that he thought he would have secured had they arrived at their destination in proper time. Apparently they did not arrive in proper time, and were returned. Under these circumstances the plaintiff claimed "loss of time and labour in preparing the said birds for show (including 3s. entrance fees paid, and 1s. 5d. carriage paid), £3 1s. 5d. Of this claim the Railway Company had paid into Court 4s. 5d., which he presumed was the entrance fees and carriage paid, and the Railway Company said, with regard to the other damages, that they were too remote. He had looked into cases bearing on the subject, but it was beyond his power to give judgment in a case of damages so remote as these were, unless there was some precedent for it; and he could find no such precedent. In his opinion the damages claimed in this case were too remote. The breach of contract seemed to be admitted, and no doubt heavy damages might have resulted. The conditions in the Railway Company's time bill he was satisfied (as he intimated at the hearing), or any rate one of them was two sweeping and he should have no hesitation in disregarding it, but that did not arise. The only question he had had to consider was whether the damages claimed were too remote. In his opinion they were too remote, and as 4s. 5d. had been paid into Court, there must he judgment for the defendant.

ARE BIRD-LIMERS THIEVES?

Curious Scottish Slander Action.

At the Scottish Court of Sessions, on June 22nd last, before Lords Stormonth Darling, Low and Ardwall, an action was heard in which the defendants appealed against Lord Mackenzie's judgment allowing an issue for trial by jury of the actions by George Campbell, coal porter, 6, Church Street, Edinburgh, and Robert Hay, coal porter, 13, St. Stephen Place, Edinburgh, against J. Ritchie and Co., proprietors of the "Edinburgh Evening Dispatch," for £100 each damages for alleged slander. The pursuers were convicted in the Edinburgh Sheriff Court in Decemher last of having, at a farm at Cramond, taken three Greenfinches and one Linnet, contrary to the W.B.P.A. In the paragraph in the "Dispatch" reporting the case, bird-limers generally were described as thieves, and the pursuers averred that the epithet applied to them, and that they were charged in the paragraph with being thieves. This was denied by the defenders, who stated that there was no slander in reporting the facts of the case, and in describing bird-limers as thieves, and they also contended that the word thieves in the paragraph did not specifically apply to the pursuers.

Their Lordships recalled the judgment of the Lord-Ordinary, and dismissed the action. On the matter of expenses, Lord Stormonth Darling said that to a large extent the actions were provoked by the exaggerated use of the word "thieves"; and. therefore, there should he no expenses in either case to either party. He further said that the paragraph complained of, which the pursuers called a report, was partly report and partly comment, and so far as it was a report the pursuers found no fault with it. But in connection with the practice of hird-lining the writer of the paragraph made a foolish and inappropriate use of the word thieves, and the innuendo the pursuers proposed was whether the paragraph represented that they had heen guilty of theft. The question was whether the words used would hear that innuendo. His Lordship supposed that the Lord-Ordinary was of opinion —although they did not know what precisely his reasons were—that there was a certain doubt about the paragraph that required that the case should he laid heforc a jury. In that his Lordship was sorry that he could not agree with the Lord-Ordinary. Reading the paragraph as a whole, he did not think that any reader of the newspaper could, on reasonable grounds, reach the conclusion that it charged the pursuers with having been guilty of theft. Consequently, he did not think that any jury could, on reasonahle grounds, return a verdict for the pursuers. The actual offence with which the pursuers were charged, the pleas which they tendered, the penalty which was inflicted upon them, were all correctly set forth. Even the modus operandi of the class of hird-limers was not said to he misrepresented. The only thing complained of was a word used in connection with the class of hird-limers which was manifestly exaggerated and inappropriate. How that could reasonably imply that the pursuers had heen guilty of theft his Lordship was at a loss to see.

Lord Low said it was plain that the paragraph did not directly charge the pursuers with theft. The writer of the article, who evidently was a gentleman with very strong views of the practice of capturing wild birds by means of bird-lime, described persons who made a practice of doing so as thieves. The case for the pursuers was this. They said: "The article accuses all persons who use bird-lime for the purpose of catching birds as thieves; we are persons who have captured birds with bird-lime; therefore, we are thieves." Of course, the logical proposition was unimpeachable. But the question was whether the writer of the article did say that persons who used bird-lime to capture birds were guilty of theft in the strict meaning of the word. His Lordship thought it was perfectly plain that it did not do so; but that it used the word "thief" in the sense in which it was very often, although perhaps not very correctly, used, as indicating a person who obtained some advantage of some kind which he was not morally entitled to, although in obtaining it he might be within the strict letter of the law. His Lordship did not think that any man of average intelligence reading the report would ever for a moment believe that more than that was meant.

Lord Ardwell, who also concurred, said the word "thief" of itself no doubt primarily meant a person who stole the property of others, but it also was used as an abusive epithet.

THE YOUNG NATURALIST.

Kitty was a long time in making up her mind whether she preferred the milk-white bird or the one who sang and danced so comically. Peter waited impatiently, and at last she chose the white one, saying she would name it Snow-white, after the girl in the fairy tale.

"But they are Japanese birds," said Peter, "so I shall call mine Bumbuku-Chagama, after the wonderful Japanese tea-kettle, which danced and sang, and always brought good luck and fortune to anyone who treated it kindly. It was a fairy, too, and Snow-white married a fairy prince, so that makes the story right. And my little bird really does sing something like a kettle boiling over.."

The children soon transferred their new pets to a more roomy cage, which they had fitted up with natural twigs of differing thickness for perches, and an empty cigar-box with a round hole in two of its adjacent sides for a nesting-place. Fine grass dried in the sun, and soft feathers abstracted through a hole surreptitiously made in a pillow-tick, were placed in a little netted bag and hung in the cage, so that the tiny inmates might find material handy for nest-building. White and spray millet and flowering roadside grass was given as their staple food; but they were also supplied with canary and maw seed on occasion.

It was not long before the little pair began their housekeeping, using enough hay and feathers for at least a dozen nests. Kitty was delighted beyond words when the first little white egg was laid in the large untidy nest in the cigar-box, and when five had made their appearance Snow-white began to sit. The weeks seemed endless while the children waited for the baby Bengalese to hatch; but at last, after a fortnight's patient watching, little squeaky noises were heard proceeding from the nest, and both the parent birds flew in and out busily with their beaks full of grass seed for their infants. Ants' eggs, soaked in cold water and dried on a duster, and hard-boiled yolk of egg mixed with crumbled biscuit, was added to their fare, and in three weeks' time the young ones, as big almost as their parents, left the nest.

* Now Quite Happy.

One day in the latter part of last summer my grandma was standing at the front door when a poor little bird flew against the telegraph wires, and it fell to the ground; so my grandma went and picked it up, and it was a young Skylark. It seemed about dead, but she stroked it in her hands until it had quite recovered. Now it seems quite happy in its new home, because it sings from morning until night.—SELWYN RALPH DARRINGTON (age 8 years), New Birchwood, Nr. Alfreton, Derbyshire.

Robins in a Drawer.

In the corner of our garden at Manor Street we have a small shed, in which there is a seed chest. Not long ago I went in and, to my surprise, I saw a Robin which had a piece of straw in its mouth. I went there the next day and found a heap of leaves in one of the drawers. On April 21st I went there and found five eggs, and afterwards five young Robins all safely hatched. As I entered they all put their heads out and opened their mouths, expecting to have some more fat worms.—ROY THOMSON (aged 12 years), 26, Manor Street, Cathays, Cardiff.

* The Blue Tit.

The Blue Tit is commonly known as the Tom Tit. It is one of our winter pets. He is a trim little blue-green bird, not so big as a Sparrow; his head is dark blue, encircled in white; his back is olive green, and his breast is yellow, shading blue. You cannot mistake him; he is so clever in hanging on by his feet, and performing all sorts of antics. He lives on insects, and is a most useful little gardener, for he will clear rose trees and gooseberry bushes of blight, and though some people say he destroys buds, others who know best say he only destroys the blighted buds in order to get at the insects already inside them. —L. PERKIN (age 11), Bridge End, Great Bardfield, Essex.

The Bullfinch.

From the extreme richness of colour displayed throughout its plumage, this handsome bird has long possessed a prominent position as a cage bird, not alone because of its rich red breast, delicately shaded grey back and deep purple-black head, tails and wings, the latter crossed in a beautiful manner with white. The Bullfinch possesses the power of imitation in a very high degree, and if taken from the nest and reared by hand may be taught to pipe a tune more readily than any other bird. Though possessing such handsome plumage the Bullfinch is somewhat heavily built, the shape of the head and thickness of the throat having undouhtedly earned its name.—From J. SIMON (aged 13), 21, Falmouth-st., South Accommodation-rd., Leeds.

 The Handsome Pheasant.

The Pheasant is a very handsome bird. There is, of course, the common Pheasant, with which every one is familiar. The Silver Pheasant, found in N. China, is the largest of the tribe. It is a bold and pugnacious bird, not caring for its British brother. The crest on its head is of a deep purple-black colour, the prevailing colour of the upper part of the body and tail is white on the male bird, and the naked skin round its eyes is of a dark scarlet colour. There is the Golden Pheasant, also found in China. It is distinguished for its finely-developed crest of rich golden-yellow colour, and also by a large ruff of orange and black feathers, capable of being erected at pleasure. The tail of the Golden Pheasant is very long. Its crest and ruff are greatly valued hy anglers for making artificial flies. The flesh of the Pheasant is very good to eat.—JOHN GEORGE BENSON (aged 15), 6, Castle Street, Tralee, Co. Kerry, Ire-

TAKE ADVANTAGE OF OUR SPORTING OFFER AT ONCE: NOTE OPPOSITE PAGE.

The North Berks Show (Abingdon), will be held on November 7th.

Messrs. James Sandison and Colin Ross have been elected to judge the Cage Bird section of the Inverness Show, on November 26th.

To colour feed to perfection you must use Ramsden's Pure Pepper—Failure is unknown, where Ramsden's Peppers are used. ADVT.

Mr. Llwynfy Hughes (Penygroes), will, we hear, judge Glynllifon fanciers show, August 10th, also the "Ceiri" fanciers show, August 24th.

I showed your "Breeding Register" to our members, and they agree that it is a splendid work. With best wishes for success.—T. COWARD, Sec. Barnsley C.B.S.

I am delighted with the excellent drawing of my winning Yorshires in last week's CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. J. B. Waterman (Dulwich), and tender my heartiest thanks for same.

The Burton-on-Trent Fanciers Society have fixed November 22nd as their show date. The judges will be elected at the next meeting, and the Society will be affiliated to the Cage Bird Union. Thus writes Mr. F. Cameron.

The following judges have been appointed for Arbroath Scotch Fancy Cage Bird Society's show, which is to be held in the Whyte Hart Hall, on the 26th of October, viz., Scotch Fancy, Mr. Charles Berwick, St. Andrews; Norwich, Mr. Alex. Wilson, Montrose; British and Foreign, Mr. Peter Pettigrew, Glasgow, writes Mr. J. S. Napier, Sec.

I have great pleasure in informing you that our first young stock show, held July 20th, was a financial success, writes Mr. B. F. Forse, hon. sec., Leyton and District C.B.A. I have no doubt that the success of our Association is not only due to the splendid committee of workers, but to the great help we have derived from your valuable paper in the form of announcing the meetings, etc., since the formation of the Association. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success in the future.

The Hyson Green and District (Nottingham) C.B.S. is going very strong now, writes Mr. A. E. Garton, the secretary. This year we are increasing our membership, and the members are getting more interested in the meetings at every one there being a large attendance. We have arranged for our second show to be held October 26th, and the third on December 7th. We are also trying to help fanciers by arranging lectures and washing exhibitions, and a concert during this coming winter.

Remarkable Offer to Canary Fanciers.—1,000 cwts. of Canary grit to be given away to every purchaser of 1 cwt. of canary seed during July and August. We will give 1 cwt. of our celebrated Health Grit, absolutely free. Giant Spanish canary, 24s. per cwt.; No. 2 ditto, 22s.; Turkish, 14s.; all treble screened and free from dust. Sample on application, carriage paid; cash with order.—John Dobb, seed importer, 31 and 33, White Abbey Road, Bradford. Telephone, 247x.—ADVT.

At the Dulwich and Peckham Annual Show, which will be held in the Peckham Public Hall (one of the finest of South London Halls), Mr. W. Vardy is engaged to judge Norwich; Mr. Robson, Yorks. Crests and Borders, and Mr. G. E. Weston, British and Foreign, writes Mr. G. F. Woolhouse. The show will be under the patronage of the Southern Norwich P.C., the Border Fancy C.C., the English and Welsh B.F.C., and the National British Bird and Mule Club. Several other specialist clubs have also been applied for. Amongst the extraordinary list of specials is a Challenge Shield, presented by a well-known London newspaper, several gold medals and silver cups, and a plentiful supply of silver medals and other gifts. The Committee are working hard for a record show and exhibitors, remembering past treatment, will, we hope, loyally respond. Mr. G. F. Woolhouse, of 22, St. Aidans-road, E. Dulwich, S.E., has been appointed show manager, and all enquiries, etc., should be addressed to him. Mr. Rogers offers a special value half-a-guinea to the best bird shown by a Derby exhibitor.

The Tameness of Blue Tits.

Some Blue Tits built their nest in a stone vase hanging in my garden, writes a correspondent to a contemporary. The vase is not at all large, and has a narrow neck. I watched the birds going in and out as the nest progressed; then could see the tiny eggs, and eventually the young birds. Then I moved the vase on to a window-ledge of the house where, with the window open, I could see the parents feeding the young birds. After a day or so I brought the vase into the room and put it on a table covered with photographs in frames and vases full of flowers. The birds continued flying in and out of the room while I was sitting in it. They seemed quite at their ease, and rested on the photographs and looked about, once flying across the passage into another room. I shall be quite sorry when they all fly off, which, no doubt, will be soon, as they have grown very quickly, and their voices are getting daily stronger.

The judges for our show in December are Messrs. W. Thornton (Belgians and Scotch Fancy) A. Wellings (Norwich, etc.), writes Mr. R. Trimble, sec., Ulster C.A.

Mr. Smith, of Chapel Street, W., is evidently an enterprising young man, and if his 20,000 smokes are at all equal to the humour on the cards offering them to fanciers, they are quite unique.

Hawfinches, for the first time on record for Cumberland, have this year built in an orchard at Netherby. Last year there was a nest near Langholm (Dumfriesshire), just across the border from Netherby. We hope to soon have the Hawfinch established in the farthest point of North-west England. J. J. ROBSON (Carlisle).

From Messrs. Payne and Wallace, of the Little Zoo, Bath, we have received a sample of their cage bird grit, which, judging by the sample received, is as good as it is cheap, being sharp and clean, free from dust, and every particle a real grinder. Messrs. Payne and Wallace supply it at the low figure of 5s. 6d. per cwt.

OBITUARY.

Mr. A. Watt (Banff).

We regret to learn of the death on the 16th ult., at the age of 65, of Mr. A. Watt, father of that well-known British Bird fancier (especially of Bullfinches). Mr. F. A. Watt, of Banff, one of the Vice-Presidents of the Scottish National C.B.S. The deceased took a great interest in his son's birds, and to this was due in great measure the success of the latter on the show bench.

Mr. Craig, Junr., (Edinburgh).

Mr. R. Craig, the late Secretary of the Edinburgh Norwich Canary and Mule Breeders' Society, and a prominent member of committee of the Scottish National C.B.S., has sustained a great loss by the death of his eldest son, a boy of 10 years. This sad event occurred at the City Hospital on July 31st. The sympathies of all fanciers will go out to Mr. and Mrs. Craig in this, their sad bereavement.—J. WINTER.

The Language of Gulls.

A remarkable announcement is made by Professor Watson, of Chicago University, who has just returned to New York from a stay in the Dry Tortugas Islands, where he has been for some time past making a study of bird life. According to the Central News, the Professor says he is convinced not only that Seagulls converse intelligently with one another in a distinct language of their own, but also they have to a large extent both reasoning and perceptive powers. In fact, says Professor Watson, there can be no doubt that Seagulls "think."

York Fanciers' River Trip.

The next monthly meeting, on Monday, Aug. 12th, of the York C.B.S., writes Mr. T. Boyle, the Hon. Secretary, will be held on the "S.S. River King," instead of the School Room, All Saints, the boat leaving King's Staith at 7 o'clock for a river trip. Members, friends, and their families are cordially invited.

Do Parrots Understand?

We have had a plain substantial Grey Parrot for the last ten years, writes Albert Popinjay to "Mr. Punch." During that time it has perfectly mastered two phrases, "Pretty Polly" and "Good-bye." A tedious lady visitor was worrying my wife, when our bird, who was observing matters, said "Good-bye" in the most pointed manner. The effect was instantaneous, and, as my wife said, "No one could take offence at a hint from a bird, and such a dear bird, too." Another instance of sagacity. My wife had just engaged a maid of singularly prepossessing appearance. The first time the Parrot saw the new servant it unhesitatingly exclaimed, "Pretty Polly!" Of course the name was not strictly accurate, but how was the bird to know that the girl was "Susan," and not "Polly"? I need say no more.

Watch the Hedgerows.

The fulness of the country is evident now upon every hand. The trees are crowded with foliage and a small colony of rooks may rest quietly among the branches of the elm tree, without one suspecting their presence. The hedgerows are now in full beauty, thick and high, laden with berries of privet, thorn, and bramble, full of rich sweet scented flowers; crowded with young bird life in all stages of development. One can ramble, or rest for hours beside one, and never be dull for a moment; he who loves flowers will find them, he who admires insects will see the pretty butterflies constantly fluttering by, the bird lover will find ample amusement, the rustle of wings is on every side.

OUR SPORTING OFFER.

BY CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

STOP BREEDING.

In a general way it will be good advice now to begin to break up breeding pairs, especially those which are just now engaged in rearing successfully a second brood. Of course, this does not mean that the birds should be separated at once before the young are out of the nest, but when they leave the nest—perhaps a week or fortnight hence—it will be as well to remove the hen to a large flight cage, and leave the cock to finish off the young. This, as intimated, is for general application. Such cases as may be deemed to require special treatment, or where the owner is bent on snatching another nest, have been dealt with last week.

WHEN BIRDS DROP INTO MOULT.

There appeared recently what seemed at first sight to be a most simple plan for the would-be colour feeder to know when to begin using the colour food, in order to have the colour in the blood before any feathers were shed. As I read it the gist of it was, if my memory serves me right, that after the first moult the subsequent moulting season set in at a time corresponding somewhat to the time when the bird was bred. But a very little thought will suffice to discount the theory considerably, for if it were really so we should have the novel experience of seeing the breeding season and the moult running concurrently. No; it will be far better to trust to the most prominent of the symptoms of approaching moult as detailed in a recent batch of notes. A little observation will soon enable one to judge to a nicety when it is time to begin to feed, and as a further guide it will be fairly safe to begin to feed the young from the late nest at six weeks old, whilst the young from the early nest may be ten or twelve weeks old before feeding is necessary. In any case it is safe to commence giving a little feed all the way round by August.

MOULTING IN COUPLES.

Although it is not absolutely essential to moult birds in the orthodox moulting cages, they certainly have their advantages, and even the amateur on a very small scale would be well-advised to keep a few of these cages handy. These should be reserved for the cream of the season's breeding, and such of the stock birds as have proved themselves valuable show birds. Do not, however, be in too great a hurry to place the birds in them. They will be all the better for staying in the flight until they are beginning to shed their feathers. Then cage them up in twos or threes to finish their moult. If the cages are on the small side couples are to be preferred, except in the case of Lizards, which exhibit a tendency towards feather-plucking—to instance the London fancy seems perfectly futile — moulting the birds singly is not to be recommended, as they will invariably take the feed more freely when kept in company with one or two comrades. Each bird then seems to be seized with a spirit of emulation, or greed, and endeavours to get outside a full share of the food provided, and a little bit over. Do not cover the cages over yet; there is no necessity whatever for this until the new plumage begins to show on the surface.

TRAINING THE YOUNG FOR SHOW.

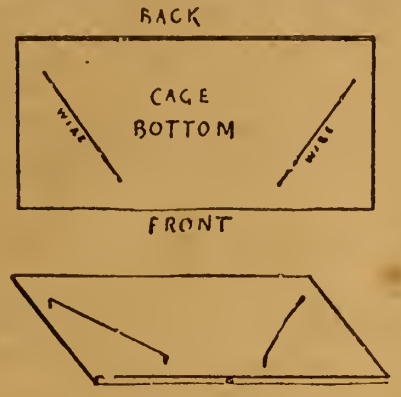
Whilst the birds are gradually preparing for the moult one should not fail to utilise as much spare time as possible in training the young birds to pose nicely and freely in a show cage. Good training is one of the most essential features towards success on the show bench, a well- trained bird always showing to better advantage than a small bird of equal merits which is unsteady, nervous, and refuses to pose. The birds will also learn what is required of them much more quickly now, and grow far more steady than if they were neglected until after the moult. Therefore, every hour devoted to drilling the bird now is time well spent, and far more valuable than the same amount of time spent two months hence.

HANWELL.

Meeting held on July 25th ,at the Mission Hall, Church Road, Hanwell, when the following were awarded prizes:—Norwich, Mr. Thursby, 1st and 2nd; and also 1st in British Birds. Mr. Robinson judged. The next meeting will be held on Thursday, August 22nd, when Mr. Bert Kirkman will give an address on "Breeding for Colour."

W. BIRD, Hon. Secretary.

ILLUSTRATED IDEAS



Under this heading we shall Illustrate weekly some idea useful to the bird-keeper. Readers are invited to send us particulars of any novel and practical appliance of use in our hobby, either in cage, bird-room or aviary, with a rough sketch of same where possible. Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

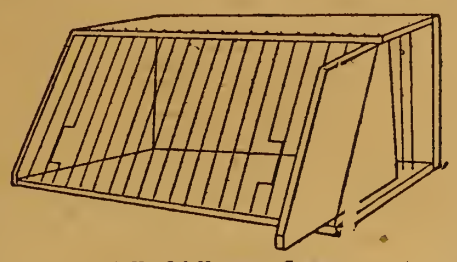
No. 125.

TO ENSURE EASY-RUNNING SAND-TRAYS.

Sent by E. Marchal, 15, The Terrace, Dinnington, Near Rotherham, Yorks:

It is often found very awkward when the sand-tray gets jammed, owing to sand, seed-husks, etc., getting down the sides. This can be remedied by the simple idea I illustrate, which will do away with all difficulty.

An Easy-Running Sand-Tray.



Take two pieces of ordinary cage-wire, and bend over each end about a quarter of an inch, these ends being then driven into the wood, so as to fasten wires to the cage bottom. These then act as slides for the sand-tray to run on, and it will be found to push in and pull out without difficulty when they are in use.—E. MARSHALL.

No. 126.

A USEFUL NURSERY CAGE.

Sent by G. Peters, Sandgate, Coundon Road, Coventry.

I enclose sketch of a very useful nursery cage. Its advantages are that it is put inside the breeding cage, practically taking up no room, and not being in the way as when hung on the front of the breeding cage; also, the front of this cage being slanting, the old birds can feed through the wires more easily, and the young learn to feed themselves sooner, as the egg food is placed within their reach close to the bent wires. This cage is also useful to put hen Britishers in when pairing The size is 10in. long, 4in. high, 4in. bottom width, and 3¼in. top width. The door at the end slides between the front wires and two wires at the back. In the sketch the door is shown half open.—G. PETERS.

A Useful Nursery Cage.

OUR CANARY BREEDING COMPETITION.

Our correspondent Markham may rely upon it that CAGE BIRDS will do its best to ensure that the prizes are honestly won. What method we shall adopt is, of course, secret; but we can assure Markham that the proofs required before we pay over the prizes will have to be most satisfactory.

SIR,—Delaration form in Canary Breeding Competition duly received. Will you kindly inform me the name and address of a member of any local C.B.S. to whom I could apply for a witness; or, if not, would two independent witnesses and a local fancier be sufficient? I take in your paper regularly; have one cock and two hen Canaries, from which I have now eleven young on the wing and a number in nest. This is the first year I have had a Canary or attempted anything in the way of bird breeding, and I have followed the instructions in CAGE BIRDS, to which I attribute my success. —A. E. GEORGE, Bradley, Bilston.

[We believe the nearest society to you is the Wolverhampton and District C.B.S., of which the Secretary is Mr. F. Howes, 25, Leslie Road, Park Village, Wolverhampton, who, we feel sure, would be pleased to be of any assistance he could. Two independent witnesses and a local fancier of standing would fulfil our conditions.—EDITOR.]

CLUB REPORTS.

BAILDON C.B.F.A.

At a meeting held August 1st, a paper was read by Mr. R. Halliday, of Shipley. Subject:—"Colour Feeding." The subject was very appropriate for this season of the year, and was very ably dealt with, a good discussion following. We had also with us Mr. J. Wilman, late of Bradford, who has now come to dwell amongst us, and he also gave us some very useful advice. Altogether, we spent a very enjoyable evening, the time passing all too quickly.—F. Ellis, hon. sec.

DULWICH AND PECKHAM C.B.S.

On Thursday night, August 1st, at headquarters, members and friends met to hear Mr. Morris give his promised lecture on "Colour Feeding." Mr. Morris, who is a past master in the art of colour feeding, treated those present to some very useful hints, that were highly appreciated, and no doubt much valued by many who listened to him, it being their first season at colour feeding. Fanciers generally are much indebted to gentlemen like Mr. Morris, who come amongst us and give us the benefit of their practical experience. After the lecture, many questions were asked which Mr. Morris very kindly answered to every one's satisfaction. Mr. G. J. Woolhouse was in the chair and made everyone feel at home by the very able manner in which he conducted the meeting, bringing it to a close by proposing a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Morris.—W. Hodson, hon. sec.

SALE OPEN O.S.

Meeting held July 29th, when Secretary presented balance-sheet of First Feather Show, which showed a profit of about £1, great satisfaction being expressed that the first venture was such a success. A vote of thanks was accorded the judge, Mr. A. G. Davis, of Manchester, for the special pains he took, and the great satisfaction he gave. Thanks were also given to Mr. J. Fletcher, for the use of the room, and to the special prize subscribers, Messrs. Buckley, Taylor, Brooks, Javens, Whitaker, Ball, Wovenden, Fletcher, Swettenham, and Falder. The secretaries and stewards were highly complimented for the fine show they got together, and for the way things worked generally, most of them being men who are old fanciers, and who know the ropes. The committee were empowered to select a lecturer for meeting night, August 26th, '07. The Secretary stated that the membership numbered 44, and the balance in bank, about £7 10/-.—Geo. F. Hardcastle, secretary.

CLAPHAM AND DIST. OPEN C.B.A.

Well attended meeting at head quarters, July 29th. First Feather Show balance sheet showed a nett profit of 14/10. This was considered very good for an association still in its infancy, and for the first show it has held. The Secretary offered a prize, value 10/6 to the member introducing the most new members interested in Canaries from the date of the show to May 8th next, the first anniversary of the formation of the Association. Mr. Maxwell did not see any reason why British bird fanciers should be left out in the cold, so he offered a prize of the same value, for the member introducing the most British bird fanciers. We had much pleasure in electing Messrs. G. Harrison, J. Robson and G. E. Weston as vice-presidents, and we have elected six new members at each of our last three meetings. It was decided to hold a Members' Autumn Show the first week in November. Up to date there are five medals for competition, and we hope to organise a smoking concert in October with the object of forming a Cup Fund. At conclusion of the distribution of prizes, cigars were handed round by the successful winners of the specials, and a pleasant evening was brought to a close.—S. H. W. Baker, hon. sec.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be pasted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence to pay postage expenses, &c., otherwise their letters will not receive attention.

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

NOTE. Readers are requested to carefully study past numbers and current issue before submitting questions. By doing so they may save trouble and unnecessary repetition.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

CANARIES.

NORWICH PLAINHEADS.

Answered by J. H. PAYNE.

Chronic Weakness.

C. Smith.—I do not think I should be doing you any good (on the contrary, I feel I should be only causing you a lot of trouble), if I attempted to give you advice for the cure of your hen. I feel sure she is a thoroughly badly constituted one, and will never be any good, and as she will be four years old next season, I should strongly advise you to discard her. She would, I am sure, only cause you more disappointment and trouble.

Seeds, Weeds and Luck.

K. D. F.—The sample you send is not Chickweed. The samples of hemp, canary and rape are all good, being well-cleaned and good in every respect. (2) You cannot get another nest from your pair of birds, as the season is now over, and they will soon be in moult. Part them at once. You have had very poor luck this season, but you may comfort yourself with the reflection that many besides yourself have had a disastrous season, the result no doubt, of the wretched weather experienced this summer. I sincerely hope you will have better luck next time, which will most likely be your portion.

YORKSHIRES.

Answered by H. W. BATTYE.

Not Quite Himself.

W. H. P.—Let your bird's staple food be plain white canary seed, and give no mixed seed of any kind at present. If you are intending to colour feed your bird, give a little tasteless pepper, without the addition of any hot pepper. Give the tasteless along with half-a-teaspoonful of egg food on alternate days, and on the other day you do not give that, give half-a-teaspoonful of maw seed separately in addition to the white seed in the seed hopper. Do not use the paraffin oil again, but wait and see what the bird is like when he has finished his moult, which he should be about commencing by this time. Mix with two tablespoonsful of water as much magnesia as will cover a threepenny piece, and give this for the bird's drinking water for one week. Then give same on alternate days for another week, and on the other days give clean water only. See that there is no red mite about the bird or cage, when you may hope to see your bird all right after the moult.

CRESTS AND CRESTBREDS.

Answered by W. E. GREEVES.

Crestbred with Growth on Beak.

M. M. Powell.—The only thing I can advise you to do is to paint the growth on the beak with tincture of iodine, which in course of time will reduce it. Unless the bird suffers inconvenience from the growth, I should be inclined to let it alone, provided also that it gets no larger.

LIZARDS.

Selection for Line Breeding.

C. Sellar.—It is rather early to make a selection for next year's breeding from your young stock. I am pleased you have got a few nice birds to select from; later in the year you may select the best young Gold hen to pair to the old cock; then the best young Silver cock to mate with the old hen, the result from these will be 4 blood of the original in each case. The following season, ½ and ¾ stock of the original may be obtained. If you desire other variations, with an increase of stock birds, you may again write to CAGE BIRDS.

ROLLERS.

Answered by "SCHOOLMASTER."

Summer Rape Seed.

J.T.P.S.—The sample of rape seed you send is that usually sold by seedsmen as "sweet summer rape," and is quite good enough for all ordinary purposes. You should test it on the lines recommended in my reply to you last week; had no time to do so myself, or could not be replied to in this issue. Some seed specialists keep a finer German rape than this sample—smaller and sweeter.

Moulting a Songster.

M.R.B.—A little more generous diet, and keeping in an even temperature will be all your Roller will require to ensure a good moult. Never let him be exposed to draughts. If in an open wire cage, cover it completely at night, with a light cover, and if bird hangs in a window, cover it half-over (window side) during the day—light muslin will answer. Give Canary and summer rape in the food vessel—two parts of the former to one of the latter. Give a small teaspoonful of maw seed one day, and the same of linseed the next day (alternate days), except on Sunday, when give this quantity of some good maker's packet mixed seed. These latter dainties should be given in a separate vessel. He can also have a small teaspoonful of egg-bread, or a good maker's patent Canary bread or food three times a week. Keep some good grit on the cage floor, and give a slice of sweet apple between the cage wires, or a sprig of watercress or lettuce several times a week (vary it). Pleased to know my former advice turned out satisfactorily.

An Elderly Songster.

F.P.—Seven or eight years is a tidy age for a singing Canary, but not out of the way old, as many far more venerable birds have been recorded from time to time. As your bird is singing, there can't be anything serious the matter with him. Possibly the feather picking may be due to him being about to break into moult—just about the time the feathers begin to fall, birds often pick about more among their plumage. Of course, red-mite could also be the cause, but you say you can find no trace of such. You should add a little summer rape seed to the Canary, to make the bird's stock mixture, and give the green food much more frequently, also give a slice of sweet apple now and again. I suppose he has a bath frequently? He should do. For ten days put six to eight drops of lemon-juice (fresh lemon) in his drinking water, and, when moulting, stir half-a-teaspoonful of Parrish's chemical food into the water every day. If he does not improve then, write me again. But be sure he has the bathes; also that no red-mites infest his cage.

MISCELLANEOUS CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by "OLD JUDGE."

Sea-Sand and Sawdust.

Hopeville.—Sea-sand, if clean and dry, is infinitely better than anything else for cage bottoms. I used it myself for many years and I know several very successful fanciers in our coast towns who use nothing else. Sawdust I have never used, and never recommend, except when a hen is suffering from nesting diarrhœa. Ordinary deal sawdust is the best.

Young Birds Dying.

Ignorance.—In a case such as you describe, it is absolutely impossible to say why birds die. Young Canaries although given the best of food, and every care and attention that thought and experience can devise, die, and no man can tell why. Every year our most experienced breeders lose young birds in the nest. The food you mention is a good food, and many birds are reared upon it year after year. The stomachs of young birds at the age you mention have a bloated appearance, there is nothing unnatural in it.

Owing to the holidays, many queries have necessarily had to wait an answer until next week.

Treatment of Turtle Dove.

White Owl.—I am at a loss to know where you read (or heard?) that Turtle Doves would not do well in captivity. They are, on the contrary, quite simple things to keep. Warmth is not necessary in the winter, though if kept out of doors a sheltered and snug aviary must be provided, for the species is a summer migrant to this country, and does not stand rigorous weather well (though this depends much on the part of the country in which you live) unless afforded protection. I want to convey, however, that a warmed room is quite unnecessary. If the feathers have been simply shot out of the wing, or were lost under the circumstances incidental to the capture of the bird, they will grow again all right. You will find it keeps tame, I feel sure. The feeding is quite a simple matter. Packets of "Dove Mixture" (Composed of small grains, such as wheat, barley, buckwheat, dari, tares, canary, hemp, millet seeds, etc.), can be obtained from any good seedsman, and on this your bird will thrive admirably. It will also relish dry crumbled biscuit (or moistened with milk), bread and milk, ants eggs, coarse insectivorous mixture, peas, clover shoots, almost any shoots of growing grain, etc. It must have coarse grit and old lime (say, crushed mortar). Give a big dish of water.

What Bird is it?

D.D.C.—I really cannot answer your question. In the first place, I cannot call to mind any British species, the hen of which is "all yellow on the breast and very light brown on the back," and the cock "dirty white on the breast." And in the second place you do not give me details on which I can form an opinion. You say the nest was "in a railway banking." Was it on (or in) the ground, how large was it, and of what and how was it made? Several of the warblers may build in (or at foot of) a bush on a railway bank. Your own bird might be the Greater White-throat, assuming you have confused the cock with the hen, and rosy-flush on the breast of the cock for "yellowish." But, of course, it is impossible to say from the meagre and unsatisfactory details you give.

Her "Heart Thumps."

A. M. Mence.—I am afraid you will have to decide for yourself whether or not to let the hen Canary go on sitting. I can't come to any conclusion from your letter. You say her "heart thumps and shakes her with every beat, and beats very rapidly." That sounds serious. But in the next sentence you say she "seems to be sitting well, and also eats well." I don't think she would do either of the two latter things if she was feeling very "queer." Anyway, if she looks bold and bright about the eyes, and does not "sit thick" on the perch when off the nest to feed, I am sure you can safely ignore the symptoms you mention, and let the incubation proceed. The explanation may possibly be that you have a nervous hen, who does not like you "messing about" her home, and whose heart thumps against her ribs through fear of the evil designs she imagines you have upon it. If so, the remedy is obvious—go away and mind your own business. Of course, if she is genuinely "queer" it is no use letting her sit longer. I should not take the Linnet away (assuming things go on as they ought) unless he misbehaves, for many Linnets are good feeders and parents.

Colour-feeding Young Bullfinches.

Heather Bell.—It is a matter of opinion whether shaw Bullfinches should be colour-fed or not. Given one with the right sort of breast colour (rich, fiery-red, on a clean ground) I am quite sure colour-feeding is unnecessary, providing it gets suitable natural colouring agents. I would undertake to moult such a specimen as good as any colour-fed one. Bullies should have a free supply of all the fruits and berries with colour in them, especially blackberries and privet berries; in addition to these you have straw, rasp, elder, mountain ash, and other berries, black currants and cherries, etc., to say nothing of the wild seeding plants I am so frequently recommending, such as ripe plantain, dock, thistles, heather tops (where possible), shepherd's purse, etc. That Bullie is a great bud and fruit-eating bird one look at his bill should convince anyone; try him with any fruit you think suitable. Let both your birds bathe freely. Don't give hemp, but substitute linseed and sunflower seed. Of course, you can give them colour-food if you like. Being young birds, they will take to it readily. My friend, Mr. Sandy, was telling me only the other day of a young Bullie he had which preferred colour-food to anything else he could put before it! I have given many answers concerning colour-feeding in recent issues, as doubtless you have seen.

Cage of Chaffinch.

Lewis.—I expected you were keeping the Chaffinch in an unsuitable cage. You say it has "three sides" wired, by which I presume you mean two sides and the front, as I never heard of a three-sided cage before. You could certainly board up the sides, which would greatly improve it, and render it more suitable for the bird. Still, it would not make it equal to the Finch stock-cage, even though you removed one of the three perches as well. Doing the latter would, I expect, necessitate the bird going on to the cage bottom to feed, with consequent risk of soiling feet and plumage, whereas in the proper Finch cage the seed (inside) and the water (outside) are practically on a level with the two perches, thus permitting the bird to easily reach either, and tending to keep it off the floor of the cage. Pieces of cardboard, fitted into place by means of small pins, would answer your purpose (if you stick to the old cage) quite as well as pieces of wood. You could probably fit it better—certainly more easily.

A Weed and a Blackbird.

Novice.—The weed you sent is plantain—also known as rats-tails. I am continually recommending it, when ripe and nearly ripe, for seed-eating Britishers, and especially for Linnets. If your Blackbird seems otherwise healthy, there is nothing to be alarmed at in the fact of its going to sleep occasionally in the middle of the day, especially seeing it is moulting, for many birds then indulge in that luxury—or habit, call it what you will. I should only hang him outside on suitable days; never on the cold, damp ones inflicted so frequently on us this "summer." If really hot and fine, he will not hurt out of doors day and night. But I shouldn't take any risks. For a week mix a small teaspoonful of Parrish's chemical food into two tablespoonfuls of drinking water; continue this medicine for ten or twelve days afterwards, but give it then on alternate days only. Get the bird all the live insects you can lay hands on—flies, grubs, smooth caterpillars, scoured gentles, wash-grub, blackbeetles, etc. (anything which seems likely), not forgetting mealworms and a fat spider or two daily. With plenty of these latter items, such-like insectivorous birds have little difficulty, generally speaking, in moulting well and easily.

In an Aviary.

New Reader.—I have never had an aviary built with brass wire (either not lacquered, like yours, or lacquered), so am quite unable to recommend you anything to keep same from tarnishing, and which shall be harmless to birds. Brass wire is not good for either cages or aviaries—it is very apt to get coated in places with verdigris, a virulent poison, dangerous to any birds which may chance to peck it. Tinned wire is best, and looks, to my mind, equally as well as brass. The usual rule is to allow one foot of floor-space to each inmate (the size of a Canary), and this forms a fairly useful basis on which to calculate the holding capacity of an aviary. Yours, 3 ft. by 1½ ft. (height does not count) will, therefore, hold four and a-half birds—or, say, six at the outside to be really comfortable. You could not possibly get into it such a list as you mention. One cannot say definitely whether any species will agree or will not agree. Individual birds (like human beings) differ. Some are peaceable, others are not. Thus we may have a gentle, kind Yellowhammer, and a most vicious one. All one can do is to eject offenders against the common peace and welfare. Bramblefinches are often brutes; likewise Yellowhammers and Greenfinches. Titmice of many species are very dangerous in confined spaces, braining other birds without compunction. Lovebirds (if you mean Budgerigars) are also dangerous. A collection of small Foreign seed-eaters might suit you best.

A Young Albino.

W. Winnard.—The beautiful young Albino you sent me was a Spotted Flycatcher. What a pity it died—I never saw a lovelier specimen. If you got it out of the nest, you ought, with care and suitable food, to have been able to hand-rear it. I note you say another one was found in the same place some two months back, however, so presume both were snared after leaving the nest. It is an interesting circumstance. If you get any more, send one along to me, and let me try my hand at bringing it up. Glad to get anything rare, or freakish, of this nature.

Trees and a Goldfinch.

M. M. Powell.—Your Crest query is answered among the Canary queries, by Mr. Greeves. Don't mix questions for different specialists (read rules), or you run the risk of receiving no reply. Privet, box, holly, and "Christmas trees" are among the best shrubs for aviaries, though if the latter are small, plants are apt to soon get soiled—the fate, of course, of any living greenery. Bundles of heather and gorse also make cover, but are apt to attract mice, which will build their nests therein, if they can get to it. There is no reason why a cock Goldfinch should not winter with a number of Canarics. Both species are generally favourably disposed towards one another.

Mainly about Swallows.

D. O. Mayer.—A field-moulted Goldfinch is one moulted out in the fields—that is, in a state of nature, in contra-distinction to one moulted in captivity. I do not advise you, as a young fancier (apparently of little experience) to trouble your head about the keeping of Swallows. You can find many more suitable and attractive species to commence upon. Swallows are not good cage-pets at any time, and are difficult to properly cater for in the food line, and to keep in health, especially to moult. Leave them to old, experienced keepers of insectivorous species. The best diet for young Swallows would be house-flies (caught in a "balloon" trap) live ants' eggs and tiny mealworms; also any other likely live insects you could lay hands on. You will have to wean them on to a first-class insectivorous mixture (it is against the rules to recommend any particular make; consult our advertisement columns) prepared with a little vegetable ingredient and varied as much as possible, on the lines recommended at length to "Flycatcher," in No. 284. A fair supply of live food is at all times necessary.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S.

Amazon Moulting Slowly.

My Amazon is passing through the moult, which appears to be very protracted, and the cases of the pen feathers do not come off freely. Is there anything I can do to assist it?—J. W. NICKLIN.

J. W. Nicklin.—I should give this bird a liberal diet, as follows: Seed mixture: canary, oats, wheat, dari, hemp, Indian corn, and sunflower seeds. Boiled maize every other day (this only keeps fresh one day), which should be well dusted with flour, or flowers of sulphur; also well colour its drinking water with Parish's chemical food, and keep a continuous supply of cuttlefish bone. Supply, not all at once, but so as to vary the diet: ripe fruit, greenfood, plain biscuits, boiled potato (dry), nuts, and stale crust of household bread (dry). Let the bird have a bath every other day, or daily, if it will take it, while the present genial weather lasts, but in all weathers you must guard against draught, and particularly so while their plumage is damp. Do not give slops, sops, or any kind of animal food. If you had given particulars of your diet, it might have given me a clue to the cause of your bird's condition; but, if you treat as above, it should come out all right a little later. If yours is a fairly recent importation, that may explain the matter, the first moult in this country of many species being very protracted.

Sexes of Paradise Whydahs and Green Avadavats.

(1) What is the difference between the sexes of Paradise Whydahs and Green Avadavats. (2) A Scarlet Weaver which is flying loose in my conservatory among 26 others, which appear very terrified at it. What are the sexual distinctions, and will procuring a mate make it less aggressive?—T. J. L.

T. J. L.—(1) When in breeding plumage, the fine long caudal plumes of the male are all-sufficient to distinguish him, he also dons as the remainder of his nuptial garment a rich plumage of velvety black, with the back, sides of neck and breast, rich ruddy-chestnut, and rump white. The female never wears the long tail plumes of the male, and she is more or less plainly clad in brown on the upper surface, streaked with blackish; the under surface is huffish white; there are two blackish stripes on each side of the face, the space between being white. When out of colour, the male resembles the female, but is larger and richer in colour. The female Green Avadavat is a little paler and duller than her mate, the yellow of her under parts being decidedly whitish compared with that of the male, that is, of course, providing adult specimens are compared. (2) I presume your Scarlet Weaver is the Madagascar, if so, there should be no danger to your other birds, I have these and several other species of Weavers (these birds are very boisterous and wild while wearing the nuptial dress) among Waxbills and small finches, and they do no harm, neither are the small birds scared; at the same time, I have heard of malicious individuals; watch yours, and if it chases and worries the others, you must cage it up; if it is only its wild movements that causes the scare, they will soon become accustomed to this. The female is a plain brown bird with blackish striations, much lighter and with smaller number of ill-defined striations on the under surface. In my aviary the males have never noticed the females, and I do not think procuring a hen will help you much, if at all.

What Birds?

(1) Can you name two foreign birds A and B, which I have? A, size about that of Chaffinch, but more slender; head and body, light red; beak, bright red; cheeks, black; back, brown, streaked with black. B, size of sparrow; head and back, dark brown; breast, speckled black and white; beak, grey and short. (2) I have a Bengalee, cross Spice bird, hybrid. Is this rare?—NAMES.

Names?—(1) A. The description reads very much like that of the Red-billed Weaver (Quelea quelea), but if you are acquainted with this bird, and know your bird is not of this species, please repeat query, and state length of tail, and also quote any other distinctive marking there may be in its plumage. Has it a semi-crest when excited, etc? B. This description, except for size, reads very like a Spice Finch, but you are acquainted with this species, I take it, therefore your bird is apparently one of the so-called Song Sparrows, which species, I cannot say at time of going to Press, but will give this in a later issue. (2) These are certainly not rare, as I know an aviculturist who reared a brood last year, and has done so again this. I also know of, at least three other cases during the past few years in which this hybrid has been successfully bred. A pair in aviary, the gift of the breeder, are very handsome birds indeed, much more so, than either of their parents.

Australian Lorikeet.

(1) From description herewith, can you name my Australian Lorikeet? (2) What other birds can I keep with it, and my Budgerigars, that will be happy and nest in the aviary?—R.E.C.

R.E.C.—(1) It is rather difficult to form a definite conclusion as to the species of your bird, but I have little doubt but that it is Forsten's Lorikeet (Trichoglossus forsteni). (2) I am not clear as to what you require here. Lories, as a rule, do not agree well together (that is, more than one pair together) or with other Parrikeets. In your aviaries any of the following would agree together, and if not overcrowded should ultimately breed. Red Rosellas, Mealy Rosellas, King Parrakeets, Crimson-wings, Blood-rumps, Many-colours, Port Lincolns, Cockatcels, Yellow-rumps, Varied Lorikeets, White-eared Conures, with Budgerigars and Lovebirds in variety. You could break these up into groups to suit your various aviaries. The chief point to guard against is to see that they have sufficient nesting accommodation without encroaching too close on each other's quarters. I am of the opinion, from the details you give, that the Forsten's would agree with either of the groups you may make up. If it is troublesome in one enclosure, try it in another. Why not procure it a mate? They are worth breeding, and one aviculturist in this country has been successful in rearing young.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for a reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post-mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Canary (H.C.).—Diseased liver, and inflammation.

Budgerigars (Mrs. Grote-Joyce).—Acute pneumonia and inflammation of liver, commonly called "a chill."

GENERAL.

Answered by the EDITOR.

Canary Breeding Competition (J. L. Fontyne).—We cannot possibly make any departure from the published conditions governing the Canary Breeding Competition. If you comply with the rules you are certainly eligible to compete in it.

An Embellished Postcard (H. W. Sheldon).—Thanks for permitting us a look at the card. The appropriate embellishments made us smile. We will hand it on to the gentleman mentioned.

Address Wanted (J. Kay).—The address of the gentleman you mention is unknown; we should much like to know it ourselves.

Show Report (W. Rutherford). — Accept our thanks for kindness in sending Show Report, which however, had already reached us from another source.

A Swing Door (F. J. Rook).—We have to thank you for your communication on this subject, contents of which have been duly noted.

Scotch Fancy Matters (J. H.).—We regret that we are unable to go into the matters contained in your letter; they are quite outside the subject under discussion.

PERFORMING BIRDS.

By D. STEWARD.

It is remarkable what training, combined with infinite patience, can do towards developing the restless, irresponsible little brain of a bird to such an extent as to make it intelligently subservient and reliably obedient to the will of man; so that it will go through performances with an ease and sang-froid that many a human actor might envy, and withal an air of really enjoying and understanding its compulsory play. Of course, it performs its tricks more or less mechanically, but if the bird is well taught it will not convey that impression, but rather that it is taking an intelligent interest in what it is doing.

A Curiosity in Training.

It is curious that the trainer of such birds—in fact, of practically every feathered and furred thing, even to the flea, that performs—is invariably a foreigner.

He seems to enjoy a peculiar monopoly of aptitude for bringing out and making the utmost of the intelligence of every living thing; this is all the more remarkable when his short and often violent temper, and impatience displayed in dealing with his fellow men, are taken into account.

In the training of animals cruelty may be—though I do not think, on the whole, is very often—resorted to; but this, in the case of birds, would be to crown the result with hopeless failure. Their organisms are of too delicate construction to admit of cruelty succeeding where kindness and patience fail. Even with an animal—you can invariably tell by its nervous halting movements, its strained eyes, and the furtive manner in which it watches its trainer, that cruelty has made up the major portion of its hapless career; and there is little pleasure to be derived from witnessing its performance, however well done. But I am digressing.

A Little Army.

Some years ago a fairly familiar sight on the sea-shore of several popular resorts was that of a man with a few bird-cages, a long board, and a couple of trestles.

The latter he fixed up to form a table, and the cages, containing an assortment of Finches—Goldies, Bullies, also Linnets and Canaries, were placed at one end; the birds were then let out and each was given, and went through, its appointed task. Two of them were harnessed to a little carriage, and another mounted the box as coachman, and gravely took the cotton reins in his beak, while yet another, dressed as a lady in a mantle tied with a bit of cotton in front to keep it on, and on her head a little cap with a feather, out of her own body, stuck jauntily in it, hopped inside. Then the coachman pulled the reins and the carriage started, and thus they patiently paraded up and down in slow and solemn state.

Decorated with their own Plumes.

I believe most of the birds wore little caps decorated with their own moulted feathers, and situated at various angles on their heads—sometimes over one eye, which gave them a strangely rakish appearance, due to their efforts to peck them off. Meanwhile a Bullie or Goldie would be told off to manipulate a tiny cannon, and a comrade, who was also an enemy, took his stand on a little sheet, which was spread on the ground directly in front of the cannon, a short distance away. Then bing-bong!—went the cannon, and instantly down fell the enemy and lay for dead, save that his little right eye showed the liveliest animation.

Immediately four other birds hurried forward and each seized a corner of the sheet, lifted it up with the fallen one upon it, and carried him away to come to life again. This performance was admirably carried out by all the feathered actors who took part in it.

Who Killed Cock Robin?

There were other incidents in the tragedy of Cock Robin that they acted, but I cannot recall what they were. Once during one of these exhibitions a Goldie took it into his naughty head that he would like to give a little unrehearsed performance on his own account, and so, while the man's attention was otherwise engaged, he flew away. The man, in great concern, left all the other birds just as they were on the table, and rushed after the truant, who led him a nice dance over the sands before finally allowing himself to be captured; the crowd meanwhile looking on in amused and selfish idleness, and shouting all sorts of impractical directions as to the best method of catching the bird. The man at last came back in triumph with the rascal and was, I daresay, much relieved to find that the rest of his "company" had not decamped, but were patiently awaiting his return. Strangely enough—or perhaps I should say, owing to their excellent training, although the birds had ample opportunities to fly away, they never seemed to have the slightest inclination to do so, save in this one instance.

The Birds Enjoy their Work.

Some months ago at a music-hall I witnessed a very pleasurable and entertaining "turn," which consisted of a number of performing Cockatoos. These birds, which were, if I remember rightly, of the Lemon-crested variety, were under splendid control, and went through their performance without any apparent effort, as if they were really enjoying themselves, which I have no doubt was the case. One rode a bicycle run on a wire stretched across from one end of the stage to the other, and his little legs went twinkle, twinkle, as he worked the pedals round and round at a rapid pace.

Others turned somersaults in all directions, and it was most amusing to watch the slow, deliberate manner in which they fixed themselves in the proper position for turning over—and they were not to be hurried either. A wooden block of steps was placed for one bird, and at command he gravely and very slowly turned head over heels all the way down to the bottom, and having arrived there he tucked his head between his feet and stood upon it.

But I daresay many young readers have seen these same birds perform, for themselves, as they have appeared, and probably will appear again, in several towns; those who have not seen them should not fail to do so when opportunity offers, as they are well worth a visit.

ELOQUENT PARROTS.

Dealer's Methods of Teaching Birds to Chatter.

In an obscure shop in Great Andrew Street, Bloomsbury, there is a dealer in Parrots of every known species. He is a German, and speaks four or five other languages. Interviewed by an "Evening News" representative, he explained that by judicious education a Parrot of almost any kind, from the tiny Budgerigar to the gigantic Macaw, might be converted into a talker. He had made a methodical study of "Parrotry," and in his opinion the best linguist was the Grey Parrot from the west coast of Africa and Prince's Island. "My methods? Well, they are simple enough. I allow my Parrots some proportion of their native food—bananas, palm nuts, and the like. I begin by instructing them to pronounce one word, allowing them two days to master it, and gradually increasing their vocabulary to three or four words. I then make sentences of words that are easily joined together. It takes a male bird at most two weeks to master half a dozen short sentences in one language. The females are not quite so quick. In teaching a Parrot, an important secret is to demonstrate the meaning of the word or sentence if possible, so that it will seem to speak intelligently. For instance, pulling a newspaper from my pocket, I will say, 'What's the time?' The Parrot will soon learn to suit the word to the action. In teaching the bird to greet a visitor with 'How d'you do?' I repeat the words on entering its presence. To make him say 'Must you go?' 'Good-bye,' I rise from a chair, pick up my hat, and while leaving the room repeat the words.

PARROTS AND THE CLASSICS.

"There are birds that can quote from the classics or from the works of some of our best-known authors. These command exceedingly high prices. One that I taught to speak several phrases from Shakespeare and Dickens, I sold to a literary man for £20. The bird was of the common Black Cockatoo species. Parrots are admirable imitators of actors. One intelligent bird I had could give an exact imitation of Dan Leno's voice, and crack several of his short jokes. A clever amateur actor who is a pretty good mimic taught the Parrot. It took him about four months, but his patience was well rewarded. A well-known actor heard of the bird from a member of his company, and bought it for £30. Most actors have a liking for Parrots, particularly for the good mimics. Large retail business houses and manufacturing firms are also good customers. I sell them what I call my advertising Parrots. I have sold to several independent cigar stores Parrots that I have taught to say, 'Sit down for a smoke,' 'Try So-and-So cigar,' and the like. Others I have taught to puff certain well-known foodstuffs for some of the food-manufacturing concerns, who lend the Parrots out to the shops that sell their speciality.

CLEVER AND BUSINESSLIKE.

"Some of the birds are diabolically clever. I owned one which effectively woke up the only slow-paying customer I ever had. His bill for bird seed had run for seven months, and whenever I said to him, 'Won't you let me receipt your bill to-day?' he put me off with the same excuse. He was well-to-do, and I knew his credit was good; but the delay was annoying. The Parrot was a marvel at picking up stray bits of conversation, and it had an all-round vocabulary. One afternoon, when my slow-paying customer came in to get some seed for his birds, I asked him if he would take a seat. As soon as I mentioned the word 'seat,' the Parrot recognised the man, and called out, 'Receipt, receipt!' That was too much for my customer. He settled then and there. This Parrot here (pointing to the corner) is a master of repartee. When I asked it the other day where it was born, it replied, 'In free England.' 'Then why are you in that cage?' But here I was forestalled, for the retort came in a shrill voice, 'Because a big Dutchman put me in. Got Polly on the brain.' I once had another Parrot," he added, "a Goffins, which I sold for £40. As the purchaser was leaving the shop he turned and said to it: 'Now, Polly, I'm your master; what shall I do with you—eat you up?' Quick as a flash the Parrot replied: 'Yes, Polly's got brains.'"

CANARY BREEDING IN THE HARTZ MOUNTAINS.

The training of the young birds to sing correctly is one of the most important and laborious features of the breeder's activity. The young birds, learning by imitation for the most part, acquire bad singing as well as good, and, while it is the plan of the breeders that the birds should only hear the good singing of the "Vorsaenger," yet some of them naturally chirp and whistle in an unpleasant manner, and care must be taken that these birds are removed before the other birds have acquired the same bad habits and are rendered unsaleable. The art of the breeder lies in his being able to discover the slumbering talent in the bird at an early age, developing the same to its highest point of perfection in its particular line. Some birds show an especial talent for trilling, while others are remarkable for the beauty and variety of their song. The birds are divided into classes and kept in separate rooms, those having harsh and sharp voices being often placed in covered cages, where, instead of singing themselves, they are forced to listen to other good singers, through which their faults are often overcome. The better singers, after passing a certain stage where their habits are established and they do not require the close daily watching of the breeder, are taken into a room reserved for the best singers. The elementary training for the singer is generally finished by the end of November, and the singing is at its best at the beginning of January.

The Canary is in every way a house bird, and some people, with good intentions of giving the bird a little fresh air, make a serious mistake by hanging the bird out of the window on the first warm spring day. The bird is not used to the outside air, as he and his ancestors have been raised for centuries in the house, and the only result of this well-intended kindness is a cold which results in partial, if not entire, loss of the voice. FOUR LIGHT MULES IN ONE NEST.

Sir,—I would like to know if any of your readers ever saw four light mules in one nest? I don't mean birds with a light feather or two. I was calling on a well-known Norwich breeder in the Crosmyloof District of Glasgow, and he had four even-marked mules on the perch—two yellows and two buffs—all four pointed. One of the yellows is of a good size, as good in colour as a canary, and simply perfection in markings, slightly marked on both eyes, with three or four of the inner flights dark on both wings. A.M.

BIRD KEEPING AS AN AMUSEMENT FOR INVALIDS.

Sir,—Those who are constantly confined to their room, owing to inability to walk out of doors, as well as those having the care of such, well know how difficult it is to find some amusement which will prove of lasting interest to the invalid, cost little to get, keep up, or even the source from which a small profit can be derived to pay for the same. To such persons a pair of canaries might prove of great value in leading the mind from the monotony of their constant confinement. They give the sufferer something to cheer, as well as to occupy, his time, and thus make it far more endurable than when left to drag so slowly that very often a day appears as if it would never reach evening. But the birdies change all this, as there is always something about them to attract the attention, and it is wonderful to see how very tame and knowing the little creatures become in the keeping of such a person, who not only finds amusement in them, but will soon see that the little pets begin to take note of every movement of their owner, so that a mutual understanding is soon established. The experiment is well worth a trial by any poor souls who have to pass their whole time within doors. The cost is small, the pleasure great ALICE BLAIR.

THE BLACKCAP AS A CAGE PET.

Sir,—As I am a great admirer of Nature, and have had every opportunity to study it. I have taken many a note in my log of birds, their nests, eggs, habits, the arrivals and departures of our spring visitors, also our autumn friends. This year by chance I was able to get out in my garden on the 21st of April, and was pleased to see my old friend, a Black Cap, had arrived, and was quite at home in a bush close by my garden seat. This simple fact caused quite a flutter in my mind and made me quite happy for some time. How it did recall the times of years gone by, when I had its name-sake, and what a pet it was with me for over five years. This, I think, will take some beating for one of these birds in confinement. I have had a Nightingale longer, but never a black cap. In my humble opinion black caps are more delicate than the Nightingale, and do not survive the indoor treatment. This bird was caught in the autumn of 1887, before the spring migrants departed to more congenial climes, and at once made itself at home. It took the food I gave it and settled down at once. It did not show any of the migratory fever, but merely said that it had come to stay, and stay it did, for five years, not only as a pet, but as a songster, for it did sing, to the envy of many a one. Many a time have I been asked to put a price on it. But, no, my pets were my pets. Nothing parted us until death. Had I been willing to sell them it might have been many a pound in my pocket. It seems rather singular, but it was on the 21st September that I saw the last one, and as nearly as possible in the same place. Now could this be the same bird come to remind us of its visit? If so, where were its young, or its female mate, for a male it was. I am under the impression that there are not nearly so many Blackcaps kept now as in years gone by. They are quite easy to keep when once got on the feed, but I do know they lack the stamina of the Nightingale, and will not last so long under the same treatment. At the time I had this bird I also had a Nightingale, which was caught by accident in April, a few days after its arrival, and soon took to the cage. This bird I had for 7 years; it did sing, but not like the Blackcap, neither was it so great a pet. This bird would take a mealworm, or any other bit-bit from your fingers, and would give your fingers a peck if you deceived it in any way. The food I gave it when fresh caught was some red currants, which had been matted up to preserve them until the late autumn, wasp grub, which is a food relished by most insectivorous birds, and which is not so much collected as it might be. In nest-taking the process is very simple indeed. I have, in years gone by, taken some hundreds of wasp nests. If the red currants, or white ones, for all that, are not obtainable, then you can go to the currants of the shops, these I have given the Blackcaps ad lib. Some were given quite dry as bought, and others I have soaked in cold water before giving them. Both ways they have been greatly relished by the Blackcaps. Another favourite food of mine, and which I gave freely, was spiders caught in the autumn from the garden. The way I caught them was to get a small vessel with hot water in it, and then go round the bushes and plants and shake the spiders into the hot water, and then dry them in the sun or oven, for future use. This food has proved to me on many occasions a very valuable one, as it frequently brought round an ailing bird. This wrinkle was given to me by a very old fancier, as a curative for many ailments in cage birds, and which I have found to be correct. Having a large garden to run to, I could always get plenty of insect food, which, in the summer, I gave quite freely, and preserved some for winter's use. I always managed to get in a good stock of ants' eggs, which I mixed freely with the prepared foods. My birds' long life and continual good health I attribute to its being out of doors all the summer in a large cage, but, of course, protected from the hot sun and rains. I gave, also, besides the drinking water a large bath daily, which it was very fond of, and would come out of it drenched. This had the effect of keeping the bird in good plumage, and made it a picture to look at. I have hand-reared a nest of Blackcaps most years, until 5 years ago, when I failed to get away. Although I was always very successful in hand raising Blackcaps and all other kinds of insectivorous birds, I always found them more difficult to keep in health for any length of time than the wild-caught ones, and never could I get one to live 4 years, they lacking the stamina of a wild? caught one. I certainly prefer a wild-caught bird, its natural food, when young, gives it a more robust constitution, which enables it to last longer in confinement. How is it that there are not now so many Blackcaps shown as there used to be? In years gone by there were always plenty to be seen at the Palace, and other large shows, but now they are few and far between. I am afraid it is their delicate constitutions which have caused them to be neglected. As pets they are delightful, and so soon get used to cage life. I hope this short letter may be the means of reviving interest in this most beautiful songster. T. H. KINCH

SOUTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C. PATRONAGE.

Sir,—The support of the above club has been given to the following Societies: Champion Section, Plymouth, Battersea, Hastings, Cardiff, L.C.B.A., and National (Crystal Palace); Novice Section to Southend, Bournemouth, L.C.B.A., Wimbledon, Llanelly (pending) and National (Crystal Palace). Arrangements have been made for the despatch of exhibits from Plymouth, October 22 and 23, to Battersea, Oct. 24 and 25. J. W. RENNIE (Hon. Sec)

YOUNG BIRDS DYING BEFORE THE MOULT.

Sir,—This is a trouble that causes much loss and disappointment to the novice, who, very often, has been most successful in the initial stages of breeding, and got a good proportion of young safely hatched and brought up, which go straight ahead until when six or eight weeks old. Then commences a decline which usually ends in providing a subject for a funeral. How to prevent this is, in my opinion, a fairly simple matter after all. In nearly or quite all cases where it occurs, it will be found that the young at this age are still being fed on the same lines as when they were first placed entirely on their own resources. This is where one first goes wrong. As soon as the young are able to care for themselves they should be gradually weaned on to a staple diet of plain canary seed, and after this, until it becomes necessary to begin colour-feeding, the simpler the diet the better it will be for the birds. When kept on these lines the trouble of young dying off just before the moult should commence will not be a very serious one, I think, even if it occurs at all. W. SMITH.

A BIRDS' PARADISE AT GLASGOW.

Sir,—Situated at the east end of the city, Tollcross Park, if not the finest, is one of the most natural parks in Glasgow. The Corporation purchased it from the trustees of the late Mr. Dunlop, a well-known ironmaster, converting it into a public park a few years ago. It is an ideal spot for the lover of wild birds, and many an hour has the writer spent studying the birds that abound in the Glen. The rook is there in all his glory, and his "caw, caw," may be heard all the year round. Then the thrush can be seen in great numbers; for the second year a nest has been reared in the public conservatory, the old birds entering by way of the ventilator. The starling and blackbird are for ever searching the lawns for worms and insects, and judging by their excursions to and fro, they are not disappointed. Other birds that are very plentiful are, chaffinch, greenfinch, yellowhammer, brown linnet, and grey wagtail. Here and there a pair of bullfinches may be seen; also our sweet little songster, the robin. Several other of the smaller British birds also delight the visitor and the naturalist. A few hours spent in the Glen will well repay the visitor, who, without doubt, will acknowledge that it is a paradise to the Glasgow bird lover.

FRED BOWMAN.

A CURIOUS COMBAT.

Sir,—Last week I sent you a cutting from the "Morning Post," "Bird versus Beetle," but see in the current number of CAGE BIRDS the same sent you by a T. Browne. I now enclose a further cutting from the "Morning Post," of 3rd inst., which may prove interesting reading to some of the many who take your very interesting and instructive paper.

With reference to the stag-beetle (described in the "Morning Post" of July 27), which was found apparently attacking a greenfinch, may I say that the beetle was probably defending itself from the bird? Sparrows are very fond of eating stag-beetles, and I have often seen them pulling them to pieces or tearing off their wing cases. The beetles are generally too slow and stupid to defend themselves, but if this greenfinch carelessly began at the business end of the beetle its mandibles would soon embrace the bird, as described by your correspondent, Hilda A. Dolphin. I feel sure that the "murderous attack" was made by the bird, not the beetle." R. T. GODFREY.

ALLEGED MISMANAGEMENT AT LLANDILO SHOW.

Sir,—I have been much interested in reading in your valuable paper for July 27th the remarks of Mr. H. Griffiths, a committee man of the Llandilo Society, concerning the alleged bad management of that Society's show. He states that all letters received by me have not been shown to any committee man since the last show. How does he know that? It is not likely that I would run about looking for this important committee man to show him my correspondence. Re the special that was won by Mr. Roebach. He states that Mr. Edwards took his special a few days after the show to the chairman, Mr. Hopkin. If Mr. H. Griffiths was more careful he would ask Mr. Edwards, and he would find that I, myself, collected this special, and this two months after the show. And how can he say that the chairman had undertaken to send all specials away? This, again is not correct, as can be very easily proved by the railway receipt book and the gentlemen that I have collected the specials from. This committe man writes very much like Mr. H. S. Davies in a contemporary. He proceeds by writing: "I may say that the matter will be looked into at once as we (meaning Mr. Davies and himself), intend calling a meeting on Monday, July 22nd." He, like Mr. Davies, means next year, as no meeting was held on this date this year. This will at once prove that these two committee men are in tow with each other, and would, no doubt, like to manage all the affairs of the Society. If these two committee men were so anxious to foster the fancy in this district, they would do a little more for the Society and not try to find fault with men working the show for the pure love of the fancy. D. OWEN JONES (Hon. Sec.).

NOVICES AND THE YORKSHIRE UNION.

Sir,—Please allow me space in CAGE BIRDS to write a few lines on the novice question based on Mr. Hammond's remarks. With all due respect to our worthy secretary, I must say that I fail to see where the novices would have wrecked the Union, seeing that the season before the split the novice classes averaged over 27 per class right through the season (it takes 15 to pay prize money). Further there was every appearance of them being bigger had the split not come. Even if it had cost the societies a little more per member to the Union, they were getting it back from the novice classes. Of course some will say the novice classes robbed the other classes of entries; but I think not of so many as they make out. How often do we see an open class with 30 entries or a few more? Not as often as I should like by a long way. As to the way the medals are to be given this time, I am afraid before half the show season is over the novice entries will be falling off, for so far as I can see, it will want a novice with a lot of good birds, or a big pocket, to have anything like a fair chance of ever leaving the novice classes by winning a medal. Fancy, too, giving 12 a move up out of, I think I can safely say, 550 novices! Seeing that the novice is the backbone of the Union (I might say that most of them are working-men fanciers), it is not giving them much chance of ever getting out of the novice section by winning a medal. I am afraid some, like myself, will be saying (if not this season, the season after), if you have a bird worth showing, put it in the open classes and let it take its chance. A workingman, and more especially if he has a home to look to, cannot afford to show his birds many times without he gets in the money a few times, as it takes about 5s. to send two birds to a show a few miles on the railway—and a bit more if he has a mind to make it. That amount from a man's wage counts week by week. I think it would have been better to have gone back to the old 7s. 6d. medals, or to have lowered the value of the medals, and still kept it three firsts and gone on as before. As regards binding each club to make six novice classes, I think it a great mistake. Where is the show that the Norwich novice classes will pay at? And at some shows it will not be advisable to make four Yorkshire novice classes—such as a show at either side of Christmas, for we all know it is then a busy time on the line, and old hands do not care to trust birds on the railway, much less the novice, who perhaps has only two birds good enough to show. Of course, in Bradford, where they can take their birds, and there are enough of them to make a good show without outsiders, it is all right—one cannot call that having a free hand in the Union. G. A. WHITEHEAD.

ROBINS IN SUMMER.

Sir,— I should like some of your readers with ornithological knowledge to give me a little enlightenment as to the habits of the Robin. We have always been accustomed to associate little redbreast with winter's snows; but I have noticed several in my garden during the whole of this summer. They are quite tame, and hop about the gardener while he is at his work, and pick up any food in the shape of worms he may happen to turn up. I have also noticed others in my neighbours' gardens. What I should like to know is whether this is unusual. I have not observed the birds so late in previous years. R. N. BONE.

THE DISQUALIFIED GREENS AT THE LATE PALACE SHOW.

Sir,—Mr. Clayton accuses me of spleen, bitterness, etc. If your readers will refer to your issues of April 13 and May 4, they will be able to read full reports of the meetings of the C.B.U. and will be in a position to judge whether Mr. Clayton is justified in making such an accusation. With reference to his prize-money: his remarks concern me in a degree only. The Palace Show was held under C.B.U. Rules, and the Committee of the L. and P.O.S. in deciding the question of prize money acted in accordance with the C.B.U. Rules and the legal advice given them by the solicitor to the Cage Bird Union.

J. W. RAMSDEN.

Sir,—I am rather surprised to see all the correspondence concerning the disqualified green canaries at the last Palace Show. I thought this had been honourably settled by the C.B.U. I was an independent witness at the Manchester Council meeting, and with others was fully satisfied that the appeal was allowed, and the disqualifications quashed, both from the declaration of the Chairman, and the conversations with councillors afterwards. I am not an exhibitor, although an aviarist and lover of birds, and after this experience I am less inclined than ever to become one. I am convinced that the less one has to do with show committees and judges the better it will be for himself and his birds. The way this resolution has been twisted (apparently to suit interested parties) may be legal, but it certainly cannot claim to be justice, and if I was one of the accused in this case I would not allow the matter to rest here, but continue the fight till justice was triumphed. J. W. CUTMORE.

THE SCOTCH FANCY MODEL.

Sir,—"Advocate for Model" still has not the courage to come from behind that non-de-plume. He has from the commencement introduced private personal matters into this correspondence. To use a common phrase: He is "playing to the gallery." He states I have denounced my best friend in Greenock. I know not who he alludes to.

"Advocate for Model" asks for information re a certain Derby. Yes, when you have the courage to come boldly out and sign your name and comply with my terms stated in previous letter, and not till.

"Advocate of Model" further asks why do I not take my beating and join in. I never was beaten; no, sir, never. Not that I have the least wish to enter the model competition again. But for principle sake I will never give my vote to an improvement—the work of at least three men (this was clearly admitted to me). No; give honour to whom honour is due. Did you blush when you wrote that word "conceit"?

Look round at home. I further claim that the objectors have the majority in the fancy Press, and were I in Scotland I could find dozens who have equally as much objection as either the unknown gent (to me) "Piebald," or myself. Anyway, "Advocate of Model," let me clearly state that until you have such courage to sign your name, I shall not notice your correspondence again. J. HARRISON.

THE BREEDING SEASON AT COLDSTREAM.

Sir,—Owing to the cold, damp weather breeders experienced at the beginning of the season, breeding has been carried on a little later than usual, but I am pleased to say in the majority of cases with good average results. Messrs. Duncan and Logan have finished up with about 60 young Borders, among them, I believe, some good specimens. They are closely followed by Mr. Gilchrist, who has succeeded in rising 50, among them two or three very promising birds, likely to uphold his reputation this year again; all Borders. Mr. Lindsay, unfortunately, has only succeeded in rearing one youngster. His bad luck is owing to removal. However, Joe is never downhearted, and is as cheerful as if he had reared 100. Mr. Dickson, an ardent admirer of Norwich, has seven on the sticks, among them a good yellow cock and yellow hen; grand size and rare colour. He had very bad luck in the middle of the season. Mr. Matthew, who gives his time solely to Mule and Hybrid breeding, has also experienced reverses. He lost his breeding Bullie hen early in the season, but has reared one Greenie Mule, and has in the nest three darks and a good variegated Greenie mule. These are from the Greenie hen and cock canary, and with luck should be some size. The Greenie has proved a grand feeder. I have succeeded in rearing 54, all Borders, and expect to have a good one or so when moulted. I have had no trouble whatever this season, hens would feed anything, and on anything but I did not pair until the middle of April, and have only had one nest from some hens, as my time is rather limited during the breeding season. I may say two good even-marks have been bred, one by Messrs. Duncan and Logan, and one by Mr. Gilchrist. I have also got a fair good one, but on the light side. I had the pleasure of seeing Mr. McKenzie, of Kelso, the well-known Border breeder, who, after a poor commencement, has about 70, and with a quiet smile said he thought he had a few fit for show among them. He had also bred a good mark. The season on the whole has been fairly good.

TAKING FOREIGN BIRDS INDOORS DURING WINTER.

Sir,—The question of taking foreign birds indoors during the winter months after they have spent more or less of the past summer in an open-air aviary is just now an interesting one, so that a few words on the subject may not be considered out of place. Of late years the great spread of aviculture has naturally given rise to some experimentation, and the latter just as naturally to a variety of opinions. Thus we now find one species of bird which one aviarist considers quite capable of going through an ordinary English winter in an unheated aviary out of doors, regarded by another with at least an equal amount of experience as unsafe to be left out after the end of October—or, as one cannot judge weather in our climate by any fixed calendar, I may better say after the characteristic chills of autumn begin to be felt in the air. The fact is that all these experiments can only be regarded as so many atoms, the bulk of which must go to make up the general body of knowledge of aviculture. All the varying opinions may be, and probably are, perfectly correct as regards the aviary in which they were learned by hard practical experience; and, on the other hand, it is just as likely that each and everyone may be found wanting when tried by someone else, or even by the same person in a different locality. But why is this? Surely, the reason is not far to seek. A very little reflection will soon force one to the knowledge that extremely great differences are to be found in different aviaries—variations occasioned not only by geographical position, latitude, altitude above sea level, but in still greater degree by locality and aspect. When one considers the variation that will accrue from the two last-mentioned causes alone, it must become at once apparent that the greatest marvel would be to find two aviaries in which all the circumstances and conditions of life were exactly similar. We have them in proximity to the sea-shore and in seclusion far inland; the aviary built in a bleak stretch of flat country and another in a part sheltered by belts of woodlands, or distant mountain ranges, or, again, the one in a large open space and another in a snug suburban garden; to say nothing of the well-planned erection facing south or south-east, and there having the fullest benefit of the sunshine. Others, though equally well constructed, through stress of circumstances, are made to face a less favourable aspect, and the more ill-favoured structure is open on two or three sides, and thus much more exposed to the wind and weather. Taking all these things into consideration, one can readily understand how opinions respecting the hardihood of the inmates must of necessity show a great amount of variation, and how each observer may be perfectly right in his own deductions even when they go, or seem to go, in direct opposition to those of a fellow observer. In all probability the chances are that if any two observers possessing widely different views were to change places and recommence the work of observation, and experiment, their views would undergo a similar transition and each would find himself gradually swing round to the opinions he had erstwhile rejected. Following this line of thought one will readily see that the only really invaluable knowledge is one's own original observations made on the spot. Of course I do not wish to imply that all other accummulated knowledge should be rejected on sight. Far from this being the case, I consider all such knowledge to have a distinct and particular value, and if one is careful to select only such knowledge as seems to have been gained under conditions similar to his own, and then to utilise it as a suggestive and guiding factor in arriving at conclusions for himself, it will prove of the greatest value to him in enabling him to arrive at those first-hand and original facts with the least amount of loss and disappointment. How, then, is one to acquire this first-hand knowledge without serious loss? From the birds themselves, aided by the best recorded knowledge of other observers, acquired under circumstances similar to those governing one's own hobby. It will be gathered from all this I would counsel none to adhere slavishly to a hard and fast rule of action, but rather to rely upon observation, and use discretion in forming a definite judgment. No creatures show more quickly than birds the effects of discomfort and physical distress, and they may safely be relied upon to show when the time has arrived for placing them indoors or under permanent shelter. Let, therefore, the diet be free and generous, and so long as the birds go about in their usual manner, blithe, merry, and active, chirping or singing—if singing their notes can be called—eating and bathing, and generally showing themselves well pleased with life in their little world, one may rest assured that no harm will result from leaving them out—even though the sands of the year were fast running out. But so soon as they begin to go about with puffed feathers and a miserable, dejected appearance, avoiding the bath, and seeming to seek shelter, and prefer sitting about the perches to a healthy activity, they should be removed to the indoor quarters, which should always be in readiness to receive them should the need arise.

CANARY MANUAL

Price ONE SHILLING. Post Free 1/2.

Superbly illustrated by the Champion Canary Artist Mr. H. NORMAN. EVERY BIRD DEPICTED IS A VERITABLE MODEL, and shows the breeder what to aim for. Some idea of the popularity of this Practical Manual may be gathered from the fact that under the title of "The British Canary," it has passed its Third Edition, entering upon a Fourth Edition of 5,000 copies under the new title of "House's Canary Manual." MR. HOUSE has thoroughly revised and brought this work up-to-date and incorporated a chapter on the "Roller or Singing Canary."

REMINISCENCES OF BIRD CATCHING IN BOYHOOD'S DAYS.

Sir,—As a schoolboy I was fond of birds, and searching for their nests and eggs. My father and all my brothers were keen nest-hunters, but I was the only one of the family who made bird-keeping a hobby. My first recollections of bird-catching are of watching an old man with a small pair of nets catching Goldfinches. He was one of a very past generation, as he always wore a chimney-pot hat and a short round smock. In his hat he carried his red pocket-handkerchief and what full-coloured cock Goldfinches he caught; hens he put in his store cage, for chance buyers to pick a cock where they liked. This same catcher, many years ago, used hen Goldfinches and other birds—even Skylarks—for use at Sparrow-shooting matches. He often used the single net for Goldfinches, Bullfinches and Sparrows, and from him I obtained my first single net and tried to catch Greenfinches. At the time I knew this old catcher his decoy birds were always fresh-caught birds, but he would sell a genuine cock Goldfinch for 3d., fresh caught, or one caged a month for 1s.; but this was a long time ago. I have sold many Greypate cocks at 6d. each; hens I turned loose when I got home, as they are a nuisance to the catcher if turned loose as soon as caught. The passing of the Wild Birds Protection Act had much to do with the destruction of thousands of Greypates. Before this period catchers did not go out for Goldfinches before the middle of September, but after the Act was passed no birds were permitted to be caught or destroyed between March 1st and the last day of July. Therefore, on August 1st, catchers and gunners all went out for any birds that they could obtain, and bird dealers offered 8s. a dozen for cock Greypates. I have often, when passing a catcher on the road, heard the baby Greypates "sipping, sipping," behind his back to be fed by the parents. These men used to catch Greypates early in the morning, and they would be in the dealer's shop before the same night. In Sussex, since 1900, the County Councils have protected Goldfinches and many other birds throughout the year, and no catching is permitted on Sundays. They neither, increase or decrease, as during the migratory season they fly through other counties that are not protected, and the birds not being net-shy are soon caught. The Goldfinch is one of the easiest birds to catch when on migration. The wild birds appear so pleased to see one of their own species in another county that they all drop together to the delusive decoy bird. Many years ago, on the South Coast, several dozens were caught at one pull over of the nets. The birds do not feed near the sea coast, but generally fly along either to the East or West according to the direction of the wind. I have often caught Martins and Swallows just to kill time, not the birds, and Kingfishers during the migratory season are easily caught as they fly near the ground and over the nets. Titlarks, and Wagtails of all varieties will lower their flight to any brace-bird, and many other birds will drop between the nets during migration. Redstarts are often caught. Of rare feathered birds I once caught a nearly white cock Linnet with red breast. I have also taken a perfectly black House-sparrow, black by nature and not from coal smoke. I have had many Sparrows with white feathers in wings and tail. For over eight years I had alive in my outdoor aviary an all white cock Sparrow which paired up with a white-tailed hen, and built numbers of nests, and eggs were laid, but no young were hatched. I have had Greenfinches with a few all yellow feathers in their wings, and have caught a few Cinnamons of a greenish shade of colour that had pink eyes, and orange-breasted Greenfinches. I have also caught a few cheveral, pea-throated, and yellow-breasted Goldfinches, and once I caught a hen cheveral with a yellow breast. Up to that time I had always thought that yellow on the breast was the mark of a cock. Hawks are the worst enemies the bird-catcher has to do with, they commonly dart down on the brace-bird from behind the catcher's back, and the brace-bird is killed very often from shock, no wound being found on the bird. Once I had a Redpoll brace-bird that had one eye knocked out by a Hawk, and lived a long time after. If the catcher is desirous of securing the Hawk alive, he must be careful not to let the Hawk get his talons fixed on to any part of his flesh, or he will know it, his scratch is far more painful than his bite. Kestrels are the most often caught, and unless there was a demand for live Hawks I always killed them for the bird stuffer. I once kept a live Kestrel in a Parrot's cage for a friend. I kept it in my living room, but it was such a nuisance, and so offensive that I said I would kill every Hawk afterwards, which unfortunately I did. The next that I caught was a Merlin worth ten shillings alive, but only sixpence dead, I also caught the only Rock Pipit that I have seen alive on the same day. I seldom caught the Sparrow Hawk, they commonly flew at the brace-bird from the side and either I pulled the nets too soon, or too late. The last bird I ever caught was an old hen Sparrow Hawk which killed my brace-bird, a Goldfinch. I picked all the feathers off the Finch but could not find a wound on it.

NEW SOCIETY FOR PLUMSTEAD, WOOLWICH AND DISTRICT.

Sir,—A successful meeting was held August 1st, at the Queen's Arms, in response to an appeal sent out to form a society for the district. Mr. Hazell was voted to the chair. After the chairman had pointed out the need for a cage bird society, it was decided to form one, to be known as the Plumstead, Woolwich and District C.B.S. A very pleasant discussion then took place regarding the rules and working of the Society, followed by the election of officers for this year. It was decided that the subscription should be 3s. per annum, and that the club year should end December 31st. Membership to be open to all. All those present joined and paid the half year's subscription. No entrance fee will be charged till after the September meeting, so that all wishing to join should communicate with the Secretary before then. Meetings to be held in Trinity Schools, Beresford Square. Officers: Chairman, Mr. Hazell; vice-chairman, Mr. Best; assistant-secretary, Mr. Newnham; treasurer, Mr. Meades; committee, Messrs. Borlase, Palmer, C. T. Wood, Allison, Scorer, and Hawkes; auditors, Messrs. Jones and Whittaker. A vote of thanks to the chairman brought an enjoyable evening to a close. At the next meeting Mr. Hazell will discuss the various points of birds brought by members. We are starting with between 20 and 30 members. W. Pawley (Hon. Sec.), 13, Olven-road, Plumstead.

BEGINNERS: READ THE ANNUAL

MOULTING AND COLOUR FEEDING.

By S. Hadwin (Liverpool).

Lecture delivered before the Birkenhead Society on July 16th.

MIXING THE FEED.

I like the feed mixed in the following proportions:—1 lb. hot pepper, 4 lbs. cold pepper, 1 lb. soft sugar, 1 lb. sublime olive oil, and, as I said before, the best results are obtained by mixing these ingredients a few weeks before requiring the feed for use. When the birds are on full strength of feed the proportions should be one of feed to six of soft food, the feed to be gradually worked up to this strength and towards the end of moult just as gradually worked down again. When the birds have only the head to finish moulting, only a very little feed should be given, otherwise the head will show a deeper colour than the rest of the body, and levelness is a great thing to consider.

THE COLOUR FOOD MEDIUM.

There is only one means of transmitting colour to the birds, and that is through the medium of the soft or egg food. I would advise that this soft food be not too rich. With the ordinary egg food I would give an equal quantity of crushed hemp, on alternate days, with soaked rape seed—the seeds, of course, mixed with the egg and colour foods. It is this having to feed so largely on soft food that, in my opinion, constitutes the great drawback to colour feeding. During colour feeding I like the seed boxes to be filled with a mixture of one part linseed to three parts canary seed. A little green food can be given in the early stages of moult, but I do not recommend it after September sets in. The soaked rape seed will be found to be a capital substitute for green food. Should the birds be found too relaxed, a little rice flour will be found of great advantage if mixed with the soft food.

NEARING THE END.

Towards the end of the moult, and to wean the birds from off the soft food, a little specially mixed seed should be given in the egg drawers. The first week the mixed seed should be given on alternate days, with egg food. The second week two days seed and one egg food, and so on until the egg food is gradually done away with, except in the case of the show birds, to whom it is advisable to give a little colour feed once a week right through the show season, not only to keep the birds in bloom, but in case of the loss of occasional feathers. This specially mixed seed I like to consist of groats, linseed, hemp, rape, teazle, millet, inga, maw, and gold of pleasure in equal parts. This specially mixed seed will be found excellent for getting the birds into both show and breeding condition, and can be used occasionally when the hens are feeding young. Towards the end of the moult it will be found necessary to use iron in some form or other for the purpose of binding both the colour and feather. Now, I know of nothing better than 2 oz am. cit. of iron, 1 lb. honey, and a sufficient quantity of rum to dissolve the iron. This mixture will not only bind, but will add a beautiful bloom to the feather as well. It should be used in the soft food, in the proportion of one teaspoonful to 20 teaspoonfuls of soft food, two teaspoonfuls of cayenne, and 2 oz. glycerine added to this mixture will form a grand cough mixture.

VALUE OF BATHS.

During the whole of the moult, and especially towards the end, baths should be used frequently whenever the weather is bright. They are a fine conditioner, and not only assist the birds to throw off the old feathers, but they also help to bind the new. In conclusion, I would urge all the keepers of birds, and especially those that are being colour fed, to pay special attention to cleanliness during the moult. If this is not done, it is very easy for the birds to pick up stale egg food, and so upset themselves. In many cases the feed would be blamed, whereas the fault would be with the fancier for not removing the stale food. I have not touched on the subject of feeding from the nest, because I do not think there is any practical good in doing so. At the nest feather shows colour, except that produced by breeding for colour, is not looked for; but at the old shows colour in certain varieties is a necessity, and it is no use saying it should not be so. Judges would not be human if they were not attracted by it, so whilst this system of colour feeding survives I advise you to get a good colour, and above all get it healthily.

POINTS DISCUSSED.

After Mr. Hadwin had sat down, several members expressed the opinion that there was sufficient natural oil in the colour food without adding more, but with this view Mr. Hadwin could not agree, and strongly urged his view that peppers oiled and blended together some time before use gave the best results. The colouring matter of the peppers being extracted before being given to the birds, a greater amount of colour was absorbed, and he had no hesitation in saying that one pound of feed prepared as he had described would go further and give better results than three pounds of feed in its unblended state. Several questions were asked Mr. Hadwin as to the relative values of ordinary egg food and Spratt's prepared food for colour-feeding purposes. Mr. Hadwin stated that he was very much in favour of Spratt's plain Canary food. It was less rich, and therefore more suitable for the purpose, seeing the length of time birds had to be practically fed on it. At the same time, he could not speak too strongly against any food being used for colour-feeding purposes that contained cod liver oil in any shape or form. Cod liver oil spelt absolute ruin to colour feeding. Mr. Hadwin was not able to give any scientific reason why cod liver oil should have this effect, but he had bought his knowledge by a very nasty experience, and he did not intend anyone else having the same experience if a word from him would be a deterrent. Mr. Hadwin was then asked the difference betwixt moulting colour-fed birds and non-fed ones, and said that the same conditions prevailed in each case, except that in the case of non-feds soft food was not required to any extent. He liked to feed his birds as dry and hard as possible. A very hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Hadwin brought a very interesting meeting to a close.

OUR POPULAR CANARIES.

By George Gardner.

A Lecture delivered before the Hanwell, Ealing and District Fanciers' Society.

Crestbred Plainheads should be a facsimile of the crested bird, save for the absence of crest, and the presence of a big head. I like to see a Crestbred that appears to be suffering from swelled head.

OTHER BRANCHES OF THE FANCY.

Do you breed Cinnamons? Then look well after purity of colour, beware of light throats and vents. Take care of the bold heads, and have their bodies as near the Norwich in type and as silky in feather as possible. If you breed Border Fancies, don't run away with the idea that they are Norwich, only smaller. Leave that to some of the "new men," who seem to think that a Norwich is a Crestbred, only less in size. Get a happy, beautiful feathered, sprightly, sweet and graceful, medium between a small Norwich and a small Yorkshire. Try and imagine the carriage of such a little go-between, as it goes from perch to perch, with its feathers fitting it like wax, and you have a Border Fancy. Can I tell you how to breed good Scots Fancies? Well, buy some good ones—if you can get them to part with any in Scotland. I have no time left to allude at length to these. But I will tell you that a good many Scots Fancy breeders have visited Belgian territory, and a good many Belgian breeders—(they are not legion)—show signs of a recent visit to Scotland. I may remind you that a Belgian does not need to rest its tail under the perch, nor a Scots Fancy to keep its tail straight and stiff.

DISCUSSION.

Questions were invited, and Mr. Robinson asked why Mr. Gardner had not recommended the introduction of Green blood into the Yorkshires as well as the Norwich? Mr. Gardner replied that he had so much to cram into one address that he was bound to let some points go. What applied to Norwich also applied to Yorkhires in respect to Green blood. It was as useful in the one as the other. Mr. Robinson wished to know whether Cinnamon blood did not produce better quality. Mr. Gardner replied that it depended upon the kind of Cinnamon used. There were regularly and carefully-bred strains of Cinnamon ticks, etc., bred in Yorkshire, and these, in the Buffs, were birds of beautiful bloomy feathers. In the Norwich, great care must be shown in the selection of Cinnamons to be used for the purpose. Mr. Smith asked which kinds of green food the lecturer recommended, and Mr. Gardner said he generally used watercress. Mr. Robinson said he used dandelion, and other members continued the discussion.

Mr. Robinson said that Mr. Gardner had alluded to a Yorkshire and the Belgian, and asked if the Belgian cross did not help the Yorkshire? Mr. Gardner replied that the Belgian cross, was all very well where a man had had experience and possessed the stock to experiment with. But with all repect to Mr. Robinson, he should not advise a small breeder, or a beginner, to dabble with the Belgian cross, when he could get the real article so easily.

A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Gardner, on the motion of Mr. Peet, seconded by Mr. Evans.

AUGUST NUMBER NOW OUT.

THE BORDER FANCY CANARY.

By J. Patterson.

Where birds have been perched, a little discretion and allowance should be made. If bred from good parents, they may be kept a little longer, as if they are not up to show standard, they are useful as stock birds. When pairing up birds one cannot be too careful on such an important point as the selection of the breeding pairs. I find it advisable to run them both together in a show cage just previous to making a final selection. You can pick out their faults better and see if they are counterbalancing any bad effect showing in either of them. For example, we will take say a clear yellow cock, with a nice small round head, fine neck, well filled back, wings laid on to perfection, light, compact tail, graceful type, and jaunty carriage, full breast, showing no frill, close fitting feathers on thighs and vent, and legs of nice length. We have here a bird which looks nearly perfect; but he may be a little washed-out in colour, his feather a little open and not fitting close enough, or he may carry his tail a little low and not in a straight line from rise on shoulder. Now we see wherein he fails, and look out for a partner, say a buff hen, which must be close, smooth, and of good quality of feather, with her tail carried straight out from her body, or if a little inclined to hold it up, so much the better to make up the deficiency of the cock. I believe in having the hen as perfect as possible. You get type, style, and general appearance from her more so than from the cock. Colour, size, and condition come from the cock bird.

STUDY THE STANDARD.

Always see that the blood of each pair blends, that your birds are breeding true to type, and up to the standard of the B.F.C.C., which is a rare guide, and if any of you should wish for a copy, just apply to our esteemed secretary, Mr. M. Jameson, of Hawick. You must also have a stud book, to mark in all faults and blemishes, the good points will speak for themselves, as they are firmly engraved on your memory. Have all your cages numbered correspondingly. A good egg holder is a "Bovril" box. In it you will find twelve divisions; number each same as stud book and breeding cages; fill up nearly to the top with bran. When your hen has laid her first egg take it away, substitute a dummy, and put the good egg in the compartment, same as your cage number, and so on with each egg, till she has laid her third, then set her. You cannot by this method mix your eggs or strain, if you work systematically. In case you have to shift your young ones, make a note in your stud book until such time as you can either number or take markings of the young. I believe in the system of only one hen for each cock, and where they agree, I never shift them until I take the young away, after having set the hen her second round, then I let the cock feed the brood, till they are a month old, when they should be able to do for themselves, if in proper health. I run the cock back beside his mate three days before the eggs are due to hatch. Should you see a pair of birds unfriendly towards each other, separate them after the hen has laid her third egg, and let her fetch up the brood herself. When the young are about thirty days old, I take the young away and introduce him again, as I find the Border Fancy is of a very determined nature, strong and active, and at the same time extremely spiteful. I have known cases where a season has been spoiled from a pitched battle between a pair of birds.

FOOD WHEN FEEDING.

Regarding feeding at this season. The best food is undoubtedly plain Canary seed of the finest quality, and a third of German rape added every alternate day. Give plenty of good shell, both from the sea shore, and from your kitchen, whilst a piece of cuttle-fish bone should be hung on the wires of cage. Some may need a little building up just previous to putting together. The best pick-up is either four or five drops of chemical food or two drops of Fellows' Compound Syrup. When paired up give each pair one teaspoonful of egg food, made with one egg to three Osborne biscuits, and to it add a teaspoonful of maw seed. After the hen has laid, a teaspoonful should be given once a week. Give one teaspoonful the night before they are due to hatch, after which it should be given fresh three times a day, increasing the quantity according to the number and size of brood. They should also have as much crushed hemp seed daily as they will eat. Green food twice daily; I prefer dandelion for the first round, lettuce for the second, and seeded weeds such as shepherd's purse, chickweed, etc., for my third round. Three rounds are plenty to take from a pair in a season if you want to show the old birds, and have a successful moult. I will conclude by stating how to avoid some of the ills, such as weakly youngsters, and sweating hens, and how to distinguish between them. Many hens are dubbed sweaters when in reality their young ones' bowels are out of order, and their excreta passed up among the hen's feathers. In cases of this kind a little arrowroot mixed with food and a few drops of Fellows' Syrup works wonders; on the other hand, where a hen becomes sickly, and sits too close, one teaspoonful of fluid magnesia in the drinking water often relieves her and saves the brood.

THE PROGRESS OF THE SCOTCH FANCY CANARY.

By Argyle.

The last clutch has been pretty successful, and now, with the glorious summer weather, the young are thriving, so that the outlook is very hopeful. Those who had only six and nine have reached 12, 20 and 30 young birds, and the quality is highly spoken of. Several unknown fanciers, if rumour is correct, are likely to be famous on the show bench. A decrease in quantity seems to have led to an improvement in the quality. Certainly the first meeting of young birds moulted, moulting, and first feathered will be of extraordinary interest. It will afford an opportunity to compare young champions in a way with which it is quite impossible to make a comparison by moving from house to house. In the latter case a vague and fanciful idea, as often as not erroneous, is carried away, and an unfair estimate formed.

QUALITY IN THE WEST.

In the West of Scotland fanciers have devoted themselves with great assiduity to the cultivation of quality, and they appear to have succeeded in a marvellous degree. Style and symmetery predominates, and with a healthy moult there should be a lot of very superior exhibits. Those that have passed into the moult are showing feathers right and left, and causing the owners of bird rooms to be active.

NOT AN EASY TASK.

It is no easy matter preparing a Scotch Fancy Don for the show bench. Being a bird of position, naturally a very little spoils him for exhibition purposes. A fright by a wild bird flying past the window, or a mouse scudding along the floor, may damage it for ever. Too fluffy feathers on the best-conditioned bird may end its whole chance of winning. True, these may be artificially assisted; but the moment a smart judge comes across it, relegated to the top shelf it will be, and we all know what that means to a champion's career—spotted for life. Coming back to the progess aspect.

A QUESTION OF LUCK.

The wheel of fortune moves round mysteriously. A couple of years ago a suburban fancier had over 40 young Scotch Fancy Canaries, and this year he commenced with brighter prospects than he did in 1905; but in 1907 he has finished up with a solitary young bird. He attributes his non-success to the weather, and just as the weather came round the turn his stock rushed into the moult. Hard lines! But he has the consolation of being possessed of meritorious pairs. Another who usually has 40 to 50 young birds in a season has got the length of 17. He can teach all his fellow fanciers. He seldom loses a bird, but in the early part of this season he lost a number of hens; one after the other dropped off, practically disabling him. But, not to be defeated, he has struggled on, and is likely to have over a score. A fancier who is highly respected has had family affliction, which was much against a full interest being taken in the stock; but he has done fairly well, having about 25. He has a good stock, of fine quality. A number have over 30, but, so far as I have been able to ascertain, no Scotch fancier has managed the 40. However, if a breeder can rear a score in a season, he may be considered successful in the common acceptance of the word success.

STRANGE HAPPENINGS.

Strange things happen in the breeding of Canaries. A fancier who had lost young through bad feeding had two pairs which had been previously tested; one fed surpassingly, and the other allowed the young to die. Both pairs started to nest, and were set within two days of each other. The bad feeder hatched one young, and gave every attention; the proved foster parents, a couple of days later, had the joy of hatching three young birds, and did splendid for eight days, when they ceased feeding. What was to be done had to be accomplished speedily, as the young were far spent. Two alternatives were in view—hand-feeding, or a transference to the bad feeders. The latter was adopted. Their own was a clear, and the others were dark. For a day their lives hung in the balance; one died, but the other two have done splendidly.

HOLIDAY TIME.

Fanciers have a deep-rooted conviction that birds with young must be supplied with fresh egg mixture three times daily. A fancier who has a well-regulated household, and where the better half looks after the welfare of the inmates, rationally insists upon the whole household having a change for a month. "Fatal to the birds," might be said; but no, the male members tour daily, and look in once a day; give a good supply of egg mixture and green food in the morning or forenoon, and they are left till next day about the same hour. With attention once a day the birds thrive better than when the family are at home, for they then often get more attention than is good for their well-being.

The Housing and Treatment of Foreign Birds in Captivity.

By WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

TANAGRIDÆ (Spindalis).—Of this genus I only know of one species having been imported alive to this country, and that only of fairly recent date; I think the winter of 1905 saw it for the first time on the show bench. It is local to the Antilees, and while the peculiar and sharply-defined markings of black and white on an orange ground impart to it a unique appearance for a Tanager, yet its form and structure are such that anyone acquainted with the genus Tanagra would at once recognise it as of very near affinity. It consists of six species: nigricephala, portoricensis, multicolor, pretrii, benedicti, and zena, only two of which are here fully described, the type nigricephala and zena being the only (I think) imported species.

Spindalis nigricephala Male. — The ground colour of its plumage is olive, deeply washed with yellow; head, wings, tail, throat, bill and feet, black; wing coverts mostly edged with white; large chinpatch, broad moustachal bands, white; under-surface, yellow deeply suffused with orange, washed with greenish on the lower abdomen and flanks; vential region, white. Total length 7 inches, of which the tail measures 3.

Female.—Is altogether more olive on the upper surface, with rump more yellow than the male; tail, blackish, lightly edged with olive-brown; throat, grey; middle of abdomen, white; parts undescribed similar to male, but less intense in colour. Habitat Jamaica.

S. portoricensis.—Smaller than nigricephala, being only 6 inches in length, of which the tail measures 2¼ inches. It may be distinguished from the preceding by an orange yellow nape, bright chestnut patches on band of wings, lower abdomen and ventral region white. The female may be distinguished by its greyish white under-surface, varied with blackish brown shaft streaks on breast and abdomen. Habitat, according to B.M.C., Porto Rica.

S. multicolor—The principal markings, which distinguish this species from its congeners, are, yellow nape, chestnut rump, and wing spot and yellow abdomen. Total length 6 inches, tail 2⅞ inches. The female lacks the above markings, the plumage above is olive, with under-surface of greyish-white; both above and below the plumage is more or less streaked with blackish-brown shaft streaks. Habitat, San Domingo (B.M.C.).

S. pretrii.— This, one of the finest of the genus, may be distinguished from its allies by its orange nape and rump, chestnut spot on bend of wing, broad white margins to wing coverts, and patch of same colour on primaries, and ruddy orange under surface; bill, horn colour; legs and feet, blackish brown. Total length, 5½ inches, tail 2⅝ inches. The female is dusky olive above, and white on the under-surface, suffused with olive on the breast and grey on the flanks. Habitat, Cuba (B.M.C.).

S. benedicti.— This specimen may be distinguished by its dark olive upper-surface and deep chestnut nape and rump, the chestnut spot on the bend of the wing is of a deeper hue, and chestnut breast. Total length, 6 inches, tail 2⅝ inches. Female: greyish olive, paler on the under-surface. Habitat, Cozumel Island, coast of Yucatan

S. Zena, Male.—Upper surface, mostly black; band on the nape and rump, rich chestnut; margins of wing coverts, secondaries and primaries, white; tail, black, tipped with white; chin and broad moustachal stripe, white; the centre of throat is yellow with broad black patches on either side; breast and abdomen yellow, merging into white on the lower abdomen and vential region, the upper breast is deeply suffused with rich chestnut; bill, horn colour; legs and feet, blackish-brown. Total length, 5⅞ inches, tail 2⅜ inches. Described from notes taken at Crystal Palace Show (Feb., 1907).

Female.—According to the Brit. Mus. Cat. she is olivaceous grey, wing and tail blackish-brown, with white edgings; under-surface paler, lower abdomen and under wing coverts, white. Habitat, Bahama Islands.

RHAMPHOCŒLUS.—This genus consists of 12 species, viz.: brasilius, dorsalis, nigrisgularis, dimidiatus, luciani, uropygialis, jacapa, atrosericeus, passerinii, flammigerus, chrysonotus, and icterenotus. The first-named (the type) being the well-known and beautiful Scarlet Tanager, which adorns the bird rooms and aviaries of so many bird lovers, and which has been bred on the Continent, while young have been hatched in the aviaries of Mrs. Johnstone and Mrs. Anningson in this country, in the latter case they lived to be a month old. This chapter on Tanagers is growing to such an inordinate length that I must perforce only describe one of each genus, and but faintly indicate the others. At least three of this genus has been imported alive to this country, one of which, jacapa has so far only been in the possession of the London Zoo. The following table should enable aviculturists to recognise the species.

Brasilius, dorsalis, and nigrigolaris have the whole of the head, neck, back, and under-surface, glossy scarlet; wings, tail, and thighs, black; dorsalis has the nape and upper back, purplish; nigrigolaris has the throat and middle of abdomen black.

Dimidiatus, luciana, and uropygalis have the head, neck, lower back, rump, upper tail coverts, and abdomen, glowing crimson, suffused with scarlet; middle of abdomen and thighs, black. Distinguishing features; Dimidiatus, back, dark crimson; luciana, back, black; uropygalis, back, brownish-black; rump and upper tail coverts intenso crimson.

Jacapa and atrosericeus have the upper surface glossy black; head, neck, breast, and upper abdomen, crimson-maroon; lower abdomen and vential region, black; the former may be distinguished by the crimson sheen on the black upper surface; the latter has the whole of the abdomen black, and is altogether a darker bird than the former.

Passerinii, flammigerus, chrysonotus-icteronotus, may be described as velvety black as to plumage; the first two have the lower back and upper tail coverts crimson; flammigerus being nearly an inch shorter than passerinii; chrysonotus has the lower back and upper tail coverts ruddy orange; icteronotus has the same parts canary yellow.

This fine genus cannot be left without an account of its type, the beautiful and gorgeous Scarlet Tanager.

R. brasilius—This fine species is one of the most freely imported of Tanagers, and is usually procurable at a reasonable price. It is a hardy species and can be kept out of doors all the year round, in any aviary providing adequate night shelter. Several aviculturists have come very near to success in rearing the young in captivity. In a Cambridgeshire aviary young were reared last year which lived to be a month old, when accidentally they were dragged from the nest by the female and killed. On the Continent they have been successfully bred and fully reared to maturity on several occasions. They are very pugnacious in a mixed series while nesting.

Adult male.—Its principal colour is rich glistening scarlet; wings, tail, and thighs, black; bill, black, with a silvery patch at base of lower mandible; legs and feet, blackish brown. Total length, 7½ inches, tail 3⅜ inches.

Adult female.—General body colour, ruddy-brown, strongly washed with rose-colour on the rump and abdomen. It is a native of South-East Brazil.

THE MAROON TANAGER (R. jacapa)—A very fine species which up to the present (June, 1907), has only been seen alive at the Zoo, but is now being offered for sale, but, owing to its rarity is commanding a high price. This species was first imported alive to this country by my esteemed friend and fellow aviculturist, Mr. E. W. Harper, in 1905, the first specimens being presented to the London Zoo.

Adult male.—Above, glistening velvety black, with a crimson sheen; head, neck, and breast, dark crimson-maroon; abdomen, black; bill, black, base of lower mandible silvery grey; legs and feet, blackish. Total length, 6½ inches, tail 2⅞ inches.

Adult Female—Uniform, blackish-brown, strongly marked with rose colour on sides of face and lower surface; bill, legs, and feet, deep brown. Habitat, Guiana, Venezuela, Trinidad, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Upper and Lower Amazonia, and Brazil. (B.M.C., Vol. XI.)

The Masked Tanager (R. nigrigulavis).—This species is very similar to R. brasilius, from which it may be readily distinguished by its black front, sides of head, and throat, and its slightly smaller size. Total length, 7 inches, tail 3½ inches. It is a native of Amazonia and Ecuador.

A CHAT ABOUT BIRDS.

Some Simple Facts for Students

Lecture by the Rev. K. A. Deakin, at the Redditch Institute, on February 11th, 1907.

FALSE IDEAS OF HARM.

And that brought him to another point; he meant the destruction, and—if some could have their way—the extermination of certain birds under a false idea of the harm they did.

With many men the very name of "Hawk" was enough to pronounce sentence of death upon the bird that bore it, but there was at least one Hawk that suffered undeservedly from the evil reputation that had been cast upon its family. He meant the Kestrel, whose prey consisted chiefly of mice; indeed, Montague said that he had never found any feathers in the stomach of this species. There was no doubt, however, that it did occasionally kill and devour small birds, and the young of larger species.

Possibly it might be a surprise to some to learn that this bird was very fond of beetles and their larvæ, and Selby recorded, on the authority of an eye-witness, the fact of a Kestrel hawking cockchafers late in the evening. The observer watched the bird through a glass, and (to use his own words) "Saw him dart through a swarm of the insects, seize one in each claw, and eat them while flying. He returned to the charge again and again. I ascertained it beyond a doubt, as I afterwards shot him."

One of the larger Hawks had obtained its name of "Honey Buzzard" from the fact of its being so fond of the larvæ of wasps and bees, whose nests it dug out for the sake of the immature young.

But even where harm may be done to the game preserver, it was not unmixed harm. The Merlin once so common there, was now, he believed, a rarity on the Yorkshire moors. It stood to sense that the first victims would be the weakly birds of a brood, and the result of upsetting what is called "the balance of Nature" by the destruction of Merlins and other so-called "vermin," had been the overstocking of some of the moors with Grouse, and the consequent introduction of disease, which in some seasons had done so much to spoil sport.

He said that the very name of "Hawk" was sometimes enough to condemn the bird bearing it; in some districts that very harmless, he would go farther, and say, that most useful, bird—the Goatsucker, went under the name of "Night Hawk" with the result he had seen the dead bodies of many of these birds adorning the "keeper's tree." He would plead, therefore, against the wholesale destruction of Hawks, but he would do so even more strongly against the destruction at all of Owls. Would that every game preserver would forbid his keepers to destroy them.

A VINDICATION OF THE OWL.

It was a very great pleasure to him to be able to say that he knew keepers of sufficient enlightenment to know that Owls did them no harm, and who did not kill them down; but there was still a great amount of unreasonable prejudice against these most useful and interesting birds. Yet the proof of their usefulness was based on uncontrovertible evidence.

At the beginning of that paper he had spoken of the pellets cast up by the birds of prey, consisting of the fur, feathers, bones, and indigestible parts of their victims. During the meeting of the German Ornithologists' Society in 1862, the following results of an investigation of the food of three of our commonest Owls were communicated by Dr. Altum: In the case of the Tawny Owl he examined 210 pellets, and found them to contain the remains of six rats, 42 mice, 296 field mice, 33 shrews, 48 moles, 18 birds (one Tree-Creeper, one Yellow Bunting, one Wagtail, 15 small species undetermined), and 48 beetles, besides a countless number of cockchafers. In 25 pellets of the Long-Eared Owl he found the remains of six mice, 35 field mice, and two birds (both being species of Titmice). In the case of the Barn Owl he examined 706 pellets and found the remains of 16 bats, three rats, 237 mice, 693 field mice, 1,590 shrews, 22 birds (19 Sparrows, one Greenfinch, two Swifts). He (Mr. Deakin) need say no more to prove, not the harmlessness, but the usefulness of Owls, and the worse than folly of those who would try to exterminate them.

THE CASE OF THE HERON.

Now he came to a bird which, possibly, might not be in very good odour with many Redditch people. He had a sort of idea that if Redditch men were not actually born with a fishing-rod in their hand, they yet came into the world with an instinct that enabled them to use to good purpose. Now the unfortunate thing that when a man was very fond of any particular sport he was very apt to look upon anything which at all interfered with it as being an unmitigated evil, without stopping to think that it might be a source of pleasure to others. So it came about some fishermen would willingly see the last Heron destroyed. Of course they all knew that a Heron did consume a considerable amount of fish, but it was a great mistake to suppose that it fed on fish only, for frogs, rats, fresh water mussels, and even water beetles and worms, were freely taken by it.

THE ETHICS OF "SPORT."

The damage that a Heron did fish was small compared with that which a fox did among Pheasants, but the one was to be preserved, the other destroyed, because the pursuit and killing of one afforded sport; the other, nowadays did not. He could not say that the doctrine that God's creatures exist only that the killing of them may afford us amusement commended itself to him. He did not want to run down sport. If he could afford it, and had the opportunity he should still enjoy a day in the stubbles, or the coverts, or a good day's fishing as much as anybody. He was always glad when he could get a look at hounds, and a bit of a run with them—even though it were but on foot—but he should be truly sorry if his sport were to be purchased at the expense of the pleasure of others, who derived their pleasure from seeing God's creatures in the full enjoyment of their life and liberty, instead of in the glass cases of museums.

They could not all afford the pleasures of shooting or fishing, and he felt very strongly that those who could should not try to do so at the expense of their less fortunate brethren. When he lived in a neighbourhood where Herons were uncommon, he had often walked several miles on the chance of seeing one, and even now, when he could see them any day he chose, the sight of them gave him keen pleasure. He knew from the remarks of many of his friends, when he took them for a walk round the reservoirs, that he was only one of a great many who feel such pleasure. Perhaps he ought almost to apologise for having said so much about Herons, but it had been to him a source of very great pain and regret to hear fishermen speak almost as if these beautiful birds had no right to the life which God had given them, because they sustain that life by taking a few fish which might otherwise have fallen victims to their skill.

WILD BIRD NOTES AND QUERIES.

The Flight of the Starling.

The common starling is remarkably strong upon the wing, his flight is direct and rapid, his boat-shaped body appearing the ideal shape for cleaving the air. He is much more swift than one would imagine. The best time to note this is when a pair of old birds have to forage some distance from the nest, the flight is then perfectly straight and arrow-like, and is performed as rapidly as possible. In one of Jefferies' books he says, "A black line has rushed up from the espalier apple yonder to the housetop thirty times at least. The starlings fly so swiftly and so straight that they seem to leave a black line along the air. They have a nest in the roof, they are to and from it and the meadow the entire day, from dawn till eve."

A Four-Storeyed Nest.

An extraordinary nest, built in "four storeys," was recently placed in the Chicago Field Museum. It represents the efforts of the American Yellow Warbler to evade hatching eggs of the Cow-bird, the Cuckoo of America. It is suggested that each successive storey of the nest represents the efforts of the Warbler not to sit on the eggs of the Cow-bird. The lowest stage is lined with wool, and contains three Warblers' and one Cow-bird's eggs. Unwilling to accept the strange egg, the Warbler roofed over the first nest with twigs, but before it could line this second nest another Cow-bird's egg was laid in it. Again the Warbler made a roof of twigs, and again the Cow-bird intruded. Four times in all the move and counter-move were made, and at last the Warbler seems to have abandoned the duel.

The Swallows, Martins and Swift.

The Summer has been cold, and one wonders if the swallows and swifts have found any shortage(in insect life. Many insects are undoubtedly tender, and exist only for a brief period. Has this brief period been curtailed in consequence of unfavourable climatic conditions? If so, have the birds of flight suffered in consequence? Few of us are able to realize the usefulness of these birds, they feed exclusively upon winged life, destroying daily thousands of insects that would injure our fruits, and vegetables, and annoy us every hour of the day. These beautiful birds need nothing from man, excepting the protection we are so slow to give them, they destroy nothing that is of any value to us. Beyond the good they do, no birds afford us greater pleasure; to watch their aerial evolutions is recreation and rest, for they are not difficult to find, their cheerful twitter can be heard daily around the house.

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor for the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers. In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words, MINIMUM Fourpence. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6, according to size.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL. Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

HYGIENE OF BIRD KEEPING.

By W. GKO. CRESWELL, M.D., L.R.C.P., F.Z.S.

Price 1/1, post free from CAGE BIRDS Offices,

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

LANCET: "This little book will be welcomed by all lovers of birds, whether ornithologists, aviculturists, or the owners of a single pet songster. The author deals with his subject in a thoroughly practical and scientific manner, and the results of his experiments prove the fallacy of some rule-of-thumb theories. . . . The book is well illustrated."

COUNTRY LIFE: " . . . a surprising amount of really valuable advice for all who keep small birds, whether in cages or aviaries. . . . Those who approach the subject with an open mind must admit the cogency of the author's arguments; and these, backed by a very wide experience at first hand, will prove hard nuts to crack for many of the champions of the 'good old methods.' . . . We venture to think that his experience will pave the way for a revolution in the methods of bird keeping in the near future."

F. CARL, 154, FLEET STREET, LONDON, E.C.

THE GREAT POINT

In buying birds is to get the best possible value for money. When buying from me there can be no doubt as to the value, as I send everything on approval entirely at my own risk, and refund money in full unless purchaser is fully satisfied. Grand large Worcestershire cock Goldfinches, warranted in perfect health and feather, 1/6 each, three 4/-, six 6/6, or 12/- dozen. Specially selected large cocks, to moult for exhibition, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-, or 16/- dozen. Two-year-old cock Goldfinch, used as call bird, 3/-. Hen Goldfinches, 1/- each, three 2/-. Warranted cock brown Linnets, in perfect health, three 1/6, six 2/6, or 4/- dozen. Hen Linnets, 1/- dozen. Cock Greenfinches, three 1/-. Cock Chaffinches, 9d. each, three 2/-. Young cock Bullfinches, 1/- and 1/6 each. Two-year-old hand-reared cock Bullfinch, finger-tame, and full song, 3/-. Cock Larks, in nest feather, 1/- and 1/6 each. Hand-reared Merlin Hawks (very rare), cocks or hens, in splendid plumage, 5/- each. Self-acting spring net traps (nearly 2,000 sold last year), 24 in. long 1/- each, 18 in. long 9d. each. Self-setting and self-acting trap cages, 1/6 each. Single trap cages, 6d. each; double ditto, 10d. and 1/- each; treble ditto, 1/3 each; all with separate compartment for call bird. Round or square-topped call cages, 3d. each, 2/6 dozen, 27/- gross. Linnet or Goldfinch cages, 6d. each, 4/6 dozen. Real Japanese birdlime, absolutely strongest made, and only lime to stand all weathers, ¼ lb. 6d., ½ lb. 10d., 1 lb. 1/6, sample 3d., all packed in air-tight tins and sent post free. Loose netting, for all kinds bird nets, ¾ in. mesh, 7 ft. deep, 3d. yard; 9 ft. deep, 4d. yard; 12 ft. deep, 5d. yard, post free. This netting is guaranteed genuine thread, and actual measurement is guaranteed to every customer. Clap nets, 3 yards long, 4/- pair, 4 yards 5/-, 5 yards 6/-, 6 yards 7/-, 7 yards 8/-, 8 yards 9/-, 9 yards 10/-, 10 yards 11/-; all 4 ft. deep, made from ¾ in. thread netting and fitted complete with hemp lines, pegs, poles, etc., all ready for immediate setting. Full list of all catching appliances, one stamp. Every description of net kept in stock or made to order from the old-fashioned cod net to the latest fly net. All nets are made by men who are not only practical net makers, but have had a thorough experience in bird catching as well, and so know exactly what is required for the purpose. All the leading catchers are now using nets supplied by me. For months and months last season I publicly asked everybody that was not well pleased with my catching appliances to smash them up, and I would refund every penny of their money, but not one article was broken; this fact alone speaks volumes. All birds sent out are guaranteed exactly as represented, and are well on hard seed. I claim to be the originator of approval system in connection with wild birds, and during the whole 16 years I have been trading have never done business on any other terms. For genuine Worcestershire netted birds I solicit one trial, and ask to be judged by result. Kindly note address; by far the largest and only centrally situated bird stores in Birmingham—

A Real Live Question.

IS IT A BIRD YOU WANT?

If so, I will tell you what I am prepared to do. I have a large number of 1907 Birds and the Cocks are not yet in full song, but still I am prepared to guarantee the sex, and should by any chance the Bird not prove to be a Cock I will exchange any time between now and January 1st, 1908.

My Offer means that I will return your cash or send you a satisfactory Bird if the one sent fails to please.

1907 Birds.—Pure prize-bred Yorkshire Cocks, 4/-, 4/6, 5/6, 7/6, and 8/6; Hens, 2/-, 2/6, and 3/6; Pairs (Cock and Hen), 5/6, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, and 10/6. Travelling Cages are charged for, 3d. extra.

All Birds sent out for Cocks bear my stamp, which is my guarantee of sex, and all Birds bearing such stamp will be exchanged any time between now and January 1st, 1908. The above terms are an absolute safeguard against the well-known Hen Trick practised by others.

Yorkshire Cocks for the early shows at reasonable prices. All other Birds on my usual approval terms.

For full detailed Bird Price List send postcard, or on receipt of two penny stamps to cover postage, I will send my 100 page Catalogue, full of useful information, and should be in every birdroom.

No show secretary should be without this invaluable index to exhibitors all over the country. If any section be weak, reference to the Register of Wins will immediately enable a whip up to be sent.

"I have received the ANNUAL (part 2), with thanks. It might well have been called "Cage Birds Directory." There is no doubt it will be very useful in this way, comprising, as it does, the names and addresses of almost every exhibitor of cage birds of any note. It will also be very useful to fanciers when they are purchasing stock. They can see at a glance whether the advertiser has done any winning with his birds, and in this way save the cost of part 2 many times over.—THOS. ROBSON, 41, Shield-st., Newcastle-on-Tyne."

Parts 1 & 2 of "Cage Birds Annual" complete for 1/3, post free. If you have already ordered Part I. from us, send us 9d. and we will post you on Part II.

CLUB REPORTS.

LANCASHIRE C.A.

A large number of members were present at Rochdale O.C. on August 10th, when Mr. Nadin presided. Several applications for patronage were gone into, and the list of supported shows are as follows: — Manchester, Rochdale Town Hall, Oldham, Rochdale Good Intent, Littleboro', Middleton, Crystal Palace. Several classes are also guaranteed at some of the above shows. The standard show cage was next on agenda, and the decision of the majority of the members was to abandon the idea until next year. It was resolved that we accept Messrs. Entwistle, Walton, and Whitehead members of this assoc. Any other fancier wishing to join, kindly write to Secretary, who will give all particulars.—JAS. LAW, hon. sec., Merefield, Rochdale.

BRADFORD EAST O.S.

Mr. G. R. Rushworth gave an interesting paper which took the form of a debate at the meeting on August 6th. He dwelt on that all-absorbing topic, "Moulting and Colour Feeding of Canaries," one of the greatest obstacles in the whole art of Canary breeding. Dealing with it in a masterly manner throughout, it was only natural that the discussion should fall a bit flat, as he left very little ground uncovered. Nevertheless, many wrinkles were learnt from the questions that were asked, and a very enjoyable and instructive evening was thus spent. It was decided by the members to have a trip to Crystal Palace at the next show, and about 14 names were given in, a kind of money club being formed, so that each member can put in what he chooses every week or month.—H. HILL, hon. sec.

ORMSKIRK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

One of the most harmonious meetings held in connection with the above society took place at headquarters on Aug. 6th. The secretary presented balance-sheet up to July 31st, which showed a balance to the credit of the society of nearly £3, much satisfaction was expressed at same. The payment of prize-money won at recent Young Bird Show was made, the chairman congratulating the members on their first venture, and an honorarium was granted to the secretary for his services in connection with the show. A suggestion of holding an open show was deferred till next meeting. One new member was proposed and accepted, and our host (Mr. Stockley) promised another substantial special for next show. No doubt the preponderance of "small lemons" contributed largely to the conviviality of the meeting. T. H. TIFFIN, hon. sec.

ATTERCLIFFE AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

On August 8th at the Horse and Jockey Hotel, Attercliffe, Mr. Browning, of Rotherham gave his promised lecture on colour feeding and preparing for exhibition. Mr. Browning, who is a past-master at lecturing, gave all members present a lot of useful hints on the art of colour feeding, which were highly appreciated by all who heard the lecture. Afterwards a lot of questions were asked, and Mr. Browning answered them all to the best of his ability. Mr. Browning also promised us a lecture on breeding, early next year. The Chairman ended the meeting by proposing a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Browning, bringing a very enjoyable night to a close, the time passing all too quickly.—W. RICHINSON, secretary.

NATIONAL BRITISH B. AND M.C.

Committee meeting held at headquarters, "The Napier," High Holborn, July 25th. Present: Mr. Robson (chairman), Messrs. Maxwell, Weston, Dewhurst, Silver, Goodchild, Cooper, Trower, Barker, Hathaway, Plumbridge, and Carr. Letters were read from Mrs. Soames, Miss Reeves, Messrs. Francis, Dale, Payne, Alloway, Walsh, and Bradford, B. B. and M. C. Proposed by Mr. Cooper, seconded by Mr. Dewhurst, that the kind invitation from Miss Reeves to visit Wateringbury Hall to inspect her aviaries be accepted, and that Thursday, Aug. 1st, be the date for the visit. A number of applications for the club's patronage were read, and the following shows were granted support:—Dulwich and Peckham, Newcastle, Western Counties, Manchester, Wellingborough, Blackburn, Welsh National, Leeds, Cambridgeshire, Nottingham, Derby, Carlisle, Gateshead, Great National (Crystal Palace). The allotment of medals for the Scottish National, and the Club Show to be held in conjunction with the L.C.B.A. Show, was postponed until next meeting. After some discussion it was proposed by Mr. Hathaway, seconded by Mr. Dewhurst, and carried, that the suggestion of running a club journal be abandoned, as the finance of the club would not stand the outlay. It was decided not to hold a meeting in August on account of the holidays. PLUMBRIDGE and CARR, hon. secs.

CITY OF HULL C.B.S.

Meeting held Aug. 8th, when there was a very poor attendance to hear a lecture on the Norwich Canary by the Chairman (Mr. D. Hope), but owing to the smallness of the meeting (only eight present), the lecture was not given. It is a great pity more members were not there, as most of them are continually pleading for more lectures and discussions. Various instructive subjects were discussed—one, namely, "Champion and Novice." Messrs. Hope and Pepper pleaded for more of our members to go into the open classes, and not remain in the novice classes. They expressed in very forcible terms that members had birds which would bring them some small amount of fame if they would only enter in open classes at the various shows. They also gave some very instructive ideas about purchasing and selling stock birds. These matters were very ably discussed by the members present, and no doubt much good will accrue from the remarks. The chairman was asked his opinion of iron for fixing colour when colour feeding. He said he was in favour of burnt water, which contained a large amount of iron, and which he always gave to all his birds when feeding, when colour feeding, and at other times, as he did not believe in pure water from the tap, as it was too hard. No doubt other members will be trying burnt water after this. Mr. Oliver then introduced the proposed visit to Manchester show, as it seems to have nearly dropped through, but the majority present hoped it would still go on, and be a success. It was proposed that all members going should arrange in good time, and also arrange to have breakfast together on arrival at Manchester. It is hoped we shall have sufficient members to engage a saloon. A letter was read from T. R. Ferens, Esq., M.P., signifying that he would be pleased to open our annual show on Nov. 22nd. We hope to have a few more of Hull's popular citizens present, to show their appreciation and sympathy with the efforts of working men who are interested and engaged in the study of bird life.

GEO. W. OLIVER,

SOUTH-WEST LONDON C.B.S.

Meeting, August 8th. Mr. House gave a lecture, the subject of which was a very appropriate one at the present time of the year, viz., "The Preparing for Moult in Birds," and all present must have been repaid for their attendance, as not only was the subject dealt with in exceedingly interesting one, but it was intelligibly expounded by the lecturer. A volley of questions were asked, but all were readily answered, and much valuable information obtained. The meeting closed with a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. House for his kindness, with the hope that he would at some future time again honour the society.—W. LILLEY, hon. sec.

YORKSHIRE C.C. OF IRELAND.

Committee meeting held at Dublin, 8th inst., when nearly all the Dublin members attended. Mr. Devitt in the chair. It was unanimously agreed to give the patronage of the club to the Ulster Ornithological Association Show, to be held on 6th and 7th Dec. next. Mr. A. Wellings, judge. It was agreed that the club take the Antiquarian Hall to hold open show on 28th and 29th Nov. next. It was proposed and passed in order that the members might know at the beginning of the show season to what shows they would have to send their birds competing for cups, that all societies wishing for the club's patronage should make application for same before 1st Oct. next. The patronage has already been given to Lurgan and Belfast. The following gentlemen were admitted as members, Messrs. McArdle, McKeown, Dullaghan, McKittrick, Duffy and Coyne, all of Dundalk, Co. Louth, and Messrs. Grey and Meehan, of Drogheda, Co. Louth, Messrs. Farrell, Fry, and Huggard were nominated to look for a suitable room, for committee, and to report at next meeting. The following resolution from the Y.C.C. of England was before the meeting, and same was adopted unanimously. The members were of opinion that some such thing would be of great service to the several clubs. Resolution: "That we, the members of the Y.C.C., herewith ask the Y.C.C. of I., in conjunction with ourselves to confirm, endorse, and report to each other all or any fraudulent action or malpractice exercised by any member or members of the above Y.C. Clubs, as fanciers on the show bench. Any such exhibitor being found guilty shall not be allowed until such time as the sentence has been removed, and that each Y.C.C. as aforesaid do respect and confirm the sentence passed upon any such guilty exhibitor." W. C. SHOLEDICE, hon. sec.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Meeting, Monday, August 12th, but again members were denied the pleasure of witnessing the "Cage Making Demonstration," by Mr. A. W. Curtis, by reason of his continued illness, this being now his sixth week of confinement to bed. Sympathy with him was expressed on all sides. Messrs. W. H. Mugford, H. Hawes, and J. Murray, were elected, and Messrs. R. S. Hamlin and F. Moore, were nominated for membership. Mr. L. Daintry tendered his resignation, which drew forth from the Chairman, a tribute of the high esteem in which he was held, and of the many unostentatious services he had rendered to the Association. A vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. W. Prance for painting done. The quarterly statement of accounts showing a cash balance of £25 8s. 10d., was confirmed as read. Three cups and the remainder of the medals won at the recent Y.B.S. were presented by the chairman, and the magnificent solid silver "Mayfair Challenge Cup," weighing 24½ ozs., just presented by Mr. F. Curry for the British seed-eating section, was handed round for general inspection. With the addition of three classes, last year's schedule was adopted for this year's annual show. Messrs. J. Mackley and J. Robson (Canaries), and Messrs. C. Prior and G. E. Weston (British), were elected to be submitted to a final vote. Report of council meeting, re proposed Federation of London Societies, was read, and the chairman (Mr. A. C. Burn), moved a resolution, viz., "That the C. and S. are in favour of establishing a Federation of Societies in London and District, and joining the same," which was carried. The chairman further moved that 2/6 be granted from the funds for the preliminary expenses, which was also carried. Messrs. Crisp and A. C. Burn, as delegates, were unanimously elected. V. WYNN, hon. sec.

THE SHOWS.

LEICESTER HAND-IN-HAND.

Leicester Hand-in-Hand C.B.S. held their annual First Feather Show at the Hare and Pheasant, High Street, Mr. E. Fox (Long Eaton) officiating. Entries were down, owing, no doubt, to the lateness of breeding season. Some very promising young Norwich were shown. Specials were won by Messrs. Walton and Noakes, Needham, Smith, Kilsby and Boulter.

BUDE.

A nice little show of cage birds was held at Bude on Bank Holiday. There was a magnificent attendance, the gate totalling over £160. The entry was not fairly large, and some most excellent birds were staged. Messrs. Fairchild and Petherick made a most admirable pair of secretaries, and they, with Mr. Bridgman, treasurer, form a trio of officials which it would be bad to beat. They were assisted by a splendid staff of stewards, and everything went as merrily as wedding bells. Mr. J. Rushmore judged, and his awards were well received.

NOR. (5): 1, Collins, very shapely, nice quality buff; 2, Davey, capital yellow, nice colour and type; 3, Heard. CREST, 1, 2, Davies, just a nice pair. YORKS. DOWNEND.

This fixture was held Aug. 6th, and there was a large turn out of visitors. A fine collection of birds were on view, amongst them being some very promising youngsters. The quality all round was exceedingly good, and in several classes the competition was very keen. The officials are to be heartily congratulated, and we hope the gate proved a good one, as the Downend fanciers did their utmost to make the fixture a great success. Messrs. Pearse and Rathbone made a good pair of secretaries. Mr. W. G. Bull judged. NOR. (11): 1, 2, 3, Brown, former capital shape, good fronted buff, capital chest and back, small head; 2nd, 3rd, nice quality, good size, and shape, not so chubby or tight in feather, very neat and smart throughout; 4, Tristern, charming yellow, pretty head, good chest and back for a yellow, grand carriage; vhc, Taylor, hc, Houghton. YORKS.: 1, 2, Andrews and Biss, good buff leading, nice feather and stand, neat head, wings and tail, yellow; 2nd of equal merit, nice style and finish; 3, 4, Morgan, a couple of good quality buffs, grand colour, very stylish, worthy of their place; hc, Roberts, Garland; c, Barry. A.O.V. (2): 2, Hinds, Crestbred, evenly-marked eyes and wings, good feather, fair skull, and in nice form; 3, Tristern, colour fed, dark crest, neatly shaped, not very massive in body; vhc, Roberts. PETERHEAD C.B.S.

This enterprising society's annual show of Canaries in the Town Hall, August 9th and 10th, proved to be the best yet held. It was encouraging to note the advancement made by the fanciers in this district since last year, both in numbers and quality, and also the way they turned the exhibits out. They were staged to perfection. Mr. Jack, who was in charge of the Cage Bird Department had everything in tip-top order, Mr. Clark Martin carried out the secretarial duties in a very able manner. Hyde's special was gained by Mr. James Morrice, with a lovely exhibit of good type and quality. Mr. Cameron gained the special for most points, and specials were also secured by Messrs. Clark and Fraser. Mr. John Lyon (Aberdeen) made the awards.

YELL.: 1, Clark, grand bird of type and quality, and good size; 2, Morrice, another good one, marked wing and eyes; 3, Wilson, A.1 quality and grand type, wants a feather or two in tail which told against it. BUFF: 1, Morrice, a bird of grand substance and quality wins; 2, Connon, also good type, but just a wee bit on the small side; 3, Thomson, tip-top quality and lovely staged, broken in tail, HENS YELL.: 1, Colin Cameron, a clinking good hen, smooth as wax. NAT. BUFF COCK: 1, Fraser, gem of the first water; 2, J. Morrice presses winner, a bird of grand type and teeming in quality; 3, Jack, good quality and type, but started to moult. BUFF HEN: 1, Cameron, very sweet and staged to perfection. YELL. COCK NAT.: 1, Cameron, not a bad one, just a little on the long side; 2, Jack, will make a good one, but moulting; 3, Adams Maud, good quality of feather. BUFF HENS NAT.: 1, Cameron, a clear of grand quality and fine texture of feather; 2, Clark, run the winner hard; 3, Wilson, marked wings and eyes, nicely put down. CRESTS: 1, 2, 3, Sim, good team. GREEN CANARY: 1, Connon. CLASS 314: 1, Clark, nice yellow, good type and grand quality of feather; 2, 3, A. Clark, both buff. GREENFINCH: 1, Cameron. 1907 YELL.: 1, 2, Cameron, nice style and both good quality; 3, Morrice, cap and wing marked, good head and neck, and nice carried wings. HENS: 1, Cameron, as tight as wax; 2, Morrice, staged in the pink of condition; 3, Sim. BUFF: 1, Fraser, a gem, grand head and neck, fine rounded body and A. 1 quality; 2, Wilson, not so good in quality as winner; 3, Cameron. HENS: 1, Clark, a beauty, just wants a little more time, should be heard of again; 2, Morrice; 3, Cameron.

EXETER AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

The final of the series of First Feather shows was held at the Oddfellows' Hall. The exhibits staged very favourably impressed the members, who were elated at the quality of the birds. Mr. J. Lashbrook (Sidmouth) judged in a highly satisfactory manner, his experience and abilities as a Canary breeder serving him in good stead. Mr. H. Denham was successful in winning the Cup, brass inkstand, and hall brush and glass, and Messrs. Evins Bros., a copper vase, the Cup winner scoring 116 points, and show points 31, 37, 45. NOR. YELL.: 1, Hutchings. CREST A.V.: 1, 2, Evins Bros., two gems, leader, clear body, dark crest, nice centre and droop, will make a clinker with a good moult; 2, variegated, larger body, plenty of feather, nice crest; 3, H. Denham, fair size, neat crest; 4, Miss French, small crest, neat. BUFF: 1, Hutchings, clear, nice shaped, short Bullfinch type, well carried wings and tail; 2, Sloman, marked on back, a good second; 3, Sloman, again marked, nice head and back; 4, Denham. CRESTBRED: 1, 2, 4, Evins Bros; first, variegated, large, well-made body, plenty of feather, nicely browed; second, clear, again a bouncing bird, not so large, but a lovely head, well feathered; 3, Denham, again heavy variegated, nice body, feathers; 4, fair bird, nice class. YORKS. YELL.: grand class; 1, Churchward, smart upstanding, clear, well on leg, nice clean feathers, well braced wings, in grand condition; 2, Sercombe, smart bird, nicely drawn, stands like a soldier, with a good moult will take some stopping; 3, Williams, nice and racy, well braced, nice condition; 4, James Stone. BUFF: 1, Stiling, clear, nice stand, smart, clean chest, grand head and back, a bonny bird; 2, Williams, marked on back, slim, well drawn wings and tail well braced; 3, Sloman, again a marked bird, a long raking upstanding fellow; 4, Williams, another smart bird, nice class. A.O.V.: 1, Denham, Lizard, well-pencilled all through, nice exhibit; 2, Sloman, Cinnamon, nice even colour; 3, Joe Stone, Scotch, nice reach; 4, Denham, nice Lizard, very nice class. MULES (All Goldfinch and Canary): 1, James Stone, good dark, fair size, nice even colour all through, will make a nice bird; 2, Joe Stone, a variegated light, fair exhibit; 3, Denham, decent colour; 4, Chudley and Son, fair colour. GOLDFINCHES: 1, Commins, nice blaze, good chestnut and wings; 2, Denham, fair bird. A.V. BRIT.: 1, Smith, good Crossbill in pink of condition; 2, R. Chudley, Bramble-finch, nice colour chest and head; 3, Denham, Bullfinch, very steady; 4, Williams, Chaffinch, good bird, nicely marked.—R. H. Folley, hon. sec.

DAWLEY.

The above fixture, held in connection with the Horticultural Show, took place on Aug. 7th. Cage birds totalled 88 in the 10 classes provided, which, considering the time of year, must be counted a success. The four open classes, while not being over strong numerically, were certainly not lacking in quality, especially the British class. The locals turned up in strong force, and some very useful birds were among them which would have held their own in the open classes. The hon. secs., Messrs. Bowen and Smith, were most obliging, and are to be congratulated upon the success which met their untiring efforts. Mr. J. N. Harrison placed the cards. NORWICH (5): 1 and spl., 2, Brotherhood, leader a ticked Yell., an old winner, good type colour and quality, not quite ready; 2nd a very fine clear yellow youngster, in neat feather, big bold bird, grand type and substance, very promising; 3, Moss, nice quality clear buff hen, good shape, trifle browed; vhc and hc, Potter and Bracey. YORKS. (5): 1, spl. and 2, Horne, young Yellow, nice length and quality, bit soft; 2nd better shape and feather, we preferred to 1st; 3rd, vhc, hc, Johnson, rather stoutly built buff, moulty. MULE OR HYBRID (5): 1, spl., and 2, Moss, variegated buff Gold-Canary, rare size, nice flush and lovely quality, in good trim, 2nd of the same persuasion, loses a little in size and quality, still a good one; 3, hc, Pierce, buff Gold-Canary, ticked on neck and wing, very taking exhibit, just a bit small, moulty, will improve; vhc, Horne, dark Linet-Mule, good size, rough in feather. BRIT. (7): 1, spl. and 2, Brotherhood, leader a charming Waxwing, well marked, in lovely condition, much admired; 2nd very fine Nightingale, good size and colour, steady, in perfect feather; 3, vhc, Potter and Bracey, very nice Greenfinch, good size, colour and condition; vhc, Tate, nice young trecereeper; vhc (2), Jones and Bradley, well-known Gale, and a good Blackcap in nice feather, a really grand class for quality. If the committee another year could see their way to divide this class into Hard-bill and Soft-bill, it would be much appreciated, as it is rather rough on such birds as Treecreepers, Nightingales, and Blackcaps, to be placed behind a Greenfinch, however good it may be, at the same time it is equally hard on really good Hardbills to have but a small chance of getting to the front, when pitted against these delicate Soft-bills. LOCAL NOR. (15): 1 and spl., Miss Thompson, really good ticked Buff, nice type, colour and quality; 2nd, hc, Callear, Variegated Yellow, good shape and colour, nice quality and condition, loses wing carriage; 3, Brewster, clear Yellow, good size, bit long; vhc (2), Bailey. YORKS. (13): 1, spl., hc, Brewster, ticked Yellow, nice type and position, well drawn, good quality, bit patchy; 2, Clayton, variegated Buff, nice length, bit open on breast; 3, Willians, decent Yellow, loose in feather; vhc, Thompson, grand quality Buff, nice type and style, bit moulty in neck, might have gone up; hc, Cosfield. GOLDFINCH (12): 1 and spl., Westbrook, fair Finch, good size and wing bars, blaze bit pale; 2, Bailey, smaller, better blaze, moulty; 3, Clarke, nice Finch, good square blaze, wings bit frayed, rather unsteady; vhc, Hyde, Williams, Callear, Griffiths. BULLFINCH (8): 1 and spl., Callear, fair size, good back colour and cap, bit pale on breast, nice condition; 2, Jones, trifle larger than 1st, open in feather; 3, Buttery, fair shape, dull in colour; vhc, Barker; hc, Edwards. BRIT. A.O.V.: 1, spl., 3, Mrs. Green, both Song Thrushes, good size, nicely marked, steady and in nice order, little to choose between them; 2, hc, Butler, fair Bramble, decent size, nicely broken, pale in colour; vhc, Thompson, Edwards; hc, Edwards, Harris Buttery. MULE (6): 1, spl., Butler, Buff Gold-Canary, hen, clear, except for tick over eye, small, in poor feather; 2, Callear, another Buff Gold-Canary, marked eyes and wings, larger and feather, must have pressed hard; 3, Davies, good dark Gold-Canary nice flush, vhc, Edwards; hc, Jones.

MELBOURNE.

The Melbourne (Derby) fanciers held a nice little table show of Yorkshire Canaries, etc., on the lawn of Mr. W. Singleton (son of the Rev. Canon Singleton, vicar of Melbourne), on Aug. 10th. The weather was simply A1, and there was a fair attendance of fanciers present. There were some good specimens of the Yorkshire variety shown by Messrs. E. Spencer, G. York, H. Wall, J. Pass ,and Andrews, but owing to the advanced state of the moulting season some of the best birds were somewhat ragged in plumage, and consequently cardless. A silver medal given by Mr. Singleton for the best yellow Yorkshire was won by Mr. E. Spencer, an electro-plated butter knife for the best buff falling to Mr. Geo. York. A vote of thanks was proposed to Mr. and Mrs. Singleton for their kindness, and Mr. Singleton, in reply, hoped all had enjoyed the afternoon, and trusted that it would not be the last, for he and his good lady would be ever ready to advance interest in the fancy, and good feeling amongst the fanciers of Melbourne.

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE CANARY CLUB.

The First Feather Show in connection with the above club was held in the cloak room adjoining the large hall in the Co-operative Buildings, Newgate Street, Newcastle-on-Tyne, on August 3rd. It was voted by all a decided success, for in spite of the lateness of the season, and the poor results some of the members have had, we had an entry of forty-seven birds in five classes. Not only were the numbers good, but the quality was quite an eye opener to many who were present. The Yorkshire Canary has now become an established variety in the North-Eastern corner of England, and it is becoming so without doing it at the expense of the other varieties, for most of the members are new hands at Canary breeding; indeed, if the Northern shows were only to cater for the novice a bit more, all but six of the members would be able to compete in the Novice Section. But the Northerner takes a lot to move him out of his old grooves, and rather than induce new beginners to take an interest in showing their birds in a section, in which they can compete with some fairness to themselves, compels them to show against all the champions of years and years standing. The principal objection I find uttered, is that Novice classes open out the road for fraud. But if the Cage Bird Union fulfils its duties, this objection should then be swept away. The champions will have to drop their dog in the manger style, and give the novice a fair chance to show in his own proper place. The hall was a very suitable one, its only drawback was that it was rather difficult to find. Once in the room, however, all was comfortable, well-lighted, and warm. The birds were well looked after by members of the Committee, including Messrs. J. Slack (Chairman), Robson, Carr, Shepherd, Davison, as well as some outside help from those two stalwart Norwich fanciers, Messrs. McGuiness and Scott. Most of the prominent local fanciers were present at one time or another, and all seemed more than pleased with the show and the exhibits. The Committee were very fortunate to secure the services of Mr. Fred Armstrong, of Halifax (until lately secretary of the Yorkshire Union) as judge. A more pleasing gentleman, and more conscientious in placing the awards, it would be difficult to imagine, and I predict that if his duties will allow of it, it will not be long ere we see his name amongst the more prominent Yorkshire judges. No one could have taken more pains or given greater all round satisfaction than he.

CLEAR YELLOW (9): An exceptionally good class. 1st, Ellwood, a good type of Yorkshire, wins easily, nice shooting bird, capital position, good pipe tail and splendid feather; 2nd, O'Neal, nice typical Yorkshire, good feather, rather smaller than first; 3rd, "Keppie" Robson, runs second very close, and might have passed, but was breaking into moult, might have been a bit better in position; 4th, Slack, a nice typical bird, looks like a hen, a bit "slack" in neck; vhc, Crawhall, nice bird, lacks training; hc, c, Taylor, a pair not to be despised, should moult out well, get them used to the show cage, Mr. T. BUFF (17): This class was an eye opener, and two sets of winners could easily have been chosen; 1, O'Neal, nice typical Yorksbire, good feather, wins on condition; 2, Kent, real good bird, runs first very closely, slightly broken in moult; 3, Ellwood, nice shape and feather, loses only to others in size; 4, O'Neal, nice shape, lacks position and training; vhc, Crawhall, the best feathered bird in class, unfortunately very unsteady whilst judging, wants some training, then should render an account of itself; hc, O'Neal, another good bird; c, Carr, another fine bird, just a bit young, but should improve greatly. TKD. ETC., YELL. (8): 1, O'Neal, a splendid bird, should be heard of again, nice typical shape, good feather and tail; 2, Slack, a good bird, only wants a moult to make it one of the best; 3, Davison, another fine young bird, showing real Yorkie properties, Mr. Davison is to be congratulated upon the excellence of his birds generally; 4, vhc, hc, Crawhall, a big bird, rather too big and heavy for show, but will make an excellent stock bird; vhc, a nice tidy yellow hen, requires some training; hc, rather young, a bit slack in feather. BUFF (9): This class contained some really fine birds which will no doubt render an account of themselves in the Autumn shows; 1, Davison wins, a typical buff, good feather, wings, and tail, splendid position and in tip-top condition; 2, Harrison, a good Yorkie, only beaten for size, nice position, style and feather; 3, O'Neal, a nice uneven marked Buff, good style and feather, shade small; 4, Steele, a nice typed bird, presses to third very closely; vhc, Steele, another nice bird; hc, O'Neal, like the doctor's usual, a real nice bird; c, Slack, some thought this bird should have been a bit higher, and friend Slack predicts great things for it in the future. A.O.V.: This class contained four nice Cinnamon ticked birds; 1, 3, 4, Steele, first a nice bird, wins on substance, third, looses a bit in style, fourth close up; 2, Ellwood, stylish wing ticked, a trifle thin in neck. The special for best bird in show was won by Mr. J. Davison with his buff bird, a bird which is just slightly ticked above the beak, and which came in for a lot of praise from the judge. It wins on condition, and was so closely pressed by Mr. Ellwood's Clear Yellow that the judge at once gave a special for second best bird; had this bird not been breaking into moult, it would undoubtedly have been first. These two Blaydon fanciers, who have taken so much interest in the club since its formation, are certainly to be congratulated upon breeding two such birds, and it is to be hoped they will have a tight tussel for the Cup, when competed for at the Autumn show. During the evening the judge gave a little criticism of the birds, there would be some thirty or forty fanciers present, and all seemed to be very interested in his remarks. He said he was very pleased to see so many fanciers present, and to observe the friendly spirit evinced by one and all. He was also very pleased to see such a fine collection of Yorkshires before him, considering this was the first year of the club, and seeing they had practically virgin soil on which to work, they had done excellently. The great fault seemed to be lack of size. When compared with the two chief winners many of the others failed in size. These two birds, the Clear Yellow and the Ticked Buff were real typical birds, and nearest to the size for which they should aim, of course, we cannot all breed good ones, some are fortunate to get a good strain and start well from the first. If we take the two first birds, they are the most typical birds in the show, and some might differ with him in the manner of placing them. The Yellow bird was rather longer and slimmer, and probably the more typical of the two, but being an older bird it was not in the condition that the Buff was, and condition is a great thing. Taking two other birds, Mr. Armstrong showed where they failed to these two. One Mr. Crawhall's Clear Buff, vhc, was a bird which Mr. A. liked very much, but it was of a nervous disposition and would not stand, consequently had to take a back seat. Another bird, Mr. Slack's Buff hen was a real nice hen, but being shown against cocks had not the same chance, and was a trifle thin in neck, but may moult out fuller. Other birds were discussed, and then questions were asked. The first question was in answer to Mr. Crawhall, who enquired if the judge thought that the Yellow bird would tighten up under the tail where it showed great slackness? Mr. Armstrong thought it would. The bird was dropping into moult, and did not show to its full advantage. The next question asked was how many points were lost by a bird which crossed its wings? Mr. Armstrong said five points on wings, but a bird which crossed its wings lost on body and quality too, so that you could not guage on wings alone. Next question by "Kepple." Do you believe in a training cage? Mr. A.—Yes, I do. I generally make my own. They are a little wider and higher than an ordinary Yorkshire show cage, wooden sides and back, wire front, and made in pairs, with perches the same way on as a show cage, the bird is then always facing you at a nice height above the top perch, so that it can nicely draw itself up. I have a little peep hole, with a piece of glass in, then the birds in the opposite compartments draw themselves up to say "how do you do." but the glass prevents their fighting and plucking each others heads. Mr. Robson said he had one of Mr. Jonas Knight's training cages, which were on the same principle as Mr. Armstrong's, but without the glass, and he found it very useful in pulling the birds into position. Other questions were asked and ably answered by the judge, and everyone went home very pleased with the show and themselves. A very pleasing feature was the presence of the Gateshead, Newcastle, and Jarrow Secretaries, by whom we were congratulated upon the excellence of the show. Mr. Carrick from Jarrow, who is just recovering from a broken wrist, in course of conversation, told me that out of their newly-formed society with some forty members, that fully three parts of them bred Yorkies. Now Jarrow, buck up and join the N.Y.C.C., which will help you all it can to bring the Yorkshire to the forefront, and to give you some excellent helps to breed and show some winners.—T. C. Crawhall, hon. sec.

RUNCORN.

This annual young Open Show was held in conjunction with the Poultry and Horticultural Show in spacious canvas tents on the Plantation Pleasure Grounds, Higher Runcorn, on August 10th. The Show was in every way a success, and all round an increased entry was secured. The quality in the Cage Bird Section was of very high all round merit, and very close competition resulted. A splendid silver challenge cup for best members' young bird was captured by a very smart stylish var. yellow Yorkshire belonging to Mr. F. Ditchfield. It well deserved the honour, being a most typical specimen, in lovely feather, and showing for all it was worth. The management here is of the best and exhibits and exhibitors receive the best of treatment and careful attention. The birds are well looked after, and fanciers may with confidence send again to this show. The stewards and treasurer and secretaries are prompt in action and get through their work with quick despatch. Mr. Chas. Houlton judged and the awards gave general satisfaction. Held under C.B.U. rules. YORKS. YELL.: 1 and Challenge Cup for best members' young bird; vhc, Ditchfield, var., a grand medium sized all round typical Yorks., good style and position, well up, neat wings and tail, wins well; vhc, ticked neck, a big bird, coarser on sides; 2, Hall, cinn. marked, ticked head, AI drawn out, lovely quality of feather and grand condition; 3, Rowe, clear, not so well drawn out, but very fine quality and finish; hc, Marsh; c, Boote. BUFF: 1, c, Ditchfield, very fine upstanding bird, lovely back and quality of feather, just big enough, and full enough round thighs, a promising stock bird; 2, vhc, Hall, slimmer, and higher on legs, grand style and feather, a little more finish might have done the trick; 3, Boote, ticked neck and wiug, grand feather, well filled up, wee bit short of condition to get higher; vhc, a pale bird, but lovely feather; hc, Rowe. NOR. YELL.: 1, Jacks, grand head, buck and chest, a clear, nice size, rare colour and quality of feather; 2, hc, Guy, very chubby var. bird, profuse feather, big bird, in nice condition; 3, c, Barker, a var., very fine bird, lovely quality of feather, colour and condition; vhc, Boote, clear, rather smaller than first, but good in all other points; a stiff class. BUFF: 1, Boote, ticked eye, compact shape, good size, rare feather and condition; 2, Jacks, tick on head, fine head, neat body, nice bloom and quality, fair size; 3, hc, Guy, grand body, very young, a very likely winner, when old enough; vhc, Hall, grand quality of feather, medium size, too young to be at its best yet; c, Andrews. NOR. GREEN, BUFF: 1, Barker, very chubby body, foul green, great size, nice soft tone of colour, and well huffed; 2, Andrews, bit smaller, but all other points very good; 3, Jacks, a bit behind in feather and finish; No. 4 was made out a yellow by the judge, also by most fanciers present. The Yellow class was cancelled, and maybe the owner thought it might be allowed to go in with the buffs; it is a very good medium size Yellow. HYBRID: 1, Bowyer, a Yellow Var. Gold-Canary, old bird, grand size, colour and quality; 2, same owner, entered as a young clear Canary hybrid., was passed as a small Yorks. Canary, and we could not make it out to be any other. SELLING 10/6: 1, Boote, very cheap Yell. Yorks.; 2, Jacks, good Norwich; 3, Rowe, a Yorks.; vhc, Marsh; hc, Tyron. BRITISH GOLDFINCH: 1, Bowyer, a well-known winner in grand order to-day, get him into moult at once, Mr. B., if you want to be ready for winter shows; 3, Walker, well-heaten in size, still a good young Finch, and time will greatly improve him; LINNET: 2, Murray, gone a bit into moult, good size colour, shape and markings; 3, Walker, nice size and markings, paler a little in colour. A.O.V. BRIT.: 1, Murray, a very nice medium sized, good shaped Bullfinch, a cage moulted bird in full colour and condition; 2, 3, Hampson, grand Siskin, and very nice coloured Chaffinch in good form. SMALL FOR.: 1, 2, 3, Cooke, 1st a grand pair of Budgerigars, 2nd a good pair of blackheaded Nuns, very rich colour; 3rd, a very pretty Zosterops, a bit off in left wing or might have won. NOVICE YORKS: A fine class of good Novice birds; 1, Little, very fine clear Yell., grand length, well up on legs, clean through and straight as a pencil, rare size for a Yellow; 2, hc, Ditchfield, a var. Yell., grand quality and good shape, size, etc., but just beaten in condition; 3rd, c, Rowe, fine drawn ,a clear, well up on legs, in tight condition, bit flatter on head than 2nd; vhc, Hall, good typical bird, and runs well up to former. NOR.: 1, Hall, a clear, capital size and shape, young enough, will soon with luck develop into a very smart bird, wins well; 2, hc, Green, ticked on eye, smaller, but nice Nor. type, quality and condition; 3, Lea, a useful young clear, grand quality and of medium size; vhc, Rowe, rather longer in type, nice quality. HYDES' CLASS (6): Winner, Boote, with a useful Norwich. Cup winner, F. Ditchfield.

WATFORD.

The First Feather Show of the Watford C.B.S. was held on July 27th. Taking the show right through, the entry came up to the average in this season of poor entries. Watford breeders, like others, have not had too many of fortune's favours this season, so far as numbers are concerned, but the quality in some of the rooms is pretty good, and this was to be seen in the exhibits staged in many of the classes. Yorkshires were a warm lot, and a few good back-end winners should be found amongst the youngsters who toed the mark on this occasion. Norwich, also, were of nice quality, but the great interest of the show lay in the British section; here the competition was most keen, and it must have been a matter of some difficulty for the judge to separate some of the contestants. The birds were nicely staged, and their comfort well looked after by the committee. Messrs. Watts and Quintrell, the hon. secs., attended well to their duties, and everything pased off smoothly and pleasantly. Mr. J. Robson judged in his usual painstaking manner. NOR. HORFIELD.

This show was held on August 7th, and proved very successful. Taking the entries throughout, they constituted a record. In our section the classification was considerably cut down to the year previous, the Committee knowing full well the difficulty experienced in getting entries for a summer show. The exhibits throughout were full of quality, amongst them being one or two Palace winners, which were looking a trifle overshown. The birds were nicely staged in a separate tent away from all other live stock exhibits. Mr. J. Carnew had charge of the section, and the birds received every attention. There was a record attendance. Mr. C. P. Telling judged.

CREST, ETC. (9): 1, Richards, clear Buff, massive skull, rare quality of feathers, nice size, very badly shown; 2, Ind, not quite so broad in skull, well-shaped, nicely feathered very close up; 3, Tristem, colour-fed dark crest, well built and neat; 4, Gough, good broad-skulled green, well-shaped and clothed; vhc, Hinds, rather narrow in entrance, not far behind in quality; hc, Roberts, wins special for best young crest, neat crest, nice centre, fair size. NOR. TKD. ETC.: 1, spl, Tristem, a yellow grand colour and quality, beautifully fed, nice head, good carriage, showing just a wee bit more thigh than we like; 2, Brown, looks like the novice, Palace winner, not at his best to-day, good shape, nice head and neck; 3, Taylor, a very nice yellow, good type, neat head and quality, fair carriage, in good trim; 4, vhc, Brown, we liked much for its body shape, wants another head and neck to make it typical, nevertheless a smart exhibit; hc, c, Fowler. YORKS. CLEAR: 1, 2, also special for best Canary in show, Andrews and Biss, both very typical well-drawn birds, leader, a buff, has the pull in length, just a bit rough in flights, should improve, stands on good legs and teeming with quality; 3, Barry, looked a bit rough in feather, but very good stamp, nice length, we heard had already won several prizes; 4, Newman, good length and style for a baby; vhc, Bishop, little to choose for third honours; hc, Roberts; c, Newman. GOLD. OR BULLFINCH (8): 1, Lovell, splendid-bodied Bullfinch, good colour and lustre, grand cap, very taking exhibit; 2, Bull, lovely clear coloured Goldfinch, grand face, good size, nice tanning; 3, Baker a Goldfinch beautiful wing markings, perhaps hardly so deep in tanning, chubby and shapely; 4, Rowe and Hancock; hc, Richards; c, Hinds. SELL. 10/-(8) :1, 2, Gough; 3, vhc, hc, Carnew; 4, Lovell. LOCAL except Yorks; 1, spl, Carnew; 2, Chesterman; absent binding. YORKS.: 1, spl, Carnew; 2, 3, Barry; 4, Richings. BRIT.: 1, 2, Pyatt; 3, spl, Smith.

WEST OF SCOTLAND B.A.

The usual monthly meeting and First Feather show of Mules and Hybrids was held on August 3rd, in Nelson's Hotel, Glasgow, Mr. A. Buchanan, vice-president in the chair. Mr. H. Liddle, a new member was proposed and accepted. It was agreed to revise the schedule at next meeting. The show of young mules and hybrids was then proceeded with, and the birds were judged by Mr. A. Muir.

DARK MULES: 1, 2, 3, 4, A. Buchanan; 5, 6, Hunter. LIGHT MULES: 1, Hunter. HYBRIDS: 1, 2, Buchanan. Mr. J. Brownter won the medal for most points, Mr. A. Buchanan, special 2nd, Mr. J. Renwick special 3rd, Mr. C. Campbell and Mr. J. McNicol tied for the 4th special.—Geo. Smart, secretary.

LARGS.

The 28th Annual Exhibition of the Largs Ornithological Society was held on August 10th, in the Artillery Hall. There was a fair entry, and a good number visited the Show in the afternoon. Mr. Jos. OUR FRONTISPIECE.

The Rare Redpoll-Bullfinch Hybrid.

With reference to the cock and hen Redpoll-Bullfinch Hybrids depicted on our front page this week, Mr. Dixon, the well-known Wigton Hybrid breeder, favour us with the appended account for their hatching and rearing. The female, we may say, was drawn from life by our Mr. Norman, and the male from the skin, it unfortunately having died, yet surviving long enough to show that it was a grand example of the cross. We are indebted to Mr. Dixon for his courtesy in this matter.

"The two Redpoll-Bullfinch Hybrids were bred by me in a small flight cage. I put round the nest a little heather and a few privet twigs. The hen soon started to build, and laid five eggs, which I let her sit herself. She brought out two young ones on the 22nd of May. As soon as they hatched, I gave them to a Norwich hen which was due to hatch at the same time, but had all her eggs clear. She came in very handy, and started to feed one of the Hybrids almost immediately. But strange to say she would not feed the other, so I just had to tuck in and rear it myself, which I did until it was a fortnight old. The Greenfinch which was paired to the Norwich hen then took it off my hands and fed it splendidly. While the foster parents were rearing the young Hybrids, I gave them plenty of green food. I always keep a good stock of wild seeds by me for the winter, especially Dandelion, and what we call 'Horse-hops.' These two I consider the best of all wild seeds."

JOHN DIXON.

WILD BIRDS PROTECTION ACT.

Proof of Publication not Essential to Prosecution.

In Duncan v. Knill and Another (Divisional Court, April 22nd), respondents were charged with having in their possession certain Goldfinches which had been taken contrary to the Wild Birds Protection Acts, 1880-1902. The prosecution was taken under an Order of the Secretary of State, which prohibited the taking of certain wild birds, including Goldfinches, during the period of the year to which the Act of 1880 did not apply. Section 4 of the Act of 1894 provides that any Order under the Acts shall be properly published by the County Council, and in this case it was contended that in the absence of proof of publication there was no power to convict. The Justices dismissed the case, but the Divisional Court sent it back, holding that there was nothing in Section 4 to justify the contention that absence of proof of publication of an Order was any bar to prosecution.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

THE YOUNG NATURALIST.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given for respectively the best and two second best cuttings of original bits about birds. Competitors must be children under sixteen years of age. All efforts must be briefly and clearly written, and ON ONE SIDE OF THE PAPER ONLY.

Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

Peter felt very proud that day, and Kitty jumped for joy, although she was just a trifle disappointed that not one of the four young birds was pure white like their mother. Indeed, they were all much darker even than Bumbuku-Chagama, being chocolate-coloured where he was fawn. At first the parents continued to feed the young ones at intervals, although they could feed themselves quite well. But very soon the old birds wanted to nest again, and as the young ones got in the way, and broke the eggs by sitting on them all together, Peter and Kitty agreed that it would be better to give them away. Their friend Charlie had one pair, and the other they presented to the daughter of their drawing-mistress, who had a sunny room devoted entirely to Canaries and other birds. Snow-white and Bumbuku attained to the age of at least nine years, though they led busy lives, making so many nests and laying such quantities of eggs that at last Peter quite lost count of the number of children they reared.

*Magpie and Washerwoman.

Some time ago a neighbour of our's had a tame Magpie, which was a terror to all the washerwomen for some distance round its home, for as sure as the clothes were hung up on the line, Meg would he waiting somewhere near in a tree, and as soon as the woman had gone away, Mag would fly down on to the line and try to pull out the pegs and peck holes in the clothes and paddle all over them with its dirty feet. My mother has had to wash her clothes several times; Meg would watch for the woman coming and then fly away chattering and grumbling when they drove her off, but as soon as the woman was gone away she would be doing the same trick again. She must have been killed, as we have not seen her for several weeks.—Sent by Ruby Keeling (aged 8), Matlock Cliff, Near Matlock, Derbyshire.

*A Frozen Siskin.

Last winter a Siskin had been sitting overnight on a large iron window rod, which by arrangement serves as a perch in the aviary. It was a very severe frost, and the Siskin was nearly dead. Several of its back feathers were frozen to the iron bar above (white with rind), as when the bird got off the feathers were left. Father took it and held it in his warm hands, and then put it into a cozy cage and covered it over. It was not brought down to the fire, but left in the cold room. Next day it was quite well again, as if nothing had happened. This shows what a hardy bird the Siskin must be. This bird has been with us five years. It feeds from father's hands.—Sent by Alexander Newbigin (age 13), 69, Percy Road, Whitley Bay.

*Love for "Little Mary."

This year my mother reared five young Pullfinches and she fed them on hard-boiled eggs and hemp-seed, chopped up together. One day, when they could peck, my mother was putting some food into the cage, and two of them got out and flew out of the window. They flew about for some time while mother tried several ways to get them back into the house. Mother then took the board and knife outside and began to chop as if chopping their food up. They flew down and settled on the board and mother carried them into the house and put them safely back into the cage.—A. E. King (age 10 years), Church Street, Wilbarston, near Market Harborough.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL

Price ONE SHILLING. Post Free 1/2.

Superbly illustrated by the Champion Canary Artist Mr. H. NORMAN. EVERY BIRD DEPICTED IS A VERITABLE MODEL, and shows the breeder what to aim for. Some idea of the popularity of this Practical Manual may be gathered from the fact that under the title of "The British Canary," it has passed its Third Edition, entering upon a Fourth Edition of 5,000 copies under the new title of "HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL." MR. HOUSE has thoroughly revised and brought this work up-to-date and incorporated a chapter on the "Roller or Singing Canary."

The Zoo's Fishing Cormorants.

After delighting visitors to Earl's Court by their nightly display of agile skill, the fishing Cormorants have arrived at the Zoo, says the "Evening News," but the custodians of the Regent's Park menagerie are already asking themselves the pertinent question: What is to be done with them? The only reason for the existence of a fishing Cormorant is fishing, and where, in all the broad acres of the gardens can these Cormorants fish? They will not eat nuts like the monkeys. They will not eat buns like the bears. They will not munch sweets like the elephants. But every child who goes through the turnstiles will want them to do something. Children, it must also be remembered, are the mainstay of the public patronage at the Zoo during this period of the year. And children, seeing the fishing Cormorants, will want to see them fish. That is where the authorities realise the pinch. To put them in with the sea lions is possible, but their fishing instincts might seriously interfere with the sea lions at meal times. The polar bear might welcome them as a variation to his diet, but they would scarcely be at home with him. The Zoo must build a new tank—it will add to the charm of the gardens.

Mr. J. J. Mullett, the Secretary of the Dudley and District C.B.S. has removed to 5, New Rowley-road, Dudley.

A new secretary has been elected for Otley and District O.S., Mr. W. Dawson, 36, Albion Street, Leeds Road, Otley.

I won the challenge cup for best British Goldfinch at Cambridge Mammoth Show writes Mr. ALF. ROWLES (Peterborough).

The open show of the Castle Douglas Fanciers Associations is fixed for November 30, writes Mr. John C. Burnie, the secretary.

Otley and District O.S. Annual Show will be held on Oct. 19th, in the Recreation Hall, Otley. The judge is Mr. W. Mundell (Bradford).

Your reporter, writes Mr. A. A. Pool, junr., only credits me with first in natural colour Norwich, whereas I won first and second at Brislington, with two clear yellows.

Our Hon. President, Grant Barclay, Esq., has very generously presented a cup to be competed for in the Border Fancy Section in our open show on October 12th, writes Mr. C. Muir, the Secretary of Broughty Ferry C.B.S.

Mr. J. T. Carrick, Hon. Secretary of Jarrow-on-Tyne C.B.S, who had an accident to his wrist, is getting on nicely now and he will soon be able to attend to business again. He thanks all kind friends for enquiries and sympathies.

I beg to thank you for the pleasant surprise last week in seeing my young bird so cleverly depicted in CAGE BIRDS. I nearly lost him after the show, but he is now all right and getting well away with the moult. G. F. WOOLHOUSE (Dulwich).

This year we held our show on Wednesday, August 7. We had more entries than ever, thanks to the circulation of CAGE BIRDS. We had a class for local Goldfinches and Bullfinches, and they were well filled, in addition to the other classes. U. CALLEAR (Dawley).

All members and friends of the Shipley O.S. are invited to meet at Shipley Station on Sunday, August 18, at 10.15 a.m., writes Mr. H. Dobson, the Sec. Book for Ben Rhydding for a ramble round Denton Park and Asquith. Dinner at Black Horse, Asquith.

The judges for the cagebird section of the Kilsyth Fanciers Association show on 14th December are, we hear, Messrs. E. Campbell (Glasgey), Norwich and Mules; and Mr. G. Hyslop (Stirling), Border Fancies. The Border Fancy Club has accorded Kilsyth its patronage and a Club special.

I am sure CAGE BIRDS is a very valuable paper, and I have always recommended it to all my friends. This is my first year of breeding, but thanks to your valuable paper I have had some very good luck—13 young out of 17 eggs is not so bad. I wish "C.B." every success.—J. E. MOUSLEY (Dordon).

A Scottish reader sends a few words in praise of our valuable paper. Through CAGE BIRDS, says he, I have saved many a valuable bird by reading the query columns. It is not many months since I started taking CAGE BIRDS, but since then seven of my fellow-workmen get it as well. R. GRIFFITHS (Bannockburn).

On August 7th Mr. J. Beswick, of Stockport, lectured to our members on the Norwich Plainhead, writes Mr. S. M.Clayton, hon. sec. Rochdale Good Intent C.B.S., and dealt at length with matching, breeding, rearing, and moulting, advocating the use of the green blood, and recommending in-breeding to establish certain points. A good discussion followed, questions being asked by several members, Mr. Beswick suitably replying. A vote of thanks to Mr. Beswick ended one of the most pleasant evenings we have had.

The list of judges for the City of Glasgow O.S. show to be held 18 and 19 October next is now complete, writes Messrs. McDonald and Muir, the secs., and is as follows: Scotch Fancy, the secs., and as follow: Scotch Fancy, Messrs. John Smith (Hawood), A. Nisbet Thompson (Glasgow), John Park (Govan), and George Fulton (Partick); Belgians, Mr. John Kean (Edinburgh); Norwich Plainhead, Mr. Alex. M. Farlane (Glasgow); Crests, Mr. John Donald (Aberdeen); Borders, Messrs. D. Hamilton (Hamilton), and McCreadie (Dumfries); British and Foreign, Messrs. A. R. Langlands (Montrose), and Taylor (Greenock).

A Chance to Secure Five Shillings.

We have during the past few weeks had the pleasure of returning to numbers of readers the money they sent us for copies of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, in accordance with our sporting offer. It has now occurred to us that in place of a bound volume of the "Bird World Magazine" the few fanciers who have not availed themselves of the ANNUAL might like the chances of securing the accumulated discount attaching to the receipt by us of fifty orders for the ANNUAL. To the sender of every fiftieth order in future from this date till further notice we will give five shillings cash. But the coupon and remittance and full address must be enclosed. See coupon on foot of page 89.

An Opportunity for Exhibitors.

Entries, we understand, are deplorably short for Kingswood show on August 21st. And no wonder for the show up to the present has not been advertised in CAGE BIRDS, a contemporary getting all the spoil (25s.) owing to ignorance of cage bird matters on the part of the executive. The Secretary now at the last moment makes a frantic appeal to our readers to help him out of his difficulty. The show is under Union rules, the judge is Mr. W. H. Manley, and the secretary Mr. S. Hill, 2, Downend-road, Kingswood, Bristol, who will accept entries if sent to-day (Saturday). There are 11 classes: Nor., York, A.O.V. and For., 1 each; Members, 3; Brit., 4. Prizes, 10s., 6s., 4s. Fee, 1s. 6d., members 1s. Our friends will oblige us by showing Mr. Hill where to advertise in future. Late entries coming through our paper will be entitled to compete for a very handsome framed plate; other exhibitors ineligible.

OBITUARY.

MR. W. MALCOLM.

Fanciers throughout the country will be sorry to hear of the death of Mr. William Malcolm, late of Leven, which took place at Stirling on July 20th last. He was well-known to all of us as a real honest and upright fancier and exhibitor. As a judge he had few equals, and while acting as such he had favours to bestow on no one; every exhibit had to win on its own merits. He was a man whom it was a pleasure to meet and discuss the Scots Fancy. The writer had the pleasure of knowing him well for nearly twenty years, and during that time had many a pleasant chat with him. But now, alas, he has gone from amongst us, and our sympathy goes out to his sorrowing widow and family in their sore bereavement.

CHAS. BERWICK.

MR. JOHN McCLURE.

Mr. Thomas Smith, of Glasgow, writes:—It is with the profoundest regret I have to announce to your wide circle of friends the falling asleep of Mr. John McClure, son of Mr. Mr. McClure, 105, Somerville-drive, Mount Florida, Glasgow. Mr. McClure was by trade an engineer and, shortly after completing his apprenticeship, on the advice of his medical adviser, he abandoned work for a time and went to the famous health resort, Carmumock, and latterly to Englesham, which seemed to have the desired effect, but on the 11th instant he had an attack of hemorrhage, which was repeated on the Tuesday, and he passed peacefully away at 2 p.m. on the 9th August. In the morning of life his evening came and removed from fond parents a devoted and dutiful son. Mr. and Mrs. McClure did everything within their power to prolong his stay, but God, in His infinite providence, decreed it otherwise, and now they are called upon to say, "Thy Will be Done." They retain many pleasant memories of his sojourn with them, and they have the sincere sympathies of a very large circle of friends—weekly readers of your extensively circulated publication.

Our Fanciers' Map

We are now busy preparing our Map of Shows for the season 1907-8, and consequently we advise all those committees who have not fixed their date to do so at once, guarantee to spend at least 25s, with us in advertising the event, when we shall have much pleasure in including their event on our map, which shows at a glance the days when shows are held, and the exact locality. This map goes to every exhibitor of cage birds in the country, free of cost, and is consequently a magnificent advertisement for all shows appearing on it. Over 115 of the leading shows appear at present. Early application is necessary.

A London Novice.

After careful deliberation by the City and Suburban A.C.B. Council, writes Mr. V. Wynn, the hon. sec., No. 15, definition of a London Novice, in an amended form, was at the last meeting recommended to the members, who were so unanimously agreed in adopting it, that a motion by myself to submit it to a vote of the whole of the members was defeated. The full text of the amended definition was as follows:—(A) A novice is one who has not won a first prize at three different shows in Novice Members Classes. (B) An amateur is one who has won a first prize at three separate shows in Novice Members' Classes, and ceases to be such when he has won a first prize at three separate shows in Amateur Members' Classes. (C) A champion is one who has won a first prize at three separate shows in Amateur Members' Classes, or three first prizes in Open Novice Classes, or one first prize in open Competition. Limit classes of over £3 shall be considered Open classes."

REMARKABLE OFFER TO CANARY FANCIERS.

1,000 cwts. of Canary grit to be given away. To every purchaser of 1 cwt. of Canary seed during July and August, we will give 1 cwt. of our celebrated Health Grit, absolutely free. Giant Spanish Canary, 24s. per cwt.; No. 2 ditto, 22s.; Turkish, 14s.; all treble screened and free from dust. Sample on application, carriage paid; cash with order.—John Dobb, seed importer, 31 and 33, White Abbey-road, Bradford. Telephone 247x.—Advt.

The well-known fancier, Mr. E. E. Smith, is down to judge British and Foreign Birds at Sheffield show.

We understand that Miss Darrel, daughter of Sir Lioncl Darrel, Bart., is one of the latest recruits to the bird-keeping hobby.

"I grow all kinds of berries," says a correspondent, "and I never saw a Robin attacking them; he is too fond of worms and snails, and many a time I have seen him with a good-sized caterpillar in his bill."

The City and Suburban A.C.B. has had another silver cup presented to it (making a total of thirteen) for competition among the members. The donor is Mr. W. Shepherd, who has left the section the trophy shall go to, to the discretion of the Council.

We regret to hear of the continued indisposition of Mr. A. W. Curtis, his trouble having assumed a serious form, giving grave anxiety to his family. The many metropolitan friends of this good fancier will join with us in the hope that better news may soon be forthcoming.

Messrs. Payne and Wallace, of the Little Zoo, Bath, writes us that they have secured at specially advantageous rates a large consignment of flint grit. This they are offering in our advertisement columns at a very low price, which should meet the requirements of fanciers of all classes.

A splendid opportunity is afforded exhibitors, tradesmen, and others, for advertising in the schedule and catalogue of the Dulwich and Peckham great show; 5s. per page is the price, and breeder's cards are inserted for the small sum of one shilling.—Apply early to to Show Manager, 22, St. 'Aidan's-road, East Dulwich. (ADVT.)

Fanciers desirous of colour feeding their birds fit for the show bench, must use Ramsden's pure peppers; they are pure, and impart a marvellous colour and sheen to the birds. Australian fanciers can obtain Ramsden's Pure Peppers from Messrs. Elliott Bros, of Sydney, and Messrs. Felton Grimwade, of Melbourne.—(ADVT.)

It seems to me, writes Harry Allen (Leeds), that your valuable paper CAGE BIRDS, has found its way into every town and country, no matter how large or small. I have had orders from America through it, and last week I had an order from New Zealand for one of my Linnets. The bird is being taken by a London gentleman who is making a trip to New Zealand. I must say CAGE BIRDS is a valuable advertising paper, as I get handfulls of letters every day in reply to my advertisement, and advertise in no other.

The Proposed London Federation

If all one hears be true, the proposed federation of London Societies would seem to be a distinctly ambitious scheme having many points in common with the Yorkshire Union of C.B.S. The suggested subscription, we understand is eightpence per head for every member of a federated society. The scheme includes the holding of a show every week-end at the headquarters of one or other of the federated societies (this not to interfere with the said society's other fixtures), the judges for the same being different every time, and balloted for. The judge's fees are to be paid by the Federation, which also provides gold and silver medals for competition. In addition the Federation proposes promoting one gigantic show annually, open to "all the world," each affiliated society, we presume, participating in any profit, and sharing any loss. Many minor matters are included in the "prospectus," so to speak. The promoters are actively pushing the scheme, and it will be interesting to see what reception the proposed combine meets with at the hands of societies concerned—i.e., those in the Metropolitan police area.

A PRIZE COMPETITION FOR KEEPERS OF FOREIGN BIRDS.

Cash in Exchange for your Experiences.

Turn Spare Moments to Account.

In our position as Editor of this Journal, it has been borne in on us that keepers of Foreign birds are either singularly modest, or singularly reticent. Not a line does one receive from the great majority of them concerning their experiences in their own particular branch of our hobby. This is not as it should be. It affords no encouragement to others to take up the keeping of the beautiful and interesting species which reach our shores from other climes. Those on the threshold of our hobby, so to speak, must have their footsteps guided by bird-lovers who have already trodden the first paths, and can thus advise the beginner how to avoid the pit-falls besetting them, and render his path as smooth and easy to travel over as is possible. To compass this is a duty every bird-keeper owes to the birds which go to make up his pet branch of our hobby. And keepers of Foreign birds ought not to shirk their responsibilities in this direction.

There must be thousands among the readers of CAGE BIRDS, who have kept Foreign birds of various species, and have much knowledge respecting their keeping, feeding and management stored away in their heads. Put those facts on paper for the benefit of fellow lovers of Foreign birds.

To bring about this desirable end, we offer a

for the best original article on

which reaches our offices on or before

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 24th NEXT.

The said article may concern the making and fitting of an aviary, the stocking and management of an aviary (either indoor or outdoor), the keeping of one particular bird only, or the keeping of a group of birds. In short,

No subject whatever which deals with Foreign Birds is barred.

RULES.

Each essay must be clearly written (or typed), on one side of paper only.

The length is left to competitors, but essays should not contain less than 1,000 words wherever possible.

Faults of spelling and grammar will not be counted against any essay, practical utility, interest, and simplicity being the chief essentials.

No name or address must be put on any essay, but each must be signed with a nom-de-plume, the sender's name and address being attached on a separate sheet of paper.

The Editor's decision will be final. Competent assistance will be called in to aid him in arriving at his decision.

All essays sent in (and any accompanying sketches or photographs) become the property of CAGE BIRDS, but all which are published (over and above the winning essay) will be duly paid for according to their worth to us.

All entries must reach CAGE BIRDS office, 154, Fleet-street, London, E.C., on or before Monday, September 23rd next. Write "Essay Competition" on top left-hand corner of envelope or package.

AN INTERNATIONAL CONTEST.

Scottish v. English N.P.C.

Satisfactory arrangements have again been made for another contest between the Scottish and English Norwich Plainhead Clubs. Great hopes were entertained that the Southern N.P.C. would join in, but up to now they have not seen their way to agree to the conditions come to between the S.P.C. and E.P.C., who up to this year have had four successful contests. The contest takes place in Scotland this year, under slightly altered conditions. In former years each club selected their team birds, which caused a little friction. This year all the members of either club can enter as many birds as they choose, as there is no selecting of team birds, the three highest birds belonging to members of the clubs taking part to count for points over a given number of classes. I sincerely hope that every member of the Scottish Plainhead Club who has a bird to show will support the committee, and I wish to point out that even a commended ticket is a point gained for the cups offered by the club, although it may not count for contest. The result of the vote, taken as to place is in favour of the Glasgow and West of Scotland Show, on November 15 and 16. All Societies desiring the patronage of the Scottish Plainhead Club must enclose classification offered, and name of judge selected, and have the same sent to me at once. Will those who have not yet paid their annual subscription kindly do so at once. Any person who wishes to become a member should forward name with 2s. 6d. fee to D. SMITH, Sec. 142, High-street, Edinburgh.

Mr. T. Vincent has removed to 107, Borough High-street, London, S.E.

Nightingales in Scotland.

Lady Margaret Cameron, who rarely leaves her Highland home, has lately, it is reported, made a discovery of much interest to Scottish ornithologists, that the Nightingale sometimes finds his way to the glens of the west of Scotland, and has been heard in the neighbourhood of Achnacarry

How to Tame a Bird.

If anybody knows how to tame birds, says the "Sunday Circle," it ought to be Mrs. Olive Thorne Miller; and these are her rules, which are simple enough for anyone to understand and practise: No creature is more jealous or sensitive than a bird. It is easy however, to win the heart of almost any bird, and without starving him or making him think he has mastered you. Simply talk to him a good deal. Place his cage near you on your desk or work-table, and retain his choicest dainty to give to him with your own fingers. Let him know that he can never have that particular thing unless he takes it from you, and he will soon learn, if you are patient, and do not disconcert him by fixing your eyes upon him. After this he will more readily take it from your lips; and then when you let him out of his cage, after the first excitement is over, he will come to you, especially if you have a call you have accustomed him to, and accept the dainty from you while free. As soon as he becomes really convinced that you will not hurt him, or try to catch him, or interfere in any way with his liberty, he will give way to his boundless curiosity about you; he will pull your hair, pick at your face, and give you as much of his company as you desire.

The Bird and Its Wage.

Few birds do more to keep down the aphides and caterpillars than the White-throat, says a writer in a contemporary, and the outcry that is raised when he takes a few green peas or raspberries does not do credit to our generosity or even to our sense of justice. By a curious chance the two items of the account are roughly cast up in the current number of the "Field." The good that White-throats do is stated in the gardening column, and the harm is cast up though purely from the gardener's point of view in the space devoted to natural history. One account is of the clearing of a heavy blight of black fly from a crop of Windsor beans, a job most cleanly performed at the expenditure of a good deal of energy; the other states that a row of young peas has been thoroughly devasted either by White-throats or their near relatives, the Willow Wrens, which most unlearned people confidently call White-throats. The gardener is perfectly grateful for the removal of his black fly; to do him justice, the correspondent whose letter is put under natural history does not grumble about his peas. But the usual tendency is to deem that a little slip in this direction more than wipes out all the bird's many and undoubted services. The Swallows, the Wagtails, and the Fly-catchers are all very well. They never attack our fruit, and they are catching insects all day long. None of these, however, are aphide-catchers or devourers of caterpillars. These are laborious occupations, and those who undertake them do well to insist on a fair standard wage. The toll they take of our fruit is but slight by comparison with the work done in the months of bud, blossom, and growth. The White-throat, at any rate, deserves far better than to be shot for a few green peas.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in Ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence to pay postage expenses, &c., otherwise their letters will not receive attention.

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

NOTE.—Readers are requested to carefully study past numbers and current issue before submitting questions. By doing so they may save trouble and unnecessary repetition.

CANARIES.

NORWICH PLAINHEADS.

Answered by J. H. PAYNE.

Turned Claw.

T.C.—Many young Canaries have the hind claw turned underneath as yours, but if taken in time they can generally be got in their proper position. Procure a piece of rubber tubing, such as is used on a baby's feeding bottle, cut a piece about a quarter of an inch wide. Pass this over the bird's foot and turn back the hind claw, then pass the rubber ring over it so that it will hold it against the shank. Let this stop on for a fortnight, when the claw should be in its normal position.

Soft Moult.

J.N.—If you are keeping your bird in the window, or in any place where there is any draught, remove it at once to a warm spot, hang below the level of the gas, and at night time cover over the cage with a warm cloth. Continue the medicinal treatment for another fortnight, or three weeks, and in addition let him have three times a week a piece of sponge cake, over which put a few drops of best sherry. In addition to the Canary seed give him two or three times a week a thimbleful of German rape seed. A young lettuce leaf twice a week should do him good, and occasionally a piece of boiled carrot.

YORKSHIRES.

Answered by H. W. BATTYE.

Limited Room for the Moult.

First Season.—I prefer moulting the cocks I have used for breeding separately when possible, but if the birds agree you may put yours together—at any rate, if you intend to breed with them again, and not to exhibit them. But should they disagree and pluck each other, and you contemplate exhibiting any of them you must separate them when about halfway through the moult. 2: No; from yellow hen and buff cock you may expect to get about an equal number of both yellows and buffs, the same as you would with a yellow cock and buff hen.

A Cinnamon Marked Hen.

Mrs. F.A.K.—Your hen is what is known as a Variegated Cinnamon of the Yorkshire type, and may very possibly be a well-bred bird, when, had its markings been on eyes or wings and the bird been clear on other parts of its body, you would not have been able to buy it at anything like the price you paid. I should hardly expect to get a clear or decently marked yellow Yorkshire hen at the price you name, though breeders of the Cinnamon marked Yorkshire do not set the same value on the heavily variegated birds that they do on the well marked ticked or clear ones. But when some of these heavy marked birds are paired with a clear-bred bird, they will, and do often, throw birds good both in markings, type, feather, and colour. Probably your hen had been bred from a bird that had been crossed with another bird which had some Belgian blood in its veins, which causes it to be so upstanding and to show a little stiltyness on legs. This will improve in the young from her. Owing to your young birds being bred from variegated parents, they will no doubt excel in colour, and I would advise you keeping one or two of the lightly marked ones, and pairing them next season with clear or lightly marked birds from some unrelated strain, when you may probably breed a few good enough for exhibition. But they will require colour feeding or they will be heavily handicapped by having to compete with the colour-fed birds on the show bench. On the whole I think you should be fairly well satisfied with your bargain.

An Early Enquiry.

New Reader and Beginner.—Do not pair your birds until the last week in March or the first week in April, and read the hints given from time to time in CAGE BIRDS on management etc. The best seeds to feed on are good sound clean white Canary seed, as the staple food given in the seed hopper, with a teaspoonful per bird three time a week of the following mixture: Summer rape three parts, maw seed one part. Give a little apple between the wires once or twice a week; clean water daily, and a good supply of sand.

CRESTS AND CRESTBREDS.

Answered by W. E. GREEVES.

Toe Nails Destroyed.

Novice in Doubt.—If the parents of your young bird destroyed all its toe nails, the youngster would not be a perfect specimen, and for that reason it would not be suitable for the show bench. If it moults out with an exceptionally large crest, and has lost only one or two of its nails, you might venture to show it. No; the nails will not grow again.

CINNAMONS.

Answered by J. NORTH.

Is it a Cinnamon?

Novice.—I very much fear that I, being unable to view the bird about which you are uncertain as to its designation of colour, am not in anything like as good a position as yourself for deciding this question. There is nothing more difficult than to give the correct name of any colour that is only described verbally. Mention of size of body does not in any way assist in an explanation, but if the coloured portions of plumage are really brown or cinnamon colour, and not green, or striped with black, I think we may conclude it is a cinnamon, but as it is evidently variegated or pied it is not very likely to make a show bird, and lastly it is almost sure to be a hen—that is, if it is cinnamon-coloured.

BORDER FANCIES.

Cinnamon Blood.

Mug.—There is no need for you to get a self-cinnamon to raise the quality in your clears. You can get a pink-eyed or lightly marked cinnamon hen, yellow preferred, which would do your turn. Run her with a clear yellow cock for first nest, or all the season, just as they may throw. Keep all the buff hens bred from this pair and pair them again to yellow cocks, and if you want to improve your strain of buffs run one of them with a smart buff as advised before. If you get a buff cock pair him to his mother, and then you will have as much cinnamon blood as you need. (2).—Yes, the cinnamon has more influence than green blood. I don't care for green blood in my clear stock at all. I don't think you have your stock quite under your command, or you would not have so much variation in type, and the only way you can remedy this evil is by paying very particular attention to your stock birds. Select your cock birds perfect in colour and quality, and a little on the small side. Your hen will give you type and position. (3) I don't care for breeding from a hen with the fault you mention, as it is very difficult to breed out. There are many birds spoilt by it, and you had much better select one without; you are quite right to guard against it.

ROLLERS.

Answered by "SCHOOLMASTER."

Young Gone "Puffy."

E.R.—It is a mistake to give too much green food to young birds just beginning to feed themselves; they want to have very little, unless it is a seeding kind, like shepherd's purse or chickweed. Your youngsters should certainly have Canary-seed as well as summer-rape seed; also plenty of maw seed daily. Stop the egg-food, and rely on the bread and milk—or sweet biscuit and milk. For one day give them drinking water in every two tablespoonfuls of which has been dissolved as much sulphate of soda as will lie on a shilling. Afterwards, until well, well mix as much Dover's Powder (from chemist) as will lie on a threepenny piece with each teaspoonful of the milk-sop you give to them. Also add six drops of tincture of gentian to each tablespoonful of drinking water. It is a serious condition, and recovery is doubtful.

A Long Moult.

H. E. Buth, Chard.—You cannot do much, beyond feeding it generously, for the Canary which has been in "soft moult" all summer. It is a good sign that the feathers should now be falling so freely, for when the new coat puts in an appearance the troubles of your bird in this direction should be over—for twelve months, at any rate, unless you get him into another soft moult. It certainly is wonderful that he should, in spite of all, sometimes sing a little. You must feed and treat him exactly as advised "M.K.R." this week. Give the packet seed once a week only; say, on Sunday, for a treat. Let him have a tonic, by all means.

Pet Canary Moulting.

M.K.R.—There is nothing whatever to be anxious over. Your bird is simply moulting. It is the habit of many birds to take up the cast feathers and twist and turn them about in their beaks—it is sheer playfulness. The majority of birds seem moulting early this year, which is a good thing—the earlier they start (after about the middle of July) the better it is for them. It is a good sign, too, when they drop the old plumage quickly, as your bird is doing. Feed him on a staple mixture of three parts best Spanish Canary seed and one part of summer rape seed. Give a small teaspoonful of maw seed one day, and a teaspoonful of the mountain bread (or any good maker's patent Canary food), the next day. Let him have a feed of a good packet mixture once a week, say, on Sunday; or twice a week give a teaspoonful of mixed hemp and linseed, in equal parts. Every second day (on the days you give the soft-food) stir half-a-teaspoonful of Parrish's chemical food in the bird's drinking water. Let him have plenty of good grit, a piece of cuttlefish, and a slice of ripe apple or pear now and again, with a sprig of greenfood. This treatment should ensure a good, quick moult.

Young with Swollen Joint.

J.F.K.—I should think the young bird must have caught its foot somewhere, and wrenched it severely, causing an inflamed state of the joint. Bathe it (or steep it) twice daily in nicely hot water for a minute or two, and afterwards anoint the place gently with Zambuk ointment, using the tips of the fingers to do it with. If no improvement in three days, get a small quantity of tincture of iodine from a chemist and paint the swollen part with this once a day. Use it very sparingly, as iodine is a most powerful lotion; a small feather is a good thing to apply it with. Don't let it go anywhere else on the bird.

MISCELLANEOUS CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by "OLD JUDGE."

Young Birds Minus Claws.

Anxious.—(1) It is quite impossible for me to say why your birds are deformed, if it is a natural deformity, but if, as is very probable, one of the parents possesses a cannibalistic tendency, then I should say those toes which are missing have been bitten off whilst the young were in the nest. It would be advisable to kill these birds, as they can never be of any use, and their life will only be a misery to them. (2) You most certainly should not let the old birds go to nest again. All nesting operations should finish absolutely at the end of July. Your birds should be moulting now.

Some "Large" Questions.

P. Paver.—Your questions have a very wide scope, and to answer them at length would occupy a couple of columns. Here are some brief hints, however. Moult your Goldfinch as much on thistle heads, hard-heads, teazle heads, sow thistle with "blight" (green-fly) on, maggots out of thistle heads (especially decayed ones), flowering and seeding groundsel tops, and the like, as you can possibly lay hands on. Give, in addition, teazle, linseed, maw, sunflower (cracked, if necessary), and canary seeds, with a feed of hemp and niger occasionally. But do not overdo the two latter. Gather your Linnet all the ripe shepherd's purse, chickweed, plantain and charlock that you can procure, and especially any covered with blight. He will also relish the wild seeds recommended for the Goldfinch, while the Goldie may also nibble those recommended for the Lintie. Let him also have canary, teazle, linseed, maw, summer rape and hemp seeds. Fed on these lines, you should have no difficulty in moulting out your two birds well. Let them have plenty of pure cold water for bathing purposes. If they won't bathe, you will have to spray them lightly on suitable days—don't half-drown them. Another indispensable item is a supply of good grit, while a piece of old mortar, or cuttle-fish should always be between the bars of the cage, or within easy access. The Greenfinch Mule will moult out well on the dietary laid down for the Linnet, but must have sunflower seed daily. As a matter of fact, you can give this bird anything that is recommended for the other two—thistles he will rejoice in—the only reservation being that the hemp and niger should not be given over freely to him. A box cage is the best for a Mule (the pattern known as the Finch stock cage), but he will thrive in a waggon-shaped, all-wire window-cage, being very hardy, as a rule, given proper food and freedom from damp and draughts. Repeat your other questions a little later on—when the Muling season gets a little nearer.

Sex of Young Birds.

Two Weeks' Reader.—I welcome you to the large and ever-increasing circle of CAGE BIRDITES. I have often stated in the past that it is practically impossible to sex any nestling British bird. Where there is any distinctive sex plumage, this is only assumed at the moult. Most young birds are garbed very like their mothers, the Bullfinch and Chaffinch affording typical examples. Some, on the contrary, exhibit points of difference with both parents, the Goldfinch and Greater Spotted Woodpecker here affording us examples. It is true that with some species old fanciers can guess at the sexes of the young with some accuracy. But it is not by means of any signs that can be written down to guide others to the same end; it is a "knack" born of long experience among birds generally, and probably the species concerned in particular. Among your young Blackbirds, those which took the densest black on the wing flights are the most likely to prove cocks. After the moult the cocks will be black all over, and the hens, broadly speaking, a dirty brown, more or less faintly barred and streaked on the breast. Caged Starlings often provide a sex puzzle until fully adult—that is, two years old. The adult male is a glossy blue-black, with a lovely metallic lustre shading into various other tints, including purplish-black. His spangling is smaller and finer than that seen on the female. With her it is large and bold, and dominates the plumage, as it were. Her ladyship, too, is brownish-black in ground colour, and altogether dingier-looking than her mate, with but a shadow of his resplendent polish. I speak now of the spring, or breeding plumage, for Starlings have a winter garb. The male, further, has a conspicuous yellow bill when in breeding condition.

Linnet Mule Ailing.

T.N.H.—It may be that your young Linnet Mule is suffering from inflammation, as you suspect. But from the deaths of the other birds it looks almost as though you had, by some unfortunate means or other, introduced an unhealthy bird, or birds, amongst your stock, and thus got them down with disease. Greenfood of the seeding kind will not hurt birds. I do not recommend its too liberal use, however, with young birds feeding themselves, as it is apt to keep them off the other kinds of seeds. Young birds, too, want weaning off egg-food on to milk-sop (bread or sweet biscuit) as soon as possible. Mixed seed containing niger is no good for regular use, while linseed and hemp do not want to be overdone. As regards treatment of your bird, for one day stir a small teaspoonful of dandelion juice (taraxacum) among two tablespoonfuls of drinking water; afterwards give three or four more doses, on alternate days, but of half-a-teaspoonful only. Into each teaspoonful of sweetened milk-sop, well stir as much Gregory's powder (from any chemist) as will lie on a threepennypiece, and keep this up until improvement is shown. If a tonic is needed afterwards, you might try tincture of gentian—ten drops in two tablespoonfuls of water.

Young Bullfinches Dying.

First Attempt.—It is pure assumption that the young birds died of diarrhœa, and assumption is a more or less dangerous thing to indulge in. For instance, the diarrhœa may well have been a condition attendant on (that is, arising out of) some other diseased condition of the body, when, of course, had the latter never manifested itself, no diarrhœa could have supervened. However, speculation is useless now. It will be more to the point if I say that I do not entirely approve of your dietary—it is not one I should adopt myself. The egg and biscuit should have a liberal dash of ants' eggs (finest quality only) added to it. It is also a good plan to frequently mix in some finely-chopped-up mealworms (if the hen Canary doesn't care about eating them whole); or cut them in halves and squeeze them out amongst the soft-food. In addition to unlimited canary seed, a restricted quantity of hemp, maw and summer rape seed should be given daily; also soaked and sprouting summer rape seed. Lettuce should not constitute the sole greenfood, though a little is all right; the seeding kinds, chickweed, shepherd's purse and groundsel, for instance, should be liberally supplied. Soaked and just sprouting summer rape seed is an excellent thing for young Finches of all species—many a nest of Bullies has been successfully hand-fed on that and egg-bread (sometimes bread without the egg), moistened with new milk. Better luck next time.

Mainly About Colour Feeding.

Josh-o'-Brum.—(1) The four weeds may be what you say, but I can't pass any opinion. I want a fair specimen to enable me to name it, not a quarter-inch snipping. Plantain, shepherd's purse, and sow thistles are all good for British birds, as I should have thought all the world would have known by this time. (2) You can colour-feed your Song Thrushes very simply by adding one teaspoonful of tasteless pepper (best quality) to each four teaspoonfuls of its soft-food, and well mixing it in. Begin with a very little only, gradually working up to the strength specified. Dissolve in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water, twice a week, as much citrate of iron as covers a threepennypiece. Add a small teaspoonful of fresh, finely-ground linseed to the soft-food about three times a week. For other hints see many recent replies on colour-feeding. These said recent replies also cover your question No. 3, referring to the colour-feeding of Lesser Redpoll, Bramblefinch and Linnet. It is quite unnecessary to colour-feed either of these three species provided they are, as they ought to be, of a good natural colour. And, curious though it sounds, Finches of bad natural colour are hardly ever improved by colour-feeding—the colour "doesn't take," as fanciers put it. Further, it is usually a very difficult matter to get Finches to eat colour food made in the usual way—viz., with egg-bread. Most have to be "judiciously starved" on to it. There is a risk, of course, of them being upset and succumbing during the process. Some fanciers get over this difficulty by gradually accustoming the birds to eating ground up seeds (canary, linseed, and maw, generally). Then, about the end of July, they commence adding a little colour-feed, working up the strength by degrees. One or two large firms in the seed line sell seeds with the shells removed (some, I fancy, terming these "cooked seeds"), which, of course, can readily be treated with colour food. Both crushed and shelled seeds absorb the colouring agent quite well. A certain successful fancier of my acquaintance, with a liking for colour feeding Britishers (especially Bullfinches), uses crushed linseed only as a vehicle for conveying the pepper. You must experiment and find out which way, or ways, best meet your own case—there is no "royal road" as with Canaries, unless it be with hand-reared British birds. The quantity of colour food depends on the bird—a rich Jonque would naturally need less than a dingier-coloured one. One in four ought to be the outside strength necessary; one in six or seven might suffice. Use your own judgment. In my opinion, overfed Britishers are spoiled.

Aviary Construction.

H.S.G.—I regret to say that I do not know of any work which deals exhaustively with the building of aviaries, and gives plans, etc. Perhaps, however, I ought to say that I do not know of one at present on the market, for I happen to be in a position to tell you that CAGE BIRDS, within the next few weeks, will have on sale just the very work you seem to be wanting. So possess your soul in patience for a short time, and purchase the new volume, which will enable you to turn your slight knowledge of wood-working tools to advantage in the erection of either a good aviary or bird-room. The plan you submit isn't bad, but a height 6½ feet at the back (as it seems to be from the sketch) is not sufficient. Unless you are a particularly modest individual in the matter of height, you will be uncomfortable in a building of only this height. Another foot, at least, is essential, and two feet will be a vast improvement, allowing of much more efficient ventilation. Five feet make not too good a width, either; I should make it six feet if I possibly could. Your other details—the slightly-inclined cement floor, weather board, double door (wire inside, wood outside) and windows—are quite all right. If you don't intend to keep any birds in cages in this place, then the height you have specified will not be by any means so much of a drawback. You do not make yourself clear on the point. In any case I should increase the width (depth from front to back) if I could manage it.

About both Hybrids and British.

Nemo.—Personally I certainly should not trouble to get different sized show-cages for the birds you mention; it is unnecessary. A show-cage of the accepted "Norwich Plainhead Club" design, but one inch less in height, and about half-an-inch less in length, will answer admirably for either Goldfinch, Greenfinch, and Linnet, or Linnet-Bullie, Goldie-Redpoll, and Greenfinch-Canary Hybrids. Some exhibitors of the present day are guilty of showing Siskins, Redpolls, Goldfinches, Linnets, etc (including some Hybrids), in a very abbreviated type of cage, affording the poor inmate hardly room to turn round, and causing it, generally, to make its surroundings filthy dirty in next to no time. These exhibitors seem to think this ridiculously small cage enhances the size of the bird within. Do they, I wonder, think also that the judge has no eyes? Don't be persuaded into following their lead. For the Larger Finches and Buntings (Bramblefinch, Snow Bunting, etc.), an extra depth from back to front, say another inch and a half, should be allowed. For the best all-round colour for the insides and wires is a very dark (holly) green. You could have two or three a very pale blue, and try the Greenfinch and Linnet, etc., therein, and thus suit your own personal choice with regard to those species. To get the best possible effect, I always gave my own showcages an extra coat of enamel after receiving them from the cage-maker. I prefer a properly constructed and fitted wicker travelling hamper to all others. If there were no mention of Hybrid in the schedule you would be perfectly justified in showing any Hybrids (that is, not containing any Canary blood), which possessed no light feathers, in the class headed "Dark Mule."

A Weed: and Elderberries.

A.C., Lewes.—You are right; the plant sent bears a family resemblance to shepherd's purse, and belongs, in fact, to the Cruciferous tribe, almost every member of which provides "wild seed" for the birds. It is the Hairy Pepperwort. I can quite believe your birds are fond of it, and you can safely use it. No member of the Cruciferæ is poisonous to birds, though caution is needed with some of the bitter seeds (English rape, for instance, and other Brassicas), which may upset birds if given in quantity to those previously unused to them.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL

PRIC ONE SHILLING. Post Free 1/2.

Superbly Illustrated by the Champion Canary Artist, Mr. H. NORMAN. EVERY BIRD DEPICTED IS A VERITABLE MODEL, and shows the breeder what to aim for. Some idea of the popularity of this Practical Manual may be gathered from the fact that under the title of "The British Canary," it has passed its Third Edition, entering upon a Fourth Edition of 5,000 copies under the new title of "HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL." The following Summary of Chapters, etc., will show you how completely the ground is covered:

Aviaries and Cages.
Show Cages.
Perches.
Breeding Canaries.
The Young Birds.
Food for Nestlings.
Hens Refusing to Feed.
Sweating Hens.
Young Birds Dead in Shell.
Red Mite.
Clear Eggs.
Moulting.
Exhibiting.
Diseases (treated very fully).
Every variety of Canary is treated upon at length and illustrated.

Mr. HOUSE has thoroughly revised and brought this work up-to-date and incorporated a chapter on the "Roller or Singing Canary."

bringing on diarrhœa. I do not know the process by which berries (such as elder and black) are preserved in syrup—my "good lady" attends to such details for me. I believe it is very simple, the fruit being dropped into boiling syrup, then bottled and sealed up. Possibly some kind reader who has tried bottling elderberries may favour you with his method next week. Preserved berries and other fruit are certainly good for caged birds—I cannot remember ever having one (of a fruit-eating species) which refused such. Some, however, "turn up their noses" at fruit which is sticky and wet. Mind that it is always good when given.

The Usual Crop.

J.T., P.R., X.—Have duly posted you a specimen sprig of shepherd's purse.

W.R., Walkden.—The specimen sent is shepherd's purse. You can get it much higger than this, however—taller in growth, fuller of seed, and riper (browner) in condition.

Two in a Cage.

Bedford Square.—It would not hurt to moult two exhibition cock Linnets in the same cage, providing the said cage was of a sufficiently large size. Your own cage, however, 18 hy 16 by 12 ins. is barely large enough as a moulting cage for a single Linnet, much more two. Two cock Linnets kept together in such a cage in the ordinary way would be practically certain to squabble and fight, to the detriment of their plumage, especially so when in "show form," using the term to convey "high condition." If the two were put together when about to break into moult, they probably would not fight, or they would soon settle down. As soon as they came into condition again, however, fighting would commence. I should never try to keep two exhibition Linnets together during greater part of the year, except in a really large flight—even then it might prove a disastrous experiment. The attitude of most cock Finches when in high condition, reminds one of the proverbial Irishman when in "high spirits"—they seem spoiling for a fight.

Two Shrikes Together.

R.T.G.—Delighted to know my previous advice proved so eminently satisfactory. The fact will help me to cheer up and face with equanimity the eternal rain which threatens to swamp my poor little annual holiday! I wish I hadn't saved up for it—rainy holidays are so trying (to one's remarks). But to come back to your Shrikes. I do not advise you to try and keep two Red-backed Shrikes in the same cage, 3-foot long. The weaker one of the two might find himself in the predicament of certain of the ancients—"butchered to make a Roman holiday." Put the clerk of the weather in the arena, if you like—Ed cheerfully see him butchered. The male Red-backed Shrike certainly has a very passable song, and is a really excellent mimic of the songs of other birds. Dr. Gunther, who has bred these birds in an outdoor aviary (two or three seasons, I believe), will tell you so. I am glad to know that you have got your own specimens so delightfully tame as to eat from your fingers, also that you think them very engaging pets. It is not difficult to keep Red-backed Shrikes through the winter, and a warmed room is not essential to their well-being, providing they are not troubled by damp or draughts. It is a fact, though, that birds will stand greater cold when flying loose in a sheltered outdoor aviary than in a cage in an indoor room. The moult is a trying time for all birds. You must supply as much suitable live food as you possibly can during its continuance. It is not improbable that your birds may go without moulting until next year. You need not worry over this providing they show no signs of sickening.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S.

Grey Parrot Pulling Feathers.

My Grey for the past few days seems to have become mad. It has pulled out its feathers, and is almost bare. I can find no trace of vermin. Have given magnesia. It is fed on boiled maize and hemp. What is the remedy?—E. ELLIOTT.

E. Elliott.—Your bird's blood has got into a very heated condition, and I should continue to give the magnesia at intervals of three days, say four or five doses, so long as the bowels do not become watery loose. Spray the bare parts every other day with quassia solution and persevere with this, as a cure is not very speedy in such cases. Your diet is very unwholesome, but at the same time you must not make a sudden change. Diet as follows: Continue to give the boiled maize (this only keeps fresh one day), also supply the following mixture; 2 parts each canary and white oats, and 1 part each wheat, hemp, dari, and sunflower seeds. Well mix and keep a supply continuously in the cage. Also supply, not all at once, but so as to make a varied diet: Ripe fruit, greenfood (fresh tender lettuce is as good as any), plain biscuits (dry), nuts, and keep up a continuous supply of cuttlefish and grit. Do not leave the water in the cage, but let the bird satisfy its thirst three or four times a day. When you discontinue the magnesia, put the bird on a course of Parrish's chemical food; well colour its drinking water with same. If the heated condition does not yield in a fortnight's time, repeat query, with full particulars.

Wintering Waxbills and Finches.

Birds, mostly this year's purchases, are kept in drawing-room aviary. (1) Will they live without a fire during the winter? (2) How much, and how often would you give Parrish's chemical food?—"NEW YEAR."

New Year.—(1) It is more difficult to keep birds indoors without heat, than it is to keep them out of doors all the year round; in fact, many species which will suffer no inconvenience out of doors from the vagaries of our worst weather, need some warmth when kept in cages indoors. It is probable, providing they are kept in some light position, free from draught, they would keep in health and condition, but they would be better and far more comfortable in a room in which a fire was kept burning during the day. All the birds you name, I have kept out of doors all the year round, and they have been long-lived under such conditions. (2) Never give drugs or tonics to healthy birds, let well alone. During the moulting season just colouring their drinking water with the chemical food is a decided help. It should be given daily all through the period, and gradually discontinued once they are in full plumage again. In the same manner it may be given to a weakly bird till it is in condition again. In this latter case it is better to make its drinking water just saline with Epsom salts for one day, before giving the chemical food.

Birds for C.P. Aviary.

How many birds can I keep in a C. P. Aviary, 3ft. long by 3ft. high? At present it contains five small finches; what other kinds can I keep with them?—A. M. MENCE.

A. M. Mence.—If you confine your birds to small Waxbills, you could keep 12 in your aviary cage, providing it is frequently cleaned. Chose from the following: Green Avadavats, Grey, Orange-cheek and Orange-breasted Waxbills. If you procure a pair of each, that would about fill your accommodation, and give you a very nice selection of small brightly-coloured, vivacious and entertaining birds. As alternative, I would advise males only of Gouldian, Alario Green and Grey Singing Finches, and a St. Helena Waxbill. All are fairly easy to keep in good condition, providing their cage is not stood in such a position that the wind can blow through it. In fact, no birds, however robust they be, can stand draught; guard against this, and once they have recovered from the effects of importation, they should do well. Diet: canary, white, French and spray millet, cuttlefish, greenfood, grit, and water, ad lib, for drinking and bathing. A few ants' eggs for such of them as will eat them, form a wholesome change. Grain in the ear, and fresh tender lettuce are about the best greenfoods for Foreign Finches. Canary and millet sown in shallow pans, and given when about two inches high, is also very wholesome, and readily eaten.

What Others with Blossom-head Parrakeets?

What brilliantly-plumaged Parrakeets could I keep with a pair of Blossom-heads in an aviary, 3½ by 1½ by 3ft. high? They can be let out for exercise. Would Canary-wings, Blue-wings, or Paradise Parrakeets do?—D.B.V.

D.B.V.—In a cage of this size, I cannot advise you to include another pair with your Blossom-heads. These birds are very uncertain in their temper with other species, and are best kept separately, quite apart from the question of space, which in your case is fully occupied. Either of the birds you name make handsome cage or aviary pets. The Paradise is very beautiful and very rare. Write those advertising Australian birds in our columns, you might hear of a pair that way. Unless in a fairly large aviary, it is best not to mix the different species of Parrakeets, but to keep each bird in a separate cage, either singly or in pairs.

Sexing Red-faced Lovebirds.

(1) What is the difference of plumage of the sexes of African Red-faced Lovebirds? (2) Is the Red Comoro Finch, the Madagascar Fowdry Red Bird? What is the price of the Finch, does it keep in colour all the year round, and how must I feed it?—SAMMY.

Sammy.—(1) Outwardly the plumage of the sexes is similar, though that of the female is not quite so lustrous in most specimens I have examined. However, there is one unmistakable sign, the underside of the wings is black. (2) I do not know of a Comoro Finch apart from the Weaver (Nesacanthis eminentissima). It only retains the brilliant nuptial plumage during the breeding season. They leak through occasionally, but such are frequently sold as Madagascars, which it strongly resembles, but from which it may be readily distinguished by its olivaceous back and pale-brownish white abdomen and ventral region; all these parts in the Madagascar being scarlet. This species is mostly pugnacious in a mixed series. Its value is from 7/6 to 10/6.

Exhibition Birds for A.O.V.

A King Parrot always carries off 1st prize. What kind of bird can I purchase which would be most likely to beat it? Would the varied Lorikeet be a likely one?—"POLLY PURKISS."

Polly Purkiss.—This is a difficult question, so much depends on the leaning of the judge, brilliant plumage and fine condition with some judges counting far more than rarity; in point of fact, many of them, who judge all classes of birds in the smaller shows make their awards solely on the ground of brilliancy and fine condition, not being acquainted with what is rare. Among seed eaters, Crimson-wings, Many Colours, Stanley, and Yellow Collar Parrakeets should all stand a good chance. Lories and Lorrikeets mostly have to be fed on milk sop and ripe fruit, some species having a liking for seed as well. Varied, Crimson, Ceram, Forsten's, and Blue Mountain Lories should all stand a good chance. But they must be in fine condition, as a King for brilliancy, etc. When in condition takes some beating for striking appearance. Among the smaller birds, some species of Tanager or Sugar Bird would be the most likely to succeed; here are a few probable winners: Blue, and Yellow-wing Sugar Birds, Tri-colour, Maroon, Blue, Superb, and Scarlet Tanager. These all require soft food, ripe fruit and insects.

Wintering Foreign Birds.

I enclose sketch and particulars of my aviary. It contains 32 birds; is this too many? Will the following winter in it out of doors? Cockatiels, Nuns, Madagascars, Lovebirds, Weavers, Budgerigars, Javas, Quails, Zebra Finches and a few British Finches?—"NEWPORT."

Newport.—You have ample accommodation for 60 or 70 birds in your well-arranged aviary. There is, however, one fault with it, I note you say ends are wire netting, both these would be better boarded in, but it is essential that this be done with the one adjoining glass front portion, and it would be better if the front half of interior, and of glazed portion was also boarded in, thus making quite a snug shelter. With these slight alterations, and plenty of perches fixed in the most sheltered positions, all the birds you name would safely winter out of doors. There is little doubt they would do so with only the ends of the aviary enclosed, but the alterations as indicated above, would make them more comfortable. Put some nest boxes and logs in the centre gable of roof, many of the birds will shelter there. If you have the birds in true pairs, you should have good breeding results next year, but I must warn you that Budgerigars are dangerous company for Finches, and sooner or later you will find this out. The beautiful Gouldian Finch, if acclimatised, pairs are procured, or not turned out till next May, would safely winter in your really well-constructed aviary.

Sexing Saffron Finches, etc.

(1) I have got a pair of Saffrons, which I was assured were a true pair. The supposed female is smaller, with brown upper surface, under parts lighter; throat, creamy; abdomen, white. Is this a female Saffron? (2) Spice Birds, my supposed pair both sing or gurgle. Are they two cocks? (3) Waxbills: Red bill and eye streak; brown above, and fawn below, with rosy tinge. Are these Common or Grey Waxbills? What are St. Helenas like? (4) Hen Zebra Finch, has overgrown lower mandible, it has been cut, but is as bad as ever again. What can be done with it?—"IRISH TYRO."

Irish Tyro (1) The adult female Saffron Finch is similar to the male, but her hues are not so rich, and the saffron yellow patch on the forehead is smaller in area, and not so rich in colour. The description you give is very near that of the nestling, but even with these, their plumage is washed in parts with olive and yellowish greens. If it is not an immature Saffron, which I strongly expect it to be, it is some totally distinct species; possibly a female White-throated Finch. (2) If both your birds swell their throats as they gurgle, they are both males. They very seldom attempt to breed even when in true pairs, yet the past two years they have inter-bred with the Bengalese on several occasions, producing very handsome hybrids. (3) Yes, it is a Common or Grey Waxbill. The St. Helena is very similar in colour to the Grey, but is a longer bird, with quite a long tail in comparison to the above; the grey of its plumage is more earthy in colours, and the narrow undulating lines of same more sharply defined; the rosy line on its underparts is also more intense in colour. (4) Keep a piece of cuttlefish in the cage, and possibly after a time the bird may take to grind its beak away on this, but in a natural branch as well as the ordinary straight ones, and possibly the bird may exercise its bill on these; small lumps of old mortar rubbish would also be probably used for the same purpose. Other than this you can only have it trimmed as required, but the above treatment should ultimately effect a cure.

LEGAL.

Answered by A BARRISTER.

M. W. Cott.—S. sells a pair of birds to C for £2, on credit till July and on approval for three days. The day following this arrival C writes to S saying the birds are not so good as they ought to be. S. replies that they were bred from some of the finest stock in the fancy. C. waits for some weeks before he returns them. S. then sends them back again to C. and threatens to sue C. for the money. At the time of the sale C. was under 21. C. wants to know if he has any defence? Yes; he has two defences.—(1) C. being under 21 the sale is one that cannot be enforced, on the ground of infancy; (2) C. on the facts, cannot repudiate the contract, as he ought to have returned the birds within three days. But if S. represented the birds as being of certain quality, and in fact they were not of that quality, C. can get the contract cancelled on the ground of S.'s misrepresentation. In any event S. cannot recover, since C. was an infant.

Anxious.—A. and B. show certain birds in partnership under their combined names. The points awarded to their birds are counted as though the birds are entered in one name, and A. and B. thus get the prize. C., the runner-up, protests against the award, and the Committee of the Show split the points given to the birds of A. and B. into individual parts, and in this way the runner-up gets the prize. A. and B. want to know if the committee can do this? It depends upon the conditions and regulations of the show. Unless the conditions empower the committee to do this, A. and B. can sue them for the prize.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for a reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post-mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Canary (R. Dashach).—This bird, and possibly your other six, died of "Bird Fever." Instructions for disinfection of surroundings and isolation of any healthy-looking stock have frequently been given.

Canary (Mr. D. Lockwood).—Death was caused by anæmic condition of liver, lungs, and body generally. I think you must be mistaken in saying this was singing lustily yesterday." Only 1/- worth of stamps came to hand. Kindly remit balance (6d.).

"Little Blue Foreign Bird" (M.E.L.).—Chronic enlargement and softening of liver, then acute inflammation of that organ, extending to lungs. It is thought that the amount of exercise was not in balance with the food eaten, perhaps the cages were too small. Their names are "Cordon-bleus."

Linnet Mule (Cantab.).—Although only a young bird the liver was much diseased, resembling putty in colour and substance. It is suggested that the food has been unsuitable; perhaps a daily supply of green food would mend matters.

Canary (Mrs. A. S. Williams).—Enlargement and fatty degeneration of liver, possibly through eating the rich food prepared for insectivorous foreign birds. It would seem better to keep Canaries apart in cages.

GENERAL.

Answered by the EDITOR.

Particulars Wanted (T.A.S.B.).—We know nothing for or against the man named.

Date Fixed (J. T. CARRICK).—The star was omitted by our printers after we had passed the page for press. However, it will be all right this week, I think. Glad to hear you are getting on so nicely and trust you will continue to do so.

Indian Parrot (Anxious).—This is not a matter on which we can very well advise you. No one, of course, can say whether or not a Parrot is going to talk on some date in the future. You must exercise your own judgment.

Query (A Reader of C.B.).—See Rule 8 under "Questions and Answers."

A Suggestion (T. Bishop).—Your suggestion is a good one, but we have not the space at our disposal to carry it out, unfortunately. It would be a very simple matter, we fancy, for members of specialist clubs to ascertain what shows these specials are offered at. If secretaries of specialist clubs only send us a complete list of fixtures patronised by them, we are always pleased to publish same free of cost

THE SOUTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C. AND ITS PATRONAGE.

SIR,—I think some better arrangement than allotting two shows for one week could have been come to. Fancy having to send our birds to Plymouth on the 21st at the show on the 22nd and 23rd of October, back to London, and be on the benches at Battersea on the 24th and 25th. I, for one, would sooner keep my birds at home. One show a week is all right, but after a long journey two, Oh no! What do other Yorkshire exhibitors say?

YORKIE STOCKWELL.

A STRANGE VISITANT.

SIR,—I had notice of a strange bird being seen near here, Dalkeith, but I have failed to get a sight of it. Unfortunately my informants have little knowledge of birds, but they drew a very accurate word picture of a Rose Pastor. Would the three Edinburgh gentlemen who studied it so well near Millerhill, on the 6th inst., say if they recognised the species, or has anyone lost one from their aviary. I can hardly think it is on a pilgrimage, but I have no doubt there will be stranger species on the British bench this coming season. Hoopoes and Orioles will be booming.

TEACHING BULLFINCHES TO PIPE.

SIR,—The so-called Piping Bullfinch is not, as some of the uninitiated appear to think, simply a bird that freely whistles his natural and curious chuckling song, but a bird that has been educated by artificial means to perform a given arrangement of musical notes. As a rule the performance consists of a few bars of some popular song or ballad, or a dance tune. Now I have so often heard folk express their intention of teaching, or having taught an old bird, that it is obvious much ignorance yet prevails about the matter. To attempt to teach a bird over a year old is almost waste of time, although I would not say one would never succeed under such circumstances, yet the proportion of successes would be so very insignificant as scarcely to count as such. One must have young birds to work upon; if not from the nest direct, they should at least be well under tuition before their first moult, and during the moult. And at each subsequent moult after their lessons are complete, the tuition should be repeated at intervals whilst they are off song, otherwise the probability is that they will commence singing again in their natural notes, and forget all about their acquired melody, or so jumble and mix it up as to make it worse than if they dropped it entirely. Next to a man or boy possessed with a sharp piercing whistle, a flute is about the best instrument to teach them with. But the greatest requirement of all is a real bull-dog tenacity to the purpose in hand, and—Patience! Patience!! Patience!!!

THE VALUE OF THE BANANA AND THE PLANTAIN.

A Recommendation of Fruit.

SIR,—As a food for the general stock of small birds the now common banana is not nearly sufficiently appreciated. I say food advisedly because it can be utilised as such, and many small seed-eating birds, and softbills, too, when out of condition or off feed, will practically live upon banana when nothing else will tempt them to eat. As a fruit to be given as a tit-bit it has long been recognised, but it might with advantage be used far more freely and liberally. It is so generally appreciated that almost any bird that will eat fruit of any kind, or green stuff, seems to prefer it to anything else. Yet some Parrots will not touch it, although we often see it advised for these birds in preference to other fruit. But of course, that may be a matter of individual taste. Anyway, let those who are moulting groups of British birds in flight cages try the effect of a daily supply all through the moult and note the effect. Cut one down the centre lengthwise and fix the halves in such a position that the birds cannot turn them over in clearing out the pulp. The association of ideas naturally brings to mind the plantain in writing of the banana. But it is not the plantain fruit I write about here, though it serves to remind me of the humble and common weed whose seed stalks are popularly known as "rats'-tails." These can now be gathered in prime condition for using the half-ripe state in place of green food by selecting the most forward of the spikes. Many of them are still nothing but spikes of blossom, and of no value for the bird's consumption, but it is quite easy to select only those in which the seed is fully formed by noticing how these spikes have solid-looking ovules in place of the comparatively fluffy and powdery look of those which are still in bloom. If there is any doubt about their condition pinch off a few ovules and burst them between the thumb and finger. The plump green seeds will be unmistakable when the stalks are fit for use.

WATER AND BATHING.

SIR,—Although we have had no really hot weather worth speaking of yet, it is best to see that the drinking vessels are kept as scrupulously clean as though the weather was quite sultry. Appearances are often deceptive, and though we are not overpowered with heat, it is often close and muggy, so that the water standing in small vessels is just as apt to become foul and noisome as it would under more sultry conditions. Bathing also should be frequently allowed, except in such cases as very hare and apparently delicate specimens, who always seem to be troubled with cold after a good plunge. Such birds should always be given bathing water which has been allowed to stand in the sun a short time until it is brought to something like the temperature of the room. There is no reason to doubt that a cold douche may effect individual birds as differently as it does the individual human.

OBSERVATIONS ON THE KINGFISHER.

SIR—Recently there has been some considerable correspondence in the "Scotsman" on the Kingfisher, and one of the letters was most interesting in it. The writer said "the whole subject of the migration of birds is beset with difficulties, though much has recently been discovered by observations carried on systematically at lighthouses. As far as I am aware, however, no Kingfishers have been observed by lighthouse keepers, and I scarcely think these birds migrate, though they undoubtedly shift their quarters to more congenial resorts for breeding purposes or in quest of food. Having lived for over thirty years on the banks of the Braid Burn, where I have carefully studied the habits of the Kingfisher, my observations may not be uninteresting to your readers. During the long period mentioned, I have never known Kingfishers stay with us during summer till the present year, when I have frequently seen them during the last few weeks in the policies of The Inch. I used to attribute their departure on the approach of the nesting season to their shyness to breed in such a comparatively thickly-populated district, though I have always been aware of their rearing their young within half-a-dozen miles. Why they should have remained this year is one of those mysteries in nature upon which we can only speculate. Whether or not they migrate in severe weather I am not prepared to state. This, however, I do know that after hard winters with long-continued frost, such as in 1880 and 1895, they were not seen for several seasons thereafter, and I am inclined to think they succumbed in large numbers to the severity of the weather. I have been strengthened in this conclusion by a record in your columns that in the winter of 1895 a Kingfisher was found frozen to the ice in a brook. About the same time I had ocular demonstration practically corroborating this. Walking up the side of the Braid Burn near Peffermill, I noticed the brilliant hues of a Kingfisher as it flew out of the bank. It laboured in its flight, and only went a short distance, when it again settled in the bank. Keeping back from the brook, I proceeded to the place where it had alighted and looked over, when it took wing a second time. Being close to it, I observed that its feet were encased in balls of ice about the size of walnuts. As it was only able to fly a short distance, I went up to it, when it fluttered into the stream, and I there secured it. From having to enter the water for their prey, in winter their dripping feet quickly become encased in ice. As in hard weather it is only possible for them to alight either on snow, on ice, or in water, it is easy to see how the ice around their feet would quickly accumulate and bring about a lingering death.

ALLEGED MISMANAGEMENT OF LLANDILO SHOW.

SIR—I am very pleased to see a letter from Mr. Owen Jones at last, and now that we know that he is alive, I should like to ask him the reason why, after collecting the bottle of whiskey (which was the special withheld), he did not send it on? Did he think it would mature by keeping it, or did it evaporate through the cork being drawn? At the same time he might tell us how long it takes a bottle of whiskey to mature properly?

REMINISCENCES OF BIRD-CATCHING IN BOYHOOD DAYS.

SIR,—I may add to my letter of last week that whenever I went out I always carried what caged songsters I could find room for, as some birds will not sing unless they have been used to being carried on a person's back in a pack bag, and are used to seeing grass on the ground. As soon as I had any young cock Mules, eight weeks old, I took one or more out to early learn them the wild finch song. My Mules had some of the Brown Linnet's song, but this I considered an improvement. When in the house they were kept only in the company of British birds, my Canaries having a room to themselves.

NOTES ON A SHY BIRD.

SIR,—The Flycatcher is generally considered a very shy bird, but yet it is not when it is in a place where it knows its visitors. The other day I had the opportunity of watching the movements of a pair of Flycatchers. The birds are practically the last of the migrants, and their appearance this season was unusually late, owing to the unusual weather. The Flycatcher does not look a fragile bird, but if he exposes himself to the cold rains or frosts he takes a complaint that is as rapid in its deadly development as pneumonia. Watch him on a piece of wood that is supporting a flower, or a tree, and you will see him under favourable conditions—that is when the sun is shining, for the brighter the sun the more numerous the flies. Much living food comes his way; and his appetite is not measured by an army of flies. But, however occupied he is, he darts away at any sharp sound or the approach of footsteps. It is under the weight of domestic responsibility that he loses his shyness and becomes bold. His wife's disposition changes too. Near my home a pair of Flycatchers had built their nest—not by any means an elegant structure—in the firing-hole of a greenhouse. Here they found much comfort, if little food, during the heavy rains. Four eggs were laid, but an observer of bird life considerately removed two, because in other years he had found that the parent birds seldom sustained four offspring. The eggs were hatched, and soon two lusty youngsters with open mouths showed that they were hungry. Unconcerned at the presence of the gardener in the house, the parents brought them food. This was rather remarkable, as the gardener had only to put out his hand to catch them when the door was closed. The youngsters thrived rapidly, and with their progress the timidity of the parents returned. The picture of the babies was worth preserving, and I determined to turn the camera on the nest. The marked attention paid them was disconcerting to the parents, and I had not an opportunity of carrying out my design for the youngsters were strong enough to take wing. The parents flew up to the glass several times, and it must have occurred to the nestlings to try their strength. They did so and reached the bottom of the garden without any mishap.

A LONDONER'S VISIT TO THE FENS.

SIR,—During the Whitsun holidays a London naturalist visited some friends in this district; his object was egg-collecting. He was brought to me by his friend, an editor of the local paper, and the name he was introduced to me by fairly astonished me. The joke was kept up for some time, until he saw my wild birds, and by a slight slip I nailed him, and found out he was not the great naturalist, or his brother, both of whom have done so much for Nature's Notes, and published several most useful works. After a long chat he stated his object. He wanted to get together a good collection of wild bird's eggs, and he wanted not only the eggs, but to study the birds' nests and habits. I soon thought over a few plans and got the necessary permit to explore some noted woods, and got two youthful guides; both of these boys were expert climbers, for I much doubted my friend's agility in that direction. The first day, with his friend, and without any guides, he explored a real good wood, without finding a single nest, or obtaining an egg of any description. On the next day they explored another wood, much noted as good fox cover; eggs of the larger birds were found in plenty, besides young. How many were taken and how many were left, I shall leave, as the Acts might come in, for the birds were scheduled. In this wood fifteen Jay's eggs were found, besides several nests with young. Most of these eggs had been hard sat upon. This I must say is a record for Jays in one small wood in this part. Two nests of Sparrow Hawks, I believe, were found, but no eggs. The birds were seen at each nest. The eggs may have been taken, or it might have been a few days too soon. Eighteen eggs of the Kestrel Hawk were obtained, but not all taken, besides several other nests, three, I think, with young in them. These were left. Two Carrion Crows' nests were found with young in them, and five Magpies' nests with eggs and young. Most of the eggs were hard sat upon, and proved useless for blowing. Three nests of the Little Owl were found with eggs in, these were also too far gone. Three nests of the Long-Eared Owl with young were discovered. This is rather a large order for one wood. As a rule these birds nest early. I have known of several young ones full grown at Whitsuntide, and fine birds they were. Several nests of the Green Woodpecker were found but the eggs, if any, could not be "got at," the holes being too small, and a chopper did not improve matters. After much labour two nests of the Jackdaw were found, and these eggs were far advanced. No Thrush's or Blackbird's eggs or young were discovered. These birds built early, and the first broods were all out. The Nightingale was both seen and heard, but no nests were found, although most careful search was made for them. Only one Cock Blackcap was seen. A Longtailed Tit's nest was found; it was made most beautifully but there were no eggs in it. The nest had most probably been forsaken, for on the outskirts of the wood two more nests were found, one with two eggs and the other with three. One of the nests had a plank leading to it, as if the nest had been previously visited, and the eggs taken. What a very handsome egg these birds lay? He did not get many "Coots" near the town. I believe there were several pairs breeding a few miles out in the Fens, from the description given me of them, but still they are all known as "Moor Hens." This was not a bad day's work for Whit Monday, considering how wet it was part of the day. Another day three nests of the Little Owl were located, but as the nests were too low down in the trees the results could not be recorded. But judging from the mess outside the trees, I have no doubt there were young. Then, a few days later two youthful friends tried these nests again with a piece of string and a stocking, but the Owls would not take hold, neither young or old. On the Wednesday two fine eggs of the Red-Backed Shrike were found in a field near the town. These eggs were found by a small boy and brought to me to identify, which I could not at first, as I had my doubts of the Butcher Bird being so close to the town. The boys were quite positive they were Shrikes' eggs, as they had seen the old birds. I found out soon after the boys were right, which shows how smart they are in this district. Several Wagtails' nests were found, but none with young in them. During all the week's ramble, the London naturalist could not get a Hedge Sparrow's egg. These birds, I know, built very early. Several nests of the Yellowhammer were got, also the Reed Bunting's. No doubt choicer eggs might have been obtained if the wet had not put him off going into the old Turf Fen, which is quite a wilderness for both birds and moths. So pleased and delighted was he with his first visit to these Fens, that he intends to have another holiday here. Several Chat's nests with eggs were found, but no Wren's, Swallow's, Martin's, or Swift's eggs, which he was most anxious to obtain. Not a Cuckoo's egg was found. I have been asked by him to get him a pair. This paper may be interesting to those who collect eggs, or wants a good country holiday during the spring months.

STANDARD SHOW-CAGE FOR GREEN CANARIES.

SIR,—At the Green Canary Association's meeting held July 25th, Mr. Metcalfe in the chair, the question of standard show cages came up and it was decided that the Yorkshire show cage be the usual pattern, with straight bars only, no bars at end like this A allowed. The Norwich show cage is to be size 12 by 11½ by 5 (¼in. expansion allowed); perches, ¾in. square with the edges taken off. Distance between perches 3 inches back and front. Pattern, straight and flat. Colour: The paint for inside cages to be purchased through the club and supplied by Mr. A. Thompson (Liverpool). The uniform show cages are to come into force at the commencement of Show Season 1907.

HEATING APPARATUS REQUIRED.

SIR,—Could any of the numerous readers of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, give me an idea as to what would be the best means, and what apparatus I should require to heat a birdroom 15ft. x 8 x 10. There is a gas jet, but no fire place in the room, and it faces direct North, the scullery immediately underneath, has no fireplace, so that I can't depend on any warmth whatever from below. If any reader could give me particulars of any means, either used or devised by themselves, which has proved successful (without giving any trouble re fumes) I should feel very grateful to them!

WHOLESALE DEATHS THROUGH DRINKING WATER.

Sad Loss of 110 Canaries.

SIR,—Being a reader of CAGE BIRDS for years, could any fancier tell me the cause of my birds drinking a lot of water, and then dying off within twenty-four hours. The water passes through the bowels as fast as they drink it, making the bottom of the cages very wet. This is my second attempt to keep Canaries, and I have lost them all both times, losing seventy Canaries the first time, and now forty again. I cleared all cages out the first time, and had a new lot for the second lot, and now all dead again; thinking of giving up the fancy unless I can find out the cause of it. I feed on rape and Canary seed, and keep them in one room by themselves, facing south-west. Should be much obliged if any reader of "C.B." could tell me the cause of the disasters.

THE COMING OF THE CROSSBILLS.

SIR,—The following account of the coming of the Crossbills is quoted in "Woodlanders and Field Folk," by John Watson, a book just published by T. Fisher Unwin. Mr. Watson does not say where he gets it from, but if true it is very interesting. "The yeere 1593 was a greate and exceeding yeere of apples; and there was greate plenty of strange birds, that shewed themselves at the time the apples were full rype, who fedde uppon the kernells onely of those apples, and havinge a bill with one beake wrythinge over the other, which would presently bore a great hole in one of the apples and make way to the kernells. They were of the bignesse of a Bullfinch; the benne right like the henne of the Bullfinch in colour; the cocke a very glorious bird, in a manner all redde or yellowe on the brest, backe, and head. The oldest man living never heard or readc of any such like bird; and the thing most to bee noted was that it seemed they came out of some country not inhabited, for that they at the first would abide shooting at them either with pellet, bowe, or other engine, and not remove till they were stricken down; moreover they would abide the throwing at them with apples. They came when the apples were full rype, and went away when the apples were clean fallen. They were good meat."

WHITE SWALLOWS REPORTED BREEDING NEAR GLOUCESTER.

SIR,—The West of England seems favoured with rare birds this season. Two white Swallows are now reported, curiously enough in a letter to the "Scotsman," which reads as follows:—"I have a letter dated August 2 giving authentic information of two white Swallows which are at present building in a shed at Brentlands, Brookthorpe, Gloucester. The writer mentions that this is causing quite an excitement in the village. Will some of your ornithological readers say if they know of other cases of white Swallows, or if this is unique in their experience? G.M." This letter was replied in the following terms by R.M.: In a room I know there hangs a very good specimen of a pure white Swallow. Hatched in a stable now a good many years since, at the 'fit o' the toon,' this one of the brood was wholly white, while its congeners were only slightly tending that way. The writer remembers the awful pucker all the Swallows in the place were in when it first took flight. Certes, so 'ken speckle' was it that, whether doomed by gun or hawk, it never would have reached sunny lands. It seemed quite bewildered by the rapturous attention paid to it, and alighting exhausted on a post-head, a small 'sparrow hail' pellet ended its seemingly like to be chequered life." If the above account has any foundation in fact, I shall hope to see the result of the mating of the two white Swallows recorded in the Press. BATH BUN.

IS THE HOOPOE A BRITISH BIRD?

SIR,—I notice in CAGE BIRDS that a "Hoopoe" was awarded special prize for best bird in a recent exhibition, also that it was shown in A.O.V. British Soft Billed class and awarded first prize. Now is the "Hoopoe" a British bird, or is it on the list of the British Bird and Mule Club? I am under the impression it is a foreign bird. I should be pleased if any of your readers could inform me of same.

W. A. COOKE (Hon. Sec.).

A COCKNEY HOLIDAY IN CUMBERLAND.

SIR,—It has again been my pleasure to spend my holidays on the west coast of Cumberland (Workington), and a splendid change it has been from London. You can look away westward to a vast expanse of sea, and if the sky is clear, you can at points see the mountain-sides, with their little white-washed cottages, over the Solway Firth in Bonnie Scotland. Away to the south-west you can see the Isle of Man from end to end, and may perhaps get a glimpse of Ireland, while looking east, you can see the Cumberland mountains, or fells. A friend with me pointed out Skiddaw, Thirlmere, and Helvellyn. Now this year it was my intention to alter my programme slightly, so before leaving London I took down from my bookcase CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, and turning through its pages I found the addresses of half-a-dozen canary fanciers who reside in the Wokington district, and subsequently called upon them. I found them all true fanciers and ever ready to shake a brother fancier by the hand. Some of them had a very poor season in breeding, but quality was very good. One of the pleasures of my trip was to visit Mr. Robertson, of Belgian fame, at Harrington. The distance I had got to travel was about three miles, and I have not forgotten that journey yet. Some of the hills were so steep it made one wonder if we should succeed in reaching our goal, but at last we arrived there and found friend Robertson at home. As soon as I told him I was a fancier I was welcome, and I was asked into his bird room. I wish the readers of "C.B." could see that room; I have been in many rooms, but never in one like that, everything spick and span. On the mantel-shelf, under a glass case, were cups and medals, by the side of this was a shelf full of books, all touching on birdy matters, also a couch, which denoted to me that it was a pleasure for him to sit and watch the birds in the cages round the room. He had not bred a large quantity of young ones, but I am sure we shall hear of them before the season is out, for he had some good ones there. He ran several into show-cages for me to look at, pointing out the various points, good and bad, of a Belgian. I was also shown the cock bird which was depicted on the front page of CAGE BIRDS a short time ago, a noted winner. On looking at my watch I was surprised how quickly the time had flown away, so I shook hands with Mr. Robertson, each wishing the other a successful show season. I also visited Mr. Wilson, and found him amongst his birds; and oh, what a grand sight it was to see them—quite a show in themselves. Mr. Wilson has Norwich and Borders. I was shown many gems of the first water, which no doubt we shall hear of on the bench, especially a grand buff cock, which I liked much. I also visited Mr. Poole, and we were soon amongst his birds, which consist of Borders and Scotch Fancies; a very nice lot. Mr. Lewthwaite was also at home, and on looking through his stock you could pick out some grand ones. A nice Mule was also to be seen in his room. Mr. Furniss and partner have a nice lot of birds in their room consisting of Norwich, Cinnamons, Mules, and British, and no doubt some of them will be on the benches ere long. Linnets and Goldies are well known to them; they pointed out to me the various haunts of these birds on our ramble over the country roads. I also went in Mr. Charnock's room; he has some good Norwich and Borders. In the Norwich we could pick out several useful stock birds. I noticed this fancier believed in green blood in the breeding-room. I'm sure the memory of my visits will long remain with me, and that we may have the pleasure of meeting again is my wish. I also in my daily rambles saw many wild birds. The various Sea-gulls on the shore and in the fields, and I wondered how many different kinds there are. I also saw the Stonechat, and the lovely Kingfisher perched on a branch over the silvery river, no doubt waiting for some small fry to come along. Then, too, I found the wild seeds, such as shepherd's purse, rat's tails, etc., were plentiful, and I secured two large bundles to bring home with me. Now, sir, I am afraid I've allowed my mind and pen to run away with me, but I thought a few lines on my journeyings might refresh some poor town or city fanciers' memory of the time when he also rambled the country lanes.—W. REYNOLDS.

ILLUSTRATED IDEAS

Under this heading we shall illustrate weekly some idea useful to the bird-keeper. Readers are invited to send us particulars of any novel and practical appliance of use in our hobby, either in cage, bird-room or aviary, with a rough sketch of same where possible. Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

TO CIRCUMVENT SWEATING HENS.

Sent by G. Foreman, 5, Limes Terrace, High Street, Crayford, Kent.

Enclosed is a sketch of an arrangment I have successfully used this season in dealing with sweating hens. It is simply a piece of bird-cage wire lightly curved and fixed in the top of the nest box, the curved part being turned upwards during the day, and down at night, as shewn by dotted lines in the sketch. The wire keeps the hen up and enables the young to get their heads up round the hen, when she will feed them while sitting on them. The cock can also feed them while the hen is on. I have saved two nests this season in this way from a bad sweater. G. FOREMAN.

everywhere easily got at, and no corners for the food to lodge in and go sour. I use mine to hang on the wires inside the cage. They can be made any size to suit requirements by any fancier handy with the soldering iron; or any tinman will turn them out for a few coppers each.

Wearing the Trousers?

A Wren built her nest in a box on a New Jersey farm, and the occupants of the farmhouse saw, according to a daily contemporary, the mother teaching her young to sing. She sat in front of them and sang her whole song very distinctly. One of the young attempted to imitate her. After proceeding through a few notes its voice broke, and it lost the tune. The mother recommenced where the young one had failed, and went very distinctly through with the remainder. The young bird made a second attempt, commencing where it had ceased before, and continuing the song as long as it was able, and when the notes were again lost the mother began again where she had stopped and completed it.

SOME SOUTH AFRICAN EXHIBITION BIRDS.

By A. K. HAAGNER, F.Z.S., ETC.

[Reprinted from the South African Poultry Journal and Kennel Gazette.]

It is my privilege to contribute a short sketch on those South African Cage Birds which might aptly be termed "Show Birds," i.e., birds kept merely for the sake of their showy appearance and bright colours. Of these latter South Africa possesses a large and varied assortment, some of which are, however, scarcely adapted to a life of confinement.

The Weaver Birds.

I will take the Weaver birds (family Ploceidæ) as our first group. Amongst the Weavers proper (Ploceidæ), we have those superbly plumaged birds known as "Bishops." The Orange or Red Bishop (Pyromelana oryx) is too well known in its gaudy garb of vivid orange, scarlet, and black, to need any further description. The females of all the species are dull-coloured, brownish birds. The Red Bishop nests in colonies amongst the reed beds, attaching its neatly-woven structure of reed-strips to two or three reeds and lays three or four beautiful blue-green eggs. A colony of these Weavers, with some 40—100 males in full dress affords a lovely sight as the latter flit about in the sunshine with their feathers puffed out, giving to the scarlet a magnificent intensity of tone. These birds range from Northern Cape Colony northwards, being very common in parts of the Orange River Colony and Transvaal.

The Yellow or Cape (Pyromelana capensis) and the Taha or Golden (Pyromelana taha) are not so common and are much more "locally" distributed over the country. In the central Transvaal, the Golden Bishop is fairly common and nests among rank weeds, laying five or six white eggs speckled by blackish-brown dots. It is an exceedingly brightly-plumaged bird, in its fiery golden-yellow and pitch-black. All these birds change their gaudy attire in the winter to a sombre drabbish-brown—more in keeping with the changed landscape of our winter season. They live fairly well in an aviary, but are exceedingly pugnacious and quarrelsome birds.

The Popular Whydahs.

The next sub-family—the Viduinæ—also contains many universal favourites. First, of course, comes the well-known "Sakabula" or Kaffir King, is perhaps better known to a section of the populace as the "Long-tailed Fink" (Coliopasser procne). The male, in its showy attire of glossy black, orange epaulettes, and long, heavy tail of black feathers, is also too well-known to need any reference to it at length. There is another and rarer species, the smaller red-collared Whydah (Coliopasser ardens).

The next species often seen in captivity is the little Pin-tailed Whydah (Vidua principalis)—the Koningrooibekje of the Boers. In its dress of black and white, long slender tail, and pink bill, it is a common enough sight during our summer, as it jerkily flits over some bed of rushes or grassy hollow.

Two other rarer species are the Paradise Whydah (Vidua paradisea), and the Shaft-tailed Whydah (Vidua regia) both of which are seldom seen in captivity in South Africa.

The Beautiful Waxbills.

The third and last sub-family of the Ploceidæ—the Estrildina or Waxbills—is a large one and contains many species well known to aviculturists the world over. Perhaps the loveliest bird in South Africa—at least so far as delicate colouring is concerned—is a member of this group—I refer to the exquisitely tinted Violet-eared Waxbill (Estrilda granatina), so much sought after by aviculturists in Great Britain. It is chestnut brown above, with the forehead, eyebrow and rump bright blue, throat black, sides of the face, ear-coverts and cheeks lilac. Besides its exquisite coloration to recommend it, both male and female possess quite a sweet, pleasant little song.

The Blue-breasted Waxbill (Estrildina angolensis), the Yellow-breasted (E. clarkei), Siree (E. dufresnii) and the Black-faced (E. erythronota) all make charming cage birds and brighten up an aviary considerably. They build domed nests, usually of grass, placed on the ground or in a low bush, and lay four or five white eggs.

The little bar-breasted Weaver Finch (Ortygospiza polyzona)—the "Tink-Tinkie" of the Boers—those little birds that spring up from all around you as you walk through an old land, and remind one so very forcibly of tiny Quails, is also getting into favour as a cage bird. They are not brightly plumaged birds but are prettily marked with alternate bars of blackish, russet-brown and white on the breast.

A prettily tinted species is the red-faced Weaver Finch (Pytolia melba), but it is not a common bird in South Africa. Next comes the Ruddy Waxbills, or Fire Finches as they are called, from the red colour predominating in their plumage. Birds of small size and sprightly ways, with a peculiar little tinkling song all their own, they are a very favourite cage bird. But my own experience of them in an aviary was not a happy one—they seemed very fragile, and refused to become hardened to captivity like most other Waxbills do. Yet I have heard of many cases amongst friends who have very successfully kept them.

My Experiences with the Yorkshire Canary.

By R. P. BROOME.

A Lecture delivered before the members of the Greenwich and Deptford C.B.S.

The above was the title of a lecture given by Mr. R. P. Broome, late hon. soc. of the Southern Yorkshire Canary Club, before a goodly muster of friends and members of the above-named C.B.S. The lecturer dwelt at some length on different theories he had practised and seen practised by older fanciers than himself. The debate which followed was mostly confined between Mr. Crisp and the lecturer, and a few knotty problems were discussed to the great advantage of the members present.

In opening, Mr Broome said: It is with somewhat mingled feelings that I appear before you this evening to give you a few remarks on my experiences with Yorkshire Canaries. I have only been breeding Yorkshire's this last three years, therefore my experiences are for the most part akin to any other fancier as regards the actual breeding and rearing of the birds. What I propose this evening is to advance before you a few theories appertaining to the Yorkshire Fancy, theories that have been proved by myself, and also in a good many cases by older fanciers than myself. The old style fancier is fast dying out and there are to-day, taking his place, a class of enthusiasts, who I may say without in the slightest degree wishing to be disrespectful, is of a more intelligent stamp.

BREEDING FOR EXHIBITION.

My remarks will to-night lean towards the fancier who breeds for exhibition purposes, and as no doubt there are here present this evening other than Yorkshire fanciers, I have tried to make my remarks as broad as possible. The breeding of the exhibition Yorkshire is one continual struggle between the breeder and Nature, or in other words—evolution versus reversion, and like all varieties descending from a common ancestor, reversion plays the strongest part. To be a successful breeder one must use their intelligence to the utmost degree, and I would advise any novice going in for showing to specialise on one variety, only he will find as he goes on that he has all he can do in these days of keen competition to keep pace with his fellow competitors, and the more varieties he keeps the greater becomes his task and the greater outlay is required in purchasing fresh stock from time to time. The Yorkshire, as most of you are aware, is a descendant of the common wild Canary, and is to my mind one of the finest pieces of man's handiwork. It has passed through the various shapes of evolution until to-day it stands as one of the, if not the, most popular varieties of Canary. The two cardinal points in breeding show Yorkshires are opportunity and ability. With these, of course, goes perseverance and application. To the fancier who in the first instance has the opportunity of purchasing first-class stock that has passed through the elementary stages of evolution, half the battle is won. Some fanciers are lucky in having the material placed in their hands already paired, and which with one or two seasons breeding will take them right up top. This has been proved in London this last season and in more than one instance.

LUCK PLAYS ITS PART.

Another fancier perhaps paying the same or more money than the lucky one, does not achieve the same success. Why? Simply because his birds are perhaps a step or so behind in the process of evolution. Probably the same care has not been exercised in pairing them up, but still he may have the right stamp of bird, and by persevering, in a year or so longer may be on terms with his more successful competitor. In a good many cases the fault lies with the novice himself; he will persist in exercising his own judgment when not qualified to do so, he buys birds from here, there, and everywhere, he mixes them up, and like everything that is mixed up it takes time to disentangle and straighten out. The result of all this is that he often unknowingly puts two birds together that have been bred in opposite ways. Some of these novices won't be told. They know all about it. They practice their own theories often with ill success, and when they see fanciers of no longer standing than themselves, and with no better opportunities, getting on and reaping honours on the show bench, they become dissatisfied and often throw the fancy up in disgust. There is certainly one thing one must have to be successful, and this the right stamp of bird. No man has a room full of ideal birds; all birds have faults, and here is another trap the novice often falls into. He has good birds, but perhaps a few may have what I term technical faults, and most fanciers have their failing in this direction; to the novice the fault is often a horror, a bird is a little bit flat on the head, open in chest, a bit hookey.

KEENESS DESIRABLE.

Every time he sees the bird he takes a bigger dislike to it and finally sells it at a reduced figure than what he paid for it; sells it to a fancier who pairs it to just the right sort of mate, and who breeds a good young one or two off it. The seller, in his heart, was glad in the first place to foist it off on to the first comer, but now would like it back again at double the price realised, and this not only causes dissatisfaction, but often leads to a misunderstanding between the fanciers.

Fanciers to be successful should display the same keenness in their hobby as they do in their work, without of course allowing the one to interfere with the other. It is of no use thinking that in a year or so one will breed with a profit. Every good bird should be reserved and kept. Novices do not, as a rule, breed a superabundance of good birds the first few years.

THE REAL THING.

I come now to the most important part of my paper, and that is the birds themselves. I recommend every fancier to get the best he can procure or that his means will allow. By the best I mean the most typical, and by that of course what is usually termed show birds. Can anyone tell me the difference between stock and show birds? In my mind there is very little, if any. Is it feasible, is it likely, that a fancier having a good bird he has won with, allowing that bird to run over a breeding season without trying to get a decent youngster or two off it? If he only takes one nest off it, it becomes a stock bird at once, it has been used for the production of young. We are told by certain glib writers in the Press that stock birds are not show birds. That like does not produce like. Of course there are some birds that are no use for the bench but which are excellent stud birds; they may be a little heavy in build, or carry a slight excess of feather, but as a rule, and a general rule, a good show bird makes a good stock bird; of course, like any other bird, care must be taken to select a suitable partner for it. They say like does not produce like. All I ask is, what does it produce? One may match up a pair of barn door fowls in that case with the expectation of producing exhibition Yorkshires. It is all a question of degree. You would not expect all prize winners from prize winners. As I have mentioned previously, where evolution is taking place reversion is also, and nearly always in a greater degree, which accounts for the number of wasters bred, and which, I think, bears out my statement, the more perfect the parents the better the young ones from them, and the lesser proportion of wasters. It is also a question of average. Anyone can put up thirty or forty pairs of birds and may breed twenty good ones. To which is the greater credit due, to the man who puts up half the number of pairs and breeds as many good ones, or a man who puts up double the number with no better result? The question answers itself.

EVILS OF OVERLOADING.

One has by careful selection, studying the theory of evolution and the recurrence of eventualities which arise from time to time in different studs, found it unnecessary to put up a large number of birds to get a certain average, whereas another fancier has to keep putting up more pairs each year to keep pace with his fellow competitors. In time his birds become a burden to him and he throws up the fancy in disgust. There is too much sugar-coat pill business in the fancy to-day. The young novice when he sends away for a pair of birds, often shows his ignorance at once in writing his request, and this is often taken advantage of to the detriment of the fancy at large.

STRONG WORDS AND HARD KNOCKS.

Some there are who stand up and fire off a lecture which is printed in the Press. They say that an ideal stock bird is an ideal show bird. A little later they say, go to an experienced breeder, a man who breeds his winners, and send for a pair of stock birds. Don't ask for show birds, have stock birds. They so word their lecture that one reading between the lines can see the speaker is referring to himself. A little later on he brings in the like not producing the like bogey. Often he has an advertisement running concurrently in another part of the paper. The novice living apart from his fellow fanciers swallows the bait, having no one to advise him otherwise, and sends for a pair of birds price, perhaps, 50s., which, being a working man, he has had to scrape together in the best way he can. They come with a mile of pedigree on paper, he parts with his money, and is often landed with a pair of birds no more capable of breeding a winner than the fowls I previously mentioned. There are fanciers, genuine fanciers, who deal fair. I have been dealt fair with, and have been had. I should not say had, the better term to use would be valuation. It is simply the seller's valuation against the buyer's. The seller values them at so much, and the buyer so much. This is where ability steps in. Buy on sight. Never mind the pedigree. Educate yourself. Get to learn the right sort of bird as quickly as possible and so try to avoid these booby traps. It has cost me more, or as much, to get about at different shows, lectures, etc., as my birds and appliances, and I consider the money well spent. If I had my time over again I should adopt the same proceedure.

Familiar Foreign Cage Birds for Beginners.

By FRANK FINN, B.A., F.Z.S., M.B.O.U.

Since I began to write this series of articles, I find there is already a work in existence, entitled "Foreign Birds for Amateur Aviaries" by Dr. W. T. Greene. It was published a good many years ago, and I have not seen it; but this is why I have this week changed the title of the present series. Of course, I did not know the first one had been thus utilised, or I should not have used it.

Most foreign birds which come over here are, on the whole, easy to feed; only one "soft-bill"—the Pekin Robin—is really abundant in the trade, and of the Finches the majority are more or less grass birds, finding their sustenance among the flourishing grasses of the Tropics. Hence the millet and canary seed with which they are supplied in captivity are really natural foods, which may explain to some extent why foreign Finches do so well in captivity. The very tiny birds mostly prefer millet, and, above all, they like to have it in the ear, the pleasure of picking it out being a great attraction.

Care should therefore be taken to supply as much of this natural food as possible; to keep it clean it is best to hang a bunch of it up, if in an indoor cage as much in the centre as possible to avoid scattering of husks and consequent domestic disturbance.

THE IMPORTANCE OF GREEN FOOD.

At the same time the birds do not live in the Tropics any more than here on dry seed alone, or even get much of it, for that matter; green grass seed and shoots must form their usual food, with the addition of insects.

Now, it so happens that green grass seed is very easy to supply; the small wayside grass which springs up and multiplies wherever it is not sedulously weeded out, especially by pathways, being the very thing. It should be pulled up, if possible, and given to the birds roots and all; if infested with aphides it is, of course, all the better. In some cases it may be some time before the birds take to it—having lived so long on seed they have lost the taste for their more natural diet, but, nevertheless, one should persevere in offering it until it is accepted It has the great advantage over most green food in that it does not go bad, but simply dries up, and then is handy for nesting material. In addition, the other green foods usually supplied to Canaries should be offered—lettuce, dandelion, chickweed, plantain, etc. For Parrakeets I should advise hawthorn buds and flowers, which are devoured with much relish by our Woodpigeons, as anyone may see in the London parks.

It is also well to sow oats and wheat, and when these are in the green ear, to offer them to the birds.

Besides canary and millet, paddy rice is an important food for foreign cage-birds, and it will be eaten even by species as small as Mannikins; white oats form a good substitute for it. Hemp and niga may be eaten by some foreigners, but, on the whole, they are remarkably constant to their preference for the seeds of the grasses, whether wild or cultivated.

This grass-haunting habit, by the way, should be borne in mind in selecting pot-plants for aviary flights; pampas grass or the dwarf bamboos will be found excellent for the latter, or, indeed, any plant with upright stems, as well as those which provide an abundance of laterally-projecting shoots.

To return to the subject of food previously dealt with, a good many hardy birds, such as Budgerigars, Javas, Mannikins, etc., will do well constantly on the seeds and green-foods indicated; but even these often need some assistance if they try to breed, and for many birds a certain amount of soft food is highly beneficial, if they can be got to eat it.

SUITABLE SOFT FOOD.

It may be taken for granted, that hardly any of the birds we get are purely vegetarian—not even Pigeons and Parrakeets—so that a little animalized soft food ought not to hurt anything. With seed-eaters, however, the difficulty is often to get them to eat soft food at all; a good plan to introduce it to their notice, is to mix their seed, or some chopped seeding grass with it, in the hopes that this will cultivate their taste.

Egg-food seems to suit foreign birds well, but it must be properly made; the hard-boiled egg should be passed through a fine sieve, or a piece of perforated zinc, and then well mixed up with crumbled biscuit. If dried flies and ants' eggs are available (they are not always easy to get in local shops) they should be added. People who are afraid of egg should use partridge meal, but I have found the old-fashioned food so satisfactory, that I prefer to stick to it. As a change from egg, bread-and-milk, made from stale bread and boiled milk, and not too sloppy, may be given.

Soft food is almost a necessity with Pekin Robins, but only a little need be given to the hard-billed birds, and this especially when newly-imported, breeding, or moulting, and in winter in outdoor aviaries.

THE SUPPLY OF LIVE FOOD.

No opportunity of supplying birds with insects should be lost; fresh ants' eggs are splendid for them, so are small well-scoured gentles and small meal worms. I am speaking especially of the Finches. A plan often recommended for providing insects for animals which eat of them, is that of making sweepings with a butterfly net among rough herbage, and turning loose the captures in the abode of their destined consumers. Spiders are likely to prove special favourites.

To get Finches on to food they are not used to, it is a good plan to keep a Pekin Robin, a Canary, or some such small harmless bird used to soft food along with them, so as to give them an example to follow. If the tutor is inclined to be too greedy, it may be shut off by a slide, and only given a jar of the tit-bits offered to the others in bulk.

I don't want to give beginners the idea that all foreigners must always have something besides seed—the Pekin being the only abundantly imported foreign softbill—but they are all the better for extras, just as Mr. Weston is often telling us about British Finches.

DRY FOOD FOR PEKINS.

As a matter of fact, Pekins themselves can be kept some time on dry food, though I do not advise this, especially for newly-imported specimens. I have known an unfortunate example kept for six months on ordinary packet seed, with a bit of egg and fruit about once a week, but I was not surprised to hear of its death. But plenty of Pekin Robins are brought to Calcutta from China on shelled millet and dried flies only, this being the usual food for softbills in that direction apparently.

The few Himalayan consignments that came down in my time were also, like most other Himalayan softbills, fed on the journey on raw rice—not paddy, but ordinary cooking rice. This I find is taken readily, and digested satisfactorily by Pekins over here, so that, what with this and dried flies, no one need be deterred from keeping Pekins if he is not able to give soft food every day, though as implied above, I don't recommend dispensing with it altogether, or even for long together.

FRUIT FOR FOREIGNERS.

Pekins will eat almost any soft fruit, and should have it regularly, and all foreigners should be encouraged to eat this wholesome article of food if they will do so. Of course, most Parrakeets will "make no bones" about it, but grass-feeding Parrakeets and Finches of similar tastes are not very likely to take to it. However, it is not so very long since a lady reader told us in CAGE BIRDS, how she had succeeded with the undoubtedly delicate Pintailed Nonpareils by giving them fruit, which they took well, so the experiment is always worth making.

In trying it, do not confine yourself to foreign fruit, such as orange and banana, which foreign birds don't necessarily see every day, but experiment with our English fruit, and especially with such berries as blackberry, privet, elder, and hawthorn, which our wild birds eat; these are quite as likely to win approval.

GRIT, CUTTLEFISH-BONE, ETC.

Cuttlefish bone is a most useful article for foreign birds; hardbills at any rate gnaw it with great satisfaction, procuring lime and keeping their bills in order at the same time. It should be securely fastened up, and put where it cannot be soiled by droppings.

Grit should not be forgotten; if the floor be sanded as usual the matter is simple, but if turf, or sawdust, be put down, a pinch or two must of course be given as an extra. There is sometimes danger in giving grit in unlimited quantities to birds which have been long without it, so that if they are observed to eat it very greedily, they should be got on to it by degrees. It is a curious fact, that, unnatural as the practice of withholding it is, birds will live long and look well without it; in the East it is never given except incidentally with sand to Larks and Partridges.

Rock salt is eaten by some foreign birds. It is possible, too, that earth may be beneficial to some species; I have heard of the Blue-winged Siva eating it in captivity, and have seen a Bulbul do it in India, while Bechstein says our Yellowhammer does so.

Wild Plants for Cage Birds.

Weeds and Seeds of the Field and Wayside described.

By R. MORSE.

With Footnotes, etc., by G. E. Weston.

It is a generally known fact amongst bird-lovers that many wild flowers of our country have seeds which form a large part of the food of our native birds. But although the seeds are easy to obtain when the birds have their liberty, this, of course, is not the case when they are kept in cages. The object of the following series of articles is, therefore, to describe the plants which have seeds (and in some cases leaves, etc., also) which are suitable for the diet of our feathered pets. It is hoped that after reading this series many bird-keepers will be enabled to take a "ramble" through fields and lanes and obtain some "dainty morsels" for their caged friends at home; it is certain they will be appreciated as a pleasant change from a monotonous diet of canary or similar dry seed. Further, many of our wild plants possess very valuable medicinal properties, and are, as is well known, largely used in compounding many of our most beneficial medicines.

Two Sprays of Chickweed.
Printed direct from nature, and showing flower-heads, shape of leaves, and seeds falling from bursting pods.

Without wasting more of the reader's time with introductory remarks, I will proceed to give descriptions of a few of our commonest suitable wild plants. When these descriptions have been carefully studied, it is the confident hope of the writer that little difficulty will be experienced by the bird-keeper in recognising the common and useful plants of our hedgerows and waysides.

Common Chickweed (Stellaria media)

Chickweed is an exceedingly common weed, and may be found in bloom almost the whole year round. It grows generally in waste places, in fields, and as a weed in gardens. There are several other common plants known to country-folk as "chickweed," but the following description will enable the species named above to be identified.

The common chickweed has egg-shaped leaves, which are destitute of hairs. The stems, however, which are weak and brittle, have alternate lines of hairs between each pair of leaves. This is one of the most useful points to note when trying to identify this species. The flowers are very small, white in colour, and are made up of five petals (flower leaves), which are so deeply cut up as to lend the appearance of there being ten.

As this plant is generally in bloom in nearly every month of the year, it follows naturally that its seed is nearly always obtainable, as are also its leaves and its tender young shoots. These are all valuable food for various cage-birds. The seeds will be eaten with great relish and enjoyment by such seed-eating and part seed-eating birds as Siskins, Bullfinches, Linnets, Goldfinches, Chaffinches, Skylarks, and Wood-Larks, and, of course, a large number of others.

The young leaves and shoots form a very pleasant occasional change from such dry foods as seeds; moreover, they contain useful medicinal properties, and were at one time used both externally and internally for inflamation, etc.

Chickweed is recognised as one of the very best and safest of green foods by practically all keepers of birds, whether Canary, British, or Foreign. In its seeding stage it is particularly valuable. Almost all hens will feed their young freely upon it. Care should be taken never to gather it from the sides of dusty lanes, etc (i.e., covered with road dust). This caution, indeed, applies to all the wild weeds.

G.E.W.

Leaf of Dandelion.

Common Dandelion (Taraxacum officinale.)

Dandelion is another very plentiful wild plant, being almost, if not quite, as abundant as the common chickweed just described. There are large numbers of plants with yellow flowers somewhat similar to those of the dandelion, and which are commonly called by the latter name by those who are ignorant of Botany. The plant in question, however, is not at all difficult to identify. Dandelion has no leaves on its stems (as have several similar species), but they all grow from the very base of the plant—quite flat on the ground in many cases.

(1) Single floret from head of Dandelion, showing fruit (or seed) at base.
(2) Developed seed.
(3) Single floret from head of Thistle, showing fruit (or seed) at base.
(4) Developed seed.

The flower-stalks are hollow, and when they are broken a milky juice, or sap, flows out freely. The flower-heads are placed one only on each stalk—this is another feature which will help to identify this particular plant. The leaves and stalks are practically free from hairs, the latter (stalks) being quite smooth and glossy.

Sow (or Milk) Thistle.
NOTE.—This is not the true Milk Thistle, which is not an indigenous species.

The heads, when the seed is ripe, become globular masses of silky hairs, which children love to call "One o'clocks" or "What's o'clocks." At the base of these hairs the seeds will be found, and they may be easily gathered for our cage-birds' diet. Most seed-eating birds will always be delighted with a meal of dandelion-seed.

The leaves and tender shoots of this plant also are valuable "green-food." There is a long, thick blackish root. Various parts of the Dandelion have for many years been used remedially for diseases of the liver and kidneys.

Dandelion is best known as a "conditioner" of birds for breeding purposes. Nothing is more valuable for bringing one's breeding stock up to the necessary high pitch of condition. It is relished by nearly all the seed-eaters, and especially by Goldfinches and other Muling Finches. It appears to exercise a clearing and toning effect on the system. Dandelion juice (taraxacum), as sold by chemists, is an invaluable medicine in cases of illness due to overfeeding on too-stimulating seeds or food, and in liver, kidney, and other attendant disorders.—G.E.W.

Spear Plume-Thistle.

THE THISTLES.

The thistles are probably as much utilised and as well-known by the bird-keeper as is dandelion. Most seed-eaters keenly appreciate a head full of ripe seed—Goldfinches and Siskins especially so. Heads containing maggots should never be overlooked—personally I consider them, during the moult, the most valuable of all. Rotting, decayed heads should never be passed by without examination; generally they are full of fat, juicy grubs, grand things for birds. Sow thistle has a particular value of its own, inasmuch as it is commonly to be found simply smothered with "blight" (or green fly), and over a supply of it in this condition, one's birds simply go "mad with delight." A supply of newly-gathered thistle seed or thistle heads should be laid in every autumn.—G.E.W.

The Sow Thistle (Sonchus oleraceus.)

Thistle-seeds form a large part of the diet of many of our wild birds, and are well worth the small amount of trouble needed to gather them.

Perhaps one of the best-known species is the Common Sow Thistle, which is a favourite food for rabbits. It grows in waste places, and as a weed in many gardens, and is sometimes called the Milk Thistle, as it has a milky juice.

It grows to a height of about 2ft. to 3ft., and has a hollow stem, prickly leaves and yellow flowers. The leaves, however, are soft, and can be easily handled without pricking the fingers, which is not usually the case with the other thistles. The whole plant is generally free from hairs.

When the seeds are ripe, roundish silky masses of hairs appear, and these somewhat resemble those of the dandelion, but are usually smaller. These seeds are favourites with a great number of birds, which devour them eagerly.

The Spear Plume-Thistle (Cnicus lanceolatus).

Another valuable and also very common species of thistle is the Spear Plume-Thistle. This is abundant in most hedges and waste places, and may be found in bloom from July to October. It grows to a height of from 2ft. to 5ft., and its stem is what is called by botanists, "winged;" that is, it is covered with little leafy prickles, instead of being smooth, as in many cases. The leaves have several lance-shaped segments, the end one being the largest, and ending in a long, stiff, spine—whence the name Spear Thistle, which name is sometimes given to it.

The flower-heads are placed generally one, but sometimes two or three together, at the end of the flower-stalks. They are somewhat egg-shaped, dull purple in colour, and usually measure about one inch across.

As the Spear Plume-Thistle produces large numbers of flowers, and is itself very plentiful, no one who is the proud possessor of some Finches should neglect to gather a supply of the seeds of this plant, which will be eaten with great relish.

WILD BIRD NOTES AND QUERIES.

A Note on the Knot.

One sometimes wonders how birds first acquired their names. Some of them which are really descriptive of the birds, we can, of course, easily understand, but a name like the Knot is quite a different matter, for there is nothing in the appearance of this wader to account for it. An old book which I happened to peep into the other day, says the bird was a favourite dish of Canute, King of England, and that the name is derived from the monarch, Knute or Knout, as he was called, which, in process of time, has been changed to Knot. These birds were formerly very plentiful in the fens, and were taken in nets upon the decoys; they were fattened in the same way as the Ruffs, some fenmen having a great reputation as fatteners.—EDMUND WINTER (Weaste).

A Flaw in the Law.

With the month of August Wildfowl shooting commences. For some unknown reason, the law fails to protect the birds of the seashore and marshes when most needed. Many of the Wildfowl killed at this period are nothing more than half-grown birds. These should at least have another month in which to mature. This early killing of the birds is sport in which many keen sportsmen omit to take a part. They are fonder of the early morning ramble along the foreshore, or across the breezy marshes later on. Gun on arm, they enjoy the freshness of the air. The stillness and solitude appeal more to them, than the slaughter of many birds. There is a charm about these early rambles that one never forgets. The weird cry of the curlew and wail of the Plover are sounds peculiar to such places, and in fancy one often hears them; memory conjuring up some pleasing episode of past experiences.

Birds Among the Corn.

The country side is beautiful just now with the fields of waving corn. These will soon be taken in hand by the reapers and reaping machines and the aspect will be entirely changed.

Flocks of Sparrows and Finches infest the standing corn clinging to the stalks, and playing havoc with the golden grain. If one watches them through a good glass, one can see how destructive they are. To secure a single grain they knock out many others. They never descend to feed on the ground, but scramble from plant to plant; for taking wing alight on another part of the field. When some score or so of these birds descend in a body, they break down the ears, these are caught irregularly by the reaper, and scattered or broken off. The quantity of grain wasted in a field in this manner, and during the harvesting operations, must be considerable. All during the winter, flocks of wild birds are able to feed upon the stubble, so that although the corn is not actually wasted, it is loss to the farmer. He could very well spare a few of our smaller wild birds.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four week's trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us, and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard.

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor for the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers. In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION. If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words, MINIMUM Fourpence. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

McKeand, Cage Manufacturer, Castle Douglas.

I DON'T ASK

anyone to purchase a single thing from me unless they have it on trial, and see what they are getting for their money, and for that reason I send everything on approval, either on receipt of cash or "Cage Birds" deposit system, and money is refunded in full if perfect satisfaction not given. Clap nets, made from real flax thread, ¾in. mesh, 3yds. long, 4ft. deep, 4 pair, 4yds. 5/-; 5yds. 6/-; 6yds. 7/-; 7yds. 8/-; 8yds. 9/-; 9yds. 10/-; 10yds. 11/- per pair, all 4ft. deep, and fitted complete with pure hemp lines, beech stave poles, ash pegs, and all accessories, ready for immediate work; hat folding sparrow nets, fitted on 19ft. bamboo poles, 6/6 pair; self-acting spring net traps, 18in. long, 9d. each; 24in., 1/- each. These traps are by far the largest and best traps on market, will catch and hold uninjured any bird from a Wren to a Rook; can be set anywhere by a child, and cannot get out of order; nearly 2,000 sold last season. Single trap cages 6d. each, 4/6 doz.; double ditto, 10d. and 1/- each; 7/6 and 9/- dozen; treble ditto, 1/3 each; 12/- dozen; all have separate compartment for call bird. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cage, works automatically, 1/6 each; real Japanese Bird Lime, absolutely strongest made, guaranteed to hold birds even in the rain, and only lime to stand all weathers, ½lb., 10d.; 1lb., 1/6; sample, 3d.; all post free; loose netting for all kinds bird nets, real Irish Thread, ¼in. mesh, 7ft. deep 2d. yd.; 9 ft. deep, 4d. yd.; 12 ft. deep, 5d. yd., post free. This netting must not be confused with the thick American cotton netting now being sold as bird netting; mine is exceedingly fine, but very strong, and will not show on ground. Pure hemp pull lines, 65yds. long, strong as boat lines, 1/4 each post free. Everything required by catchers in stock; please send stamp for full list and sample of netting. Round or square topped call cages, 2d. each; 2/6 doz.; 27/- gross. Linnet or Goldfinch cages, 6d. each, 4/6 doz. Full trade list of sizes, and prices of cages, one stamp. Following received to-day:—"Cross-st., Cheslyn, Hay, Aug. 18th.—Sir,—Please send 4yds. loose nettiog; it is very cheap; no one would believe how good and strong it is for the money, but I know, as I had some last year, and it is as good as ever it was. —Yours, Charles Perks." "33, Harboro' Park, Rushden.—Sir,—Please send 18yds. netting. The netting I had from you two years ago is as good as ever.—Yours, J. Robinson." "Bright View, Old Rattray, nr. Blairgowrie, Aug. 19th.—Sir,—Please send 1lb. of your bird lime. I got some of your lime last year, and it is the best I ever used for standing all weathers. I caught Crows and Jackdaws on it." Scores of similar letters constantly arriving and open to inspection. All my catching appliances are made by men who are not only practical net makers, but bird catchers as well, and so know from actual experience exactly what is required for the purpose. All leading catchers swear by my nets, and will use no others. I cordially invite comparison with any others on the market, and my prices defy competition. One trial is all I ask, and result will please me.

BOOKS.

By W. GEO. CRESWELL, M.D., L.R.C.P., F.Z.S.

Price 1/1, post free from CAGE BIRDS Offices,

154, FLEET STREET, LONDON, E.C.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

LANCET: "This little book will be welcomed by all lovers of birds, whether ornithologists, aviculturists, or the owners of a single pet songster. The author deals with his subject in a thoroughly practical and scientific manner, and the results of his experiments prove the fallacy of some rule-of-thumb theories. . . . The book is well illustrated."

COUNTRY LIFE: " . . . a surprising amount of really valuable advice for all who keep small birds, whether in cages or aviaries. . . . Those who approach the subject with an open mind must admit the cogency of the author's arguments; and these, backed by a very wide experience at first hand, will prove hard nuts to crack for many of the champions of the 'good old methods.' . . . We venture to think that his experience will pave the way for a revolution in the methods of bird keeping in the near future."
